KING GEORGE II OF GREECE DIES SUDDENLY

'No Decision' After Showdown Meeting

Marshall Had Sought to Break Parley Deadlock

Major German Economic Problems Chief Obstacle

Moscow, April 1 (AP)—The Foreign Ministers Council discussed German reparations and the level of German industry for more than three hours today and at the end of the session announced they had reached "no decision."

This was to have been a showdown meeting expected to indicate possibilities of a German settlement of current problems at Moscow. The fact that no decision was reached was considered by some diplomats as possibly indicating little or no progress towards breaking the deadlock.

State Secretary Marshall was authoritatively reported to have gone into the meeting today determined to find out whether Russia would negotiate for a generally acceptable arrangement on her reparations demands or whether her demands were entirely firm as presented.

Consider Other Questions

In the absence of indications from Foreign Minister Molotov that a compromise could be arranged, Marshall was said to have decided prior to the meeting to urge that the council proceed with other questions because in his view the stalemate on major German economic problems would then be unbreakable.

The secrecy which surrounded today's meeting—each of the ministers took only three aides—made it impossible to tell immediately whether any progress had been made in the direction Marshall hoped.

If there were no progress then it was considered probable, by persons familiar with Marshall's plans, that the secretary would seek a meeting with Prime Minister Stalin in the immediate future to discuss the German question.

Huge Reparations Demand

Russia has demanded $10,000,000,000 in reparations from Germany over a 20-year period, some of it from current production.

This information concerning Marshall's intentions was made known by the highest authorities shortly before today's semi-private, informal Big Four sessions was to get under way.

A check of the various delegations indicated that all four ministers were going into the smaller session today with the intention of doing some plain-talking in a drastic effort to determine whether any basis for compromise exists in the deadlocked problem of unification.

This amounts to an agreement to have a showdown now on whether anything is going to be accomplished on current German problems, at the centre of which is reparations.

Responsible informants said that what Marshall wants, for one, is to "smoke out" the real Soviet position: is the demand for $10,000,000,000 in reparations the rockbottom Russian figure, or will they take less?

What Failure Would Mean

Failure of this effort would almost certainly mean that Germany would continue completely partitioned between east and west—"an economic poorhouse", State Secretary Marshall calls it—pending another meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers in the hope that the passage of time and the increasing seriousness of the issues might then lead to agreement.

It was evident from last night's session, however, that not all hope for solution here has vanished yet and it was presumably this flickering possibility which prompted the four Foreign Ministers to make today's session a small, intimate affair for down-to-earth deliberation.

The pattern was worked out in earlier conferences when James F. Byrnes was United States Secretary of State and sometimes proved successful in bringing real bargaining on points on which concessions can be made.

Four Persons In Hospital After Truck-Car Crash

Four people were rushed to Belleville General Hospital, three of them severely injured, shortly after ten o'clock Monday night, following a transport-car collision eight miles east of the city on Highway No. 2. The heavy Motorways transport turned over after the impact, caught fire and was destroyed by the flames. The car was badly wrecked.

The injured are, Elmer Valey, head, leg and hand injuries; William Valey, head, leg and hand injuries; Mrs. Lula Van Valkenberg, fractured ankle and wrist, and lacerations; all of Kingston and George Farmiloe, transport driver, of Ottawa. The quartet was brought to hospital by the ambulance of the Martin Funeral Home.

According to information from the scene of the accident, the eastbound Motorways transport driven by Farmiloe was in collision with the westbound automobile driven by William Valey, and owned by Mrs. Van Valkenberg. The Valeys and Mrs. Valkenberg were occupants of the wrecked car.

Flames from the blazing transport reached 25 feet in the air and were visible for a considerable distance. Wreckage of the car was strewn over the road. Traffic was completely tied up for some time. Provincial Police Constable Sam Ervine investigated the accident.

Winner of $100,000 Pays Visit to Pals

Toronto, April 1 — (CP) — Russell Long, who won $100,000 in a sweepstake last Saturday, chose April Fool's Day to go around and see his pals in the emergency section of the Consumers' Gas Company. No, he didn't think he'd be going back to work until later today, or tomorrow.

"We'll see what we can do," was his stock quip when workmates chaffed for a return of dimes allegedly borrowed "months ago."

BODY OF WOMAN FOUND IN RUINS OF HOME

Walkerton, April 1 (CP)—Body of Agnes McNaughton, 75, was found in the smouldering ruins of her home at Walkerton early today. Miss McNaughton lived alone but last night had been visited by her nephew, Victor McNaughton of Walkerton.

38,000 MINERS IN RUHR DEMAND MORE FOOD

Leave Pits, Parade In Dortmund, Hamborn And Duisburg Bnt No Incidents Reported

Essen, April 1. (AP)—Thirty-eight thousand miners left their jobs and paraded in Dortmund, Hamborn and Duisburg today in Ruhr demonstrations against what speakers called the "catastrophic" food shortage.

British officials said all returned to their work after the demonstrations, which were without incident.

At Dortmund, where 30,000 paraded in the streets, the miners adopted a seven-point resolution calling for the "immediate building of an effectual German government and parliament".

British officials estimated that 8,000 miners paraded, but said they later returned to work.

Workers at two mines in Dortmund who struck yesterday also went back to the pits, officials said.

British coal officials disclosed that the Ruhr coal output on Saturday—the first day of the scattered mine strikes—fell to more than 218,000 tons below the post-war production peak of 238,000 tons.

This announcement came on the of a meeting in Bochum of Union mine leaders, to decide whether to call a strike of all 170 Ruhr mines in protest over food shortages.

German police estimated that a total of 40,000 persons participated in the Duisberg and Hamborn hunger marches—the first in which the miners had participated.

BROTHERS ACQUITTED WEEP AS ELDER BROTHER SENTENCED

Edinburgh, April 1 (Reuters)—Two acquitted brothers wept in court as they heard an elder brother sentenced to 10 years' penal servitude following conviction of culpable homicide in the death of a man said to have been their mother's lover for 20 years.

Patrick Rodgers, 31—convicted—and John, 29, and James, 25—acquitted—had been charged with assaulting David Boggie with their fists and a bread-knife, inflicting injuries of which he died the following day.

John and James testified the trio had gone to ask Boggie to end his association with their mother. Boggie seized a knife and attacked them, they said, and in the scuffle he was hurt.

PLAN TO MERGE TOWN AND VILLAGE

Port Colborne, April 1 (CP)—A proposal to combine the town of Port Colborne and adjacent Humberstone Village to form a single community of 12,000 people at the south end of the Welland ship canal was approved last night by the councils of the two municipalities.

The two councils are to discuss the proposal with the Humberstone Township Council, as the extension would take in parts of the township. They will apply to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

Timmins, Ont., April 1 (CP)—Nine members of St. Mary's Hospital nursing staff of 24 resigned today following a disagreement with the hospital management over requested salary increases. The nurses had been trying to bring their $108 a month salaries in line with an alleged $140 scale prevalent elsewhere in the province. Their resignations are effective April 7.

Sister Mary Fidelis, Supervisor of Nurses, said yesterday a petition signed by 18 of the 24 nurses had been submitted a week ago asking for $1 a day more pay and had been met with a compromise offer of 50 cents a day or $15 a month.

Sister Fidelis admitted there had been disagreement about nurses salaries at the local hospital for some time. "We granted the nurses a $5 a month increase in September 1946," she said.

Stating that since then the hospital had asked for no raise in fees from the patients she termed the request for a $1 a day as unreasonable on the part of the nurses.

Asked what the general wage paid floor nurses was here compared to other hospitals she admitted it was lower but refused to state how much. "This is a private affair and in the interest of the profession I don't feel the details should be made public. There certainly is no strike," she said.

Meanwhile a check with three of the seven girls who walked out reveals that salaries paid here average $110 a month, compared to the $140 paid in other hospitals.

Substitute Charge May Be Laid Against MacLean

Hamilton, April 1 — (CP) — Withdrawal of the murder charge against 69-year-old Donald MacLean and substitution of a charge of accessory after the fact in the torso slaying of John Dick more than a year ago, loomed as a probability today with recall of the grand jury to consider a new indictment.

The usual noon-hour recess in MacLean's trial was also extended and in the interval, Walter J. Tuchtie, his counsel, said consideration would be given to "the manner in which the accused will plead."

Crown sources indicated that if a plea of guilty to a charge of being an accessory were presented, Mr. Justice A. M. LeBel might direct the jury hearing the murder count to return a "not guilty" verdict on evidence thus far presented.

Should MacLean plead not guilty, however, the petit jury hearing the murder charge probably would be dismissed after returning a "not guilty" verdict on that count. It would be necessary to empanel a new jury to hear evidence on the accessory charge.

Little new evidence was offered yesterday as other principals in the case came and went like actors in a drama answering their cues. For one, William Bohozuk, former boy friend of Mrs. Evelyn Dick, MacLean's daughter, his appearance meant his acquittal on one of the two murder charges which had held him in jail for more than a year.

Grinning and elated, the former foundry worker and amateur oarsman stepped from the box a free man intending to go back to his job after Mrs. Dick, already under a life sentence for manslaughter in the death of her baby, refused to testify against him in the murder of her husband. Bohozuk was acquitted of the baby murder charge Saturday.

As MacLean's trial began without a recess the gray-haired former Hamilton Street Railway employee listened intently. Sergeant C. Farrow of the Provincial Police told of finding a gun, shoes and bullets in MacLean's home.

LIBERAL ELECTED TO CARTIER SEAT IN BY-ELECTION

Replaces Communist Fred Rose Recently Sent to Prison on Espionage Charges

Montreal, April 1 (CP)— The tumult and violence of the by-election ended, constituents of Montreal-Cartier prepared today to send Liberal Maurice Hartt to Ottawa after four years of Labor-Progressive representation in the House of Commons.

The one seat held since 1943 by the Labor - Progressive group the reconstructed Communist party returned to the Liberals, when Michael Buhay ran 3,074 behind Mr. Hartt in an attempt to retain the vacancy created when jailed Fred Rose was unseated.

Official returns from 147 of 152 polls gave Mr. Hartt 9,493 votes. Paul Masse, anti-communist and autonomist candidate who, his opponents said, was supported by Premier Duplessis of Quebec, received 8,793 and Mr. Buhay had 6,419. Losing their deposits were Dave Rochon, independent liberal, with 11,286 O. L. Gingras independent with 135, and Louis Valiquette independent with 43.

Violence at one of Mr. Masse's committee rooms marred what otherwise was a surprisingly tranquil election day. An unidentified gang of from 20 to 40 men raided the rooms shortly before noon and in the fight that followed seven or eight bullets were fired and black jacks were wielded.

Police said two men required treatment, one for a cracked head and the other for a slight bullet wound on the thigh. Neither was injured seriously.

Claims Campaign of Slander

Rose was Cartier's representative from 1943 when he was elected in a by-election until last January when the Commons declared the seat vacant following rejection of appeals by the Polish-born plumber against his conviction and sentence to six years in penitentiary for serving as an agent for a Russian spy ring in Canada.

RUSSIANS SAID LEAVING DAIREN AND CHINCHOU

Tientsin, April 1 (AP) — The Catholic newspaper Social Welfare reported in an unconfirmed dispatch from Mukden, Manchuria, today that Russian troops were withdrawing south toward Port Arthur from Dairen and Chinchou.

The newspaper added, however, that 10,000 Russian troops remained in the area southwest of Chinchou, which is some 40 miles by rail north of Dairen.

CONFERENCE CANCELLED

Toronto, April 1 — (CP) — The third of Premier Drew's weekly press conferences was cancelled today with no other explanation than that the premier was busy.

Full-Dress Debate on Dominion - Provincial Affairs Looms in Legislature

Toronto, April 1 (CP)—A full-dress debate on Dominion-Provincial affairs loomed in the Ontario legislature today as the Provincial House pressed to clean up all existing business in preparation for an indefinite adjournment Thursday.

One phase of the drive to clear legislation from the order paper was an hour earlier opening at 2 p.m. yesterday, which will continue all this week. Another was the volume of business cleared in short order, the House voting last night a total of $56,794,729 in estimates of the departments of public works, health, municipal affairs, mines and provincial treasurer.

The debate on Dominion-Provincial relations is expected to arise from a motion presented by Premier Drew which read: "That this House is of the opinion that a strong federal system is the best form of government for Canada and approves the steps taken by the Ontario government to preserve that system and to protect the established rights, customs and education system of this province."

Highlights of yesterday's sitting included Premier Drew's charge of "political blackmail" in regard to a statement in parliament by Finance Minister Abbott last Friday; the Premier's announcement of a clothing drive for flood-harassed Britain; 23 bills given second reading and two votes, in one of which two Progressive Conservatives voted against the government.

In the first vote, on a Liberal amendment to the Liquor Licence Act, W. J. Stewart (Prog Con — Toronto Parkdale) and Harry M. Allen (Prog. Con.—Middlesex South) voted against the government when the amendment was defeated 45-21. Liberal, C.C.F. and Labor-Progressive members voted solidly for the amendment.

In the second vote, which would have given municipal councils the same right as individuals to oppose granting of liquor licences, the amendment was defeated 48-17 with Joseph Meinzinger (Lab.-Lb.—Waterloo North) voting with the government.

FARMERS WANT CANAL

Chatham, April 1 — (CP) — Farmers of Jeannette's Creek area will petition for a canal at the next session of the county council. The canal, to reach from a point below Chatham to Mitchel-is Bay, will lessen the danger of floods, which now cover the lowlands about Jeannette's Creek.

LAST MAN INDUCTED IN U.S. ARMY CANADIAN

New York, April 1 (CP)—The last man inducted into the United States army from New York before the selective service law went out of force at midnight last night was a volunteer from Winnipeg, Edwin G. Medinski.

Medinski volunteered for service along with his brother. Both gave as their next-of-kin Mrs. J. N. Medinski of Dundas, Ont.

C.N.R. AUDITING DIVIDES HOUSE; ADOPTS PRIORITY

Government Business Given Priority in The Commons Until April 28th

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, April 1 — (CP) — The Commons voted 106 to 20 last night to leave the auditing of the books of the Canadian National Railways in the hands of a private firm.

The division climaxed an unexpected debate which developed on a routine, annual government bill to appoint the auditing firm of George A. Touche and Co., Montreal and Toronto, to continue their audit of the railway's accounts.

The discussion was touched off by a government member, James Sinclair (L — Vancouver North), who argued that a more efficient job could be done at less expense to the Canadian people if the audit was handled by the Dominion's auditor-general — Watson Sellar.

Transport Minister Chevrier disagreed with the claim that there would be a saving but said he would sound out departmental officers on the possibility of the auditor-general handling the audit in 1948. This year's audit already had been started.

The vote was on an amendment, moved by A. M. Nicholson (CCF — Mackenzie), calling upon the House to express itself to be in favor of taking the audit out of private hands. Mr. Sinclair voted with the C. C. F. and Social Credit groups in supporting the amendment while the Progressive Conservatives voted with the Liberals.

Say Woman Collected Service Cheques of 3 Of Her 6 Husbands

Philadelphia, April 1 — (AP)— A 29- year-old New Bedford, Mass., woman was held in $1,000 bail today for Grand Jury action on charges she illegally collected $1,000 in servicemens' allotment cheques for three of her six husbands.

The woman, Mrs. Carra Donna, was given a hearing before United States Commissioner J. Norman Griffin yesterday.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said she divorced Chauncey Mauray, her first husband, and then was wed to Nicholas Carra Donna in Boston. Carro Donna, the agents contend, is still her legal husband.

Hubby No. 6, Paul N. Swartz, of Lehighton, Pa., an engineer and navy veteran, appeared at a hearing last Tuesday and told Griffin "I love her and I'm sticking by her."

Miniature Lend-lease Program Provides Pet Biddy With Coop

Brooklyn, N.Y., April 1 (CP)—Cleo, the one-year-old pet gray hen, will have a backyard chicken coop all her own within the specifications of the law—thanks to a miniature lend-lease program, sponsored by a good neighbor who will get the eggs.

Cleo, owned by Sam Kerschenbaum, 43-year-old motion picture operator, became the centre of a controversy March 12 when Kerschenbaum was brought into court charged with violating the New York sanitary code by keeping the chicken in his back yard without a Board of Health permit.

Kerschenbaum protested vehemently against the injustice of the action saying the hen, a pet of his young daughter Eileen, was housed on his own property. Last week the court gave him until yesterday to adopt one of three alternatives—get a permit, keep the chicken in the house or eat Cleo.

Yesterday Kerschenbaum disclosed before Magistrate James Fawcett the details of a plan designed to insure Cleo's survival. He had been unable to obtain a permit because his back yard, 17 feet long, lacked eight feet of the footage necessary to erect a chicken coop in city limits. Health regulations require that coops be erected at least 25 feet from the house.

Kerschenbaum told the magistrate: "I have lend-leased Cleo to my friend..who runs a little one-acre farm...not far from my home. Meanwhile my neighbor who owns the property to the rear of my yard has agreed to cede me eight feet of his yard so that I can build a coop for Cleo and get a permit."

Prince Paul Called To Throne After Brother's Demise

Death of Monarch Caused By Acute Heart Attack

By DIMITRI TRAVLOS

Athens, April 1 (AP)—King George II died unexpectedly today of a heart ailment at a critical period in his country's history, and his 45-year-old brother Prince Paul was called to the throne.

The 56-year-old king had been complaining recently of pain from angina pectoris, an ailment arising from a disease of the coronary arteries, former Premier George Papandreou said the monarch died at 2.30 p.m. (7.30 a.m. E.S.T.)

Prince Paul was to take the royal oath at 7.30 p.m. It was announced that the government and Paul later would issue messages to the people.

(Reuters News Agency said Prince Paul was proclaimed King during the afternoon.)

Six Months After Return

The death of the king came six months after his return to his throne from London after a plebiscite favoring the monarchy.

He died at a time when the explosive "Greek question" was being debated in the capitals of the world, and when his country's bloody guerrilla warfare was being investigated by a United Nations commission.

George took over the throne of Greece in 1922. When his father, Constantine, abdicated in 1917, George was barred from the throne because the Allies feared he had pro-German leanings. His brother, Alexander, became king. Alexander died from the bite of a pet monkey in 1920, and Constantine returned to the throne. But Greece again was beset by hard times and Constantine, in 1922, had to abdicate again. George succeeded him. Soon afterward he faced his first plebiscite, was defeated, and went into exile as Greece became republic. His excile lasted 13 years.

Recalled By Plebiscite

He was recalled by a plebiscite in 1935 after the Royalists staged a coup d'etat, and reigned but did not rule. The dictatorship of John Metaxas was in power.

The king went into exile again when Germany invaded his country in 1941, and he was last recalled by a plebiscite last September.

A Critical Period

The king died at the height of a critcal period in his country's history—at a time when a United Nations Inquiry Commission was in the Balkans studying Greek charges against her three neighbors—Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria.

The Greeks have charged her neighbors with encouraging bloody guerrilla warfare in the north and with having territorial ambitions directed against Macedonia and Thrace. Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania on the other hand, have charged that Greece's border troubles stemmed from suppressive tactics of the Royalist government.

The king was born July 20, 1890, son of King Constantine. He was of Russian, German and Danish blood.

2 Youths Arrested On Store Roof

Windsor, Ont., April 1 —(CP)—Two 17-year-old youths were arrested last night on the roof of a downtown clothing store as 10 detectives and constables converged on the building following a citizen's telephone tip.

One warning shot was fired as the surprised youths were taken into custody. Police said Douglas J. Ouellette and Clayton Rye both of Windsor, were charged with attempted breaking and entering.

So speedy was the police action that a constable, his gun drawn, ordered two detectives to halt before learning their identity.

George Darian said that from a window in his apartment he saw one youth climb to the roof of Dowlers, Ltd., on Ouellette Ave., and pull the second youth up after him. Then Darian called the police.

Detectives James McLaughlin and William Brand were in a patrol car less than a block from the store. A few seconds after receiving the radio alarm they were running up an alley behind the store. Constable E. H. Donnelly, approaching from the opposite direction, ordered them to stop.

"Turn off your flashlight and keep quiet," the detectives told him. "We're police, too." The detectives climbed to the roof. Meanwhile, several other officers converged on the building from other directions, one firing a warning shot. The youths were handcuffed and taken to headquarters.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 1 (CP)—Synopsis: Skies have become overcast over Southwestern Ontario this morning and light rain is falling in the vicinity of Toronto. The weather remains clear and cool over the rest of Ontario. A rain area over Michigan is moving slowly eastward into Ontario. Mild weather is expected throughout the province on Wednesday.

BODY OF DUNGANNON FARMER FOUND IN KINGSTON HARBOR

The body of Roy Jones, Dungannon farmer who has been missing for some time, was taken from the Kingston harbor at the foot of Queen Street on Monday afternoon. According to Coroner Dr. M. J. Morrison, who investigated the occurrence, the body had been in the water for some months. It was found floating in the water, by members of the crew of the tug Salvage Prince which was engaged in transferring lake and river steamers from the plant of the Canadian Shipbuilding and Engineering Company.

WILL OBSERVE 90th BIRTHDAY

Still enjoying good health, Israel Tripp, formerly of Tyendinaga, and later of Wellington will celebrate his 90th birthday on Saturday, April 5th. At present he is residing on R.R. No. 2, Consecon. Born in Tyendinaga, Mr. Tripp has spent most of his life in and about the village of Wellington. For some years he resided in Trenton where he followed the shoemaking trade.

Members of his family who will assist in the celebration are: Mrs. W. Lee Smith, with whom he resided a son, Daniel, of Wellington, a grandson, Albert, of Hillier; a great-grandson, Nelson, of this city; three brothers, William, Frankford; Isaac, Bloomfield and George of Buffalo, N.Y. Another guest will be a great-great-granddaughter, Lana. Mr. Tripp's first wife passed away in 1929 and the second in 1940.

PAIR OF MINIATURE DECOY DUCKS PRESENTED J. SHORTT

Mr. Joe Shortt was pleasantly surprised at the Belleville and District Fish and Game Association held in the Y. M. C. A. Monday night, when he was presented with a pair of miniature wooden decoy ducks, by the maker, Mr. Bob Andrews, a retired postman of this city and an enthusiastic member of the Association.

The ducks which represent a black and a whistler are of splendid workmanship, and will adorn the chairman's table at future meetings. Mr. Andrews makes his own decoy ducks with many years of experience behind him.

Mr. Shortt expressed his appreciation of the gifts before the large gathering present.

Rev. Noble Hatton Conducts Service

Rev. Noble Hatton, B. A., of Trinity United Church in Napanee, was the guest speaker at the first of the Holy Week services being held in Bridge St. United Church last evening.

The theme of Mr. Hatton's message was that the conflict found in personal, social and international life today has always been resolved through the dynamic leadership of an individual; and the message of the Lenten season points to the courageous and redemptive leadership which is offered to the world in Jesus Christ.

The Scripture reading was taken by Mrs. John Randle from the 9th chapter of the Book of Acts, verses one to seventeen.

Other services with out-of-town speakers, will be held during this week, climaxing in a joint service with other churches on the morning of Good Friday.

OBITUARY

ROBERT (MATT) CAMPBELL

Robert Mathieson (Matt) Campbell, 44 Strachan Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday evening after an illness of three weeks' duration.

Born in this city the late Mr. Campbell was in his 48th year and was a son of Mrs. Sarah Ann (Hale) Campbell and the late Albert (Bert) Campbell. All his life was passed in this city and his death has brought much regret to many friends.

During the First Great War Matt Campbell enlisted with the 155th Battalion at Belleville in 1915 and served overseas until 1918. Upon returning home he joined his late father in business and upon his death he continued to carry on the business of the Campbell Paint Shop on Coleman Street north. He was associated with Bridge Street United Church and was a member of the Veterans' Association.

Surviving him are his mother; one daughter, Miss Marion Elizabeth Campbell, at home; two sons, John Ashley Campbell and Kenneth Graham Campbell, both of Belleville; three sisters, Mrs. William (Evelyn) Corrigan, Pittsfield, Mass.; Mrs. George (Patricia) Hatch, Toronto, and Mrs. William (Bertha) Dennis, Belleville; one brother, Horace Campbell, Belleville.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made in this edition.

LATE MRS. C. KASTANIOTIS

The funeral of Mrs. Clara Kastaniotis, wife of Mr. Andrew Kastaniotis, was held Monday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. Vasal Demeroutes of the Greek Orthodox Church, Toronto.

JAMES HEALY
(Picton)

Picton, April 1 —(Special)— One of the oldest active hotel proprietors in Canada, Eugene James Healy, 91, died here Saturday evening from a heart attack. Since 1885 he had been interested in trotting horses and for many years his entries raced on the principal circuits in Canada and Northern United States. At time of death he owned an outstanding breeding mare, Widow Henley and colt. He was also a prominent apple and hops buyer.

Mr. Healy was born August 6, 1856, at Wolfe Island. In 1885 he purchased the Royal Hotel, Picton, which he has since owned. He was a member of the Prince Edward County Agricultural Board and its president for a number of years. He was a Roman Catholic and a Liberal. Surviving is one son, Fred Healy, Picton, two grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

New Accountant Joins Royal Bank Branch Staff Here

Mr. Walter C. Thompson, formerly of the Barton and Wentworth Streets branch, Hamilton, of the Royal Bank of Canada, has joined the staff of the Belleville branch. He succeeds Mr. E. Zeran here as accountant. Mr. Zeran was recently transferred in a managerial capacity to the Odessa and Sydenham branch of the bank.

Mr. Thompson has been associated with the Royal Bank for the past thirteen years, joining the service in Hamilton. Since that time he has worked in the Toronto and Kitchener branches, later going to the Barton-Wentworth branch as assistant accountant.

He is married and has one son. An all-round sports enthusiast, his favorite recreation is golfing and squash, but will have to forego the latter since no squash courts are available here. Mr. Thompson is a member of the United Church. He assumed his new duties a few days ago.

Council Votes By-law Contract To Purchase Parking Meters Binding and Legal on Members

Spirited Discussion Held Before Recommendation Before Council Defeated

The matter of parking meters again came up for spirited discussion by members of city council on Monday evening when at their regular meeting Alderman Chas. Hyde presented a recommendation asking that the by-law passed by council with respect to the purchase of 250 meters be declared invalid on the grounds that it was not prepared by the city solicitor.

In speaking to his recommendation Alderman Hyde asserted that the committee appointed to look into the parking meter matter had acted too hurriedly with result that a meter costing $20 more had been chosen, thus on the purchase of 250 meters over $5,000 had been lost to the city.

"The whole thing should be gone into more thoroughly," claimed the Alderman, "the bylaw was not prepared by the city solicitor and therefore I claim that it is invalid."

Here City Clerk Wilfred Holmes stated the by-law had not been prepared by the city solicitor. Alderman Allin then wanted to know who did prepare the by-law.

After lengthy discussion the above recommendation was defeated by a 8-7 vote with Alderman Hyde asking the yeas and nays. Favoring the recommendation to declare the by-law invalid were Aldermen Allin, Armstrong, Duffy, Hyde, Lattimer, Lazenby and Vanner. Opposing were Mayor Follwell, and Aldermen Butler, Chamberlain, Clarke, Follwell, Harvey, Tice and Wilbur.

In answer to Alderman Allin, Mayor Follwell admitted that it was possibly just as well that the parking meter question be reopened for discussion. However, he claimed council had voted in favor of the meters, meters which were far superior to any previously seen.

"I consider that parking meters will be an asset to this city; they will help parking and also will be a revenue producer. It is high time that some relief is given to the overburdened property taxpayer.

Continuing the Mayor pointed out that the meters were being put in on trial and on a commission basis. They actually would not cost the city tax-payer anything. He suggested that the meters be given a fair trial on a year's basis.

"It is not a question of the purchase of the meters," returned Alderman Hyde, "but the fact that they are of American make."

By-Law, Contract Binding.

Alderman Butler here read a communication from City Solicitor A. B. Collins advising that the meter by-law was in order and perfectly valid and binding.

Alderman Chamberlain, as member of the committee appointed to look into the meter question, stated that only three meters had been seen by the committee and they chose the one which appeared the best.

"I cannot understand Alderman Chamberlain when he says he did not see the Mico meter," returned Alderman Allin. The committee should have asked to see all makes of meters. Here we are paying an additional $5,600 because of the extra cost of the Karpark meters."

Put Through Hurriedly, Claim.

"I say the meter question was put through council too hurriedly, the same as the airport question. It was put through by the 'secret nine' who elected the committee chairmen. The council is the laughing stock of the entire city. We do something one night and the next meeting turn around and do something else. Here we have the salesman for Karpark meters drawing up the by-law with the city solicitor knowing nothing about it."

"I am asking Alderman Allin to prove those statements and I am giving him just two weeks to do it," returned the Mayor. "I say that the meter question was not put through council hurriedly. Alderman Allin was at council the night the meters were purchased but left before the matter came to a vote."

Supported the Committee

Alderman Tice stated he did not know who prepared the by-law but he had supported the committee on their recommendation to purchase the meters as he felt they had done their duty in investigating the matter and had recommended the best meter. If the committee did not do their duty then all would have to suffer as the solicitor had stated the contract is binding and I for one will not vote against a contract declared valid, and binding."

"It is no more binding than the contract to purchase the Linde ice plant for the Arena," returned Alderman Allin. "Council broke that contract and then turned around and bought a machine for more money."

Alderman Clarke here pointed out that the matter in question was whether the contract could be broken and was not regarding the relative merits of the different meters.

Alderman Lazenby wanted to know why the council had not had access to the contract before it was signed and was told by the Mayor that the contract had been signed on authority from council.

Solicitor Called in

City Solicitor Collins here was called to the council chambers to give his opinion as to the validity of the by-law and contract. He admitted he did not prepare the by-law but assured the by-law had been admirably prepared and was valid.

Alderman Lazenby still felt that the council was entitled to see the contract before a vote was taken, while Alderman Chamberlain asked on whose authority the by-law had been presented to council if it had not been prepared by the Mayor.

Alderman Butler objected to the abuse which the committee had taken from certain council members. Suggestion that the committee had done nothing was untrue. The committee had investigated and had honestly submitted their report. From there on the matter had been decided by council.

Criticise Handling

Here Alderman Allin stated that there had been no criticism directed at the committee, but rather at the way which the matter had been handled. The by-law had been made out by the salesman, there being no penalty clause for non-fulfillment of the contract. "Whenever an outsider is authorized to write a by-law surely criticism is deserving," he said.

"Alderman Allin goes too far when he says that the Mayor or anybody else tries to slip something through council," Alderman Follwell interjected. "Under our system of council procedure this could not be done. Who prepares the by-law matters but little. It happens that the contracts and by-law are valid."

To this Alderman Allin stated he had not realized that the meter question was to be settled at the last council meeting, else he would have let other engagements ride. Alderman Hyde wanted to know why Mico meters had been disregarded and if the Karpark meters were worth $22 more per unit. Alderman Lattimer asked when the meters would be installed and was informed the contract stated they would be installed within 60 days of signing the contract.

A visitor to the council chambers, Willis Jackson, spoke briefly on the meter question maintaining that parking meters were a "hot subject" in the city and as such it should not have been rushed through council. "A year ago meters were discussed and then dropped when residents objected. Now we suddenly find that council has purchased meters."

Catholic Teachers Form Branch Of Federation

On Saturday, members of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association, a branch of the Ontario Teachers' Federation met in St. Michael's Academy, for the purpose of establishing a local unit.

Acting chairman, Sister Mary Domitella, welcomed the teachers and then called on Sister Mary Lenore, President of the Belleville District O.E.C.T.A., to address the meeting. After stating the purpose of establishing a local branch, Sister enumerated the benefits to be derived and clearly expressed the many achievements of this organization. The teachers were urged to inform themselves of the activities of the Association and to impart enthusiasm to their fellow workers.

Property Owners Voice Opposition To Increased Tax Rate, Offer Many Suggestions to Solve Problem

Capacity Crowd Hears Several Speakers on Matters of Civic Interest

Belleville property owners in a capacity meeting held at the Y.M.C.A., Monday night, levelled a barrage of criticism at the City Council protesting against the 10-mill tax rate increase; passed resolutions and formed a new 1947 organization which sees Jamieson Bone as president. Cecil Argue, secretary-treasurer, and Dr. Jack Marshall, Ray Zufelt, Gilbert Stackhouse, Mr. Patrick, Mrs. V. Camken and Mrs. Lionel Harris as executive with power to add.

The resolutions endorsed by the meeting are:

That the Belleville Property Owners' Association is genuinely alarmed regarding the 1947 tax rate of 47 1-2 mills, an increase of 10 mills over 1946 rates, and urges the Ontario Property Owners' Association to continue its efforts with the Ontario Government so that careful inquiry be made before allowing capital expenditures affecting municipal taxpayers.

Opposed to U. S. Meters

That the Belleville Property Owners' Association go on record as being opposed to the installation of United States-made parking meters at a higher price than those made and proven in Canada as passed at the March 17th meeting.

That the Association hold a meeting three days prior to the municipal elections here to decide what candidates it will support.

Mr. Bone, who acted as chairman of the meeting prior to and after the election of officers, in his opening remarks deplored the fact "every city including our own boasts of having lots for sale at $1.00; the idea being to get houses built and collect taxes to relieve the tax burden—a great fallacy for the tax rate remains the same or gets worse. The more people to provide services for, the more money required."

Had to Bear Brunt

Reviewing the taxes and property situation over the last 20 years, Mr. Bone said, "It was depressing after the hardships of the '30's to see so many municipalities including Belleville, hasten with callous indifference into the same old difficulties and defaults once more. In the depression years property owners had to bear the brunt of high taxes and low rentals with numerous and frequent vacancies. Properties got into serious disrepair. Many were taken over by the city for taxes. Some were pulled down. Relief charges piled up, hospitalization, and other social services and property owning became most unprofitable and unpopular.

"Nothing was done about it by our governments," the speaker charged," and prosperity came to this country and the continent solely on account of Britain's difficulties—the war. Then rents were frozen at depression levels which further prevented house building when materials were available. Laws and restrictions were passed adversely affecting property owners. Everybody else had been raised, bonused, subsidized, and coddled and the government still flounders around wondering why there is a shortage of rental units."

"Some trade unions," Mr. Bone declared, "have not helped the building industry with strikes, and open advocation of control of rentals and all other prices, while constantly demanding increased wages for themselves."

Income Tax Unequal

"Income tax is another great injustice and has much to do with the lack of housing and exodus of good Canadians," Mr. Bone stated. "With income tax, sales tax, double income tax on dividends we are the most taxed people on earth. Income from rents is considered unearned income and over a certain figure is subject to a further surtax of 4 per cent.

When he was mayor of Belleville, the speaker pointed out, the tax rate was 49 9-10 mills, and this was reduced first of all by stopping the levy on debentures already provided for. This accounted for a reduction of 3 mills. The question of city taxes is a large one, and he hoped, that Belleville and district citizens will get away from voting for party and vote for country instead. At elections of all kinds the public will surely see some day that it is necessary to elect to office the best people they can."

No Co-operation Claimed

He further charged that cooperation between the city and the Chamber of Commerce is non-existent. "The city has an Industrial Commission entirely run and controlled by people who are not members of the city council, and who are not friendly to the Chamber of Commerce. They have for years refused to give any information on industry to the Chamber and they were this year voted $4,000 for travelling expenses. They did give the Chamber a stingy grant of $1,200 and kept the rest for commission."

Referring to what he termed the "colossal loss charged to us by the gas utility and the great profits withheld by the water and electric utilities," Mr. Bone drew comparisons with the city of Galt.

"The Public Utilities there," he said "gave $45,000 for a new street lighting system; $20,000 for an incinerator costing $52,000 $40,000 for a swimming pool; $3-500 for a nurses' training school and $2,000 for hospital washing machines."

Makes Suggestion.

"They are building a million-dollar hospital," the speaker went on, and using the old one as a convalescent home. We might consider using the County Old People's Home as a convalescent institution. Galt has a 100-acre park and several smaller well-equipped parks. We have practically nothing. All our Parks Board money goes into a three-day fair at the Fair Grounds."

Regarding the 10-mill increase in city taxes which, he said, meant a 25 per cent increase, Mr. Bone stated "what the future holds for us the following figures may throw some light on: Gas plant: service charges and annual loss $25,500—2¼ mills; skating rink, $20,000 for two years, machinery, $30,000 — 3½ mills; Board of Education, up this year 10 mills — taxpayers' share, 5 mills; flying field (no word from the government yet) $25,000 — 1/5 mills; Parks Board (for animal pens, etc.), $40,000 — ½ mill; incinerator, $85,000 — ½ mill; river driveway, voted 1944, $50,-000 — ½ mill; industrial sites (2 years), $25,000 — 1 mill; fire equipment, (5 years) $45,000 — ¾ mill; sewage disposal, $350,000 —3 mills; flood control $50,000 — ½ mill; new police station and fire hall, $50,000 — ½ mill; industrial commission travel expenses, $4,000 — 1/3 mill; snow equipment and removal,—3 mills; hospital annual charge, — 1 mill; city travelling expenses, $4,000 —1/3 mill, and "known only to the aldermen, $12,000 — 1 mill.

Against Public Lavatory.

Mr. Bone "suggested to the city fathers" that they insist all education costs be paid by the province as promised and save 15 mills; get rid of the gas plant and save one and eventually two mills. Get parking meters going —more business for stores from outside with a revenue of probably 2 mills.

Terming the new city lavatory an "architectural monstrosity" he urged that the city take it down and utilize the police station. "Take the tenants out of the city hall and cut the insurance and fire risks."

"Make a start on the river driveway," he went on. "Make the rink pay a good profit or sell it. We have lots of ice on the bay for the children. Use the city weigh scales building for a bus terminal. People must have some accommodation or the bus lines will pass us up completely. Let us have a gas plant report. Get sewage disposal plans going and charge entire cost to water profits. Let's have the incinerator and charge it also to waterworks. Have the courage to actually stop train whistling, or close up some of our far-too-many city crossings. Get going on flood control but leave all construction until prices come down and labor and materials are available. And finally we must have taxes charged directly to tenants and we must also have the profits from the electric utility. When these ideas are carried out, a building boom will take place that will last for 50 years. Meantime Dominion buildings and churches must pay for services rendered."

Open Discussion

The meeting was thrown open for discussion after Mr. Bone had concluded his address, and Secretary Cecil Argue offered comparative figures of assessments, per capita debts, education etc, of cities in various parts of the province.

Ex-Mayor George Reid, said he could not understand the 10-mill increase. During his term of office as mayor, he had advocated the esplanade, and could have had it built for $190,000. In those days the people turned down a government gift of $35,000, but councils have since raised $50,000 on taxes. The free gift of $35,000 was thrown away on Zwick's Island.

Mr. Reid charged that the Belleville Public Utilities had voted to pay its share of the 200 million dollar cost of changing the Western Ontario hydro system from 25 to 60 cycles. The City of Kingston did the same but later changed its vote. Then the Belleville Public Utilities did the same thing and reversed its decision.

Favors Parking Meters

He favored parking meters, he said, even if it cost $5,000 more than necessary. He had heard, Mr. Reid declared, that a proposed new street lighting system here, had been given to a jobbing firm.

Mr. Ray Zufelt told the meeting that he was the one instrumental in petitioning the Municipal Board with regard to a protest against the purchase of a flying field. He stated that the bus franchise in Belleville brings a city revenue of $750 annually as compared to $18,000 in Kingston and $6,000 in Peterborough.

He referred to the situation in Cobourg where the people want to build a Memorial Centre, skating rink, etc. The project was referred to the Municipal Board which in turn referred it to the Cobourg taxpayers with the statement that if they are willing to pay their share of the cost, the government would help.

"There is a right way and a wrong way to do these things," he said, "and what we had better do is to clean house and start all over again."

Mrs. Camken was in favor of a Property Owners' Association. "It is the only way in which we can solve our problems, arrange delegations to meet council and even put our own representatives on that body."

Deplores Mosquito Condition

Dr. W. C. Morgan deplored the "mosquito condition" that is apparent in the summer time. "It is a torment which can be stopped with oil costing $10 to $15." He had notified council he said, but received no co-operation. This oil sprayed on weeds would remove the mosquito nuisance.

Gilbert Stackhouse stated that it was a "disgrace to promote building of new homes in the city after the council had passed a by-law prohibiting sewage traps. Something should be done about it. In some cities they have trap valves installed. Here you are allowed to flush out cellars at your own risk."

Dr. Jack Marshall, referring to railway whistles, said he understood that recommendations had been made to eliminate a number of city crossings. The sewage disposal plant could be made to pay for itself and he suggested that tenants help pay for it along similar lines to which they pay for water. Referring to the bay water, he stated that the bay off the downtown part of the city was not fit to swim in, nor would it be as long as raw sewage was dumped in it. "Children would not drown in it," he said, "they would be asphyxiated."

Representative Heard

Mr. Monte Banks, representative of the Mico Meter, Canada Ltd, who had previously interviewed the City Council with regard to parking meters was invited to the meeting. He told the property owners that council had authorized the purchase of an American-made meter by an 8-7 vote at an increased cost of $22.50 each or an overall increase of $5,600 to the taxpayers. "The by-law," he said, "was proper, and nothing could be done about it. He stated that the contract to the firm authorized to install the meters had been drawn up by the salesman representative, and accepted as such by the city solicitor and council.

Report of Gore and Storrie on Gas Plant Operation Will Be Discussed By Council; $7,800 Deficit Unpaid

The report of Gore and Storrie, consulting engineers, relative to the local gas plant operation will be taken up immediately by council, either by special meeting or otherwise, it was decided at the regular meeting of council Monday evening following notice from the Public Utilities that a 1946 gas plant deficit of $7,800 was still unpaid.

Council agreed that the city was obligated to pay indebtedness of the gas plant but as a measure to prevent constantly recurring deficits voted that the matter of gas plant operation be taken up as soon as possible. The recommendation placed by Alderman Armstrong called for the 1946 gas plant deficit of $7,800 to be paid.

Alderman Follwell moved that the matter of the deficit be referred back to committee, but Alderman Chamberlain declared this would be merely passing the buck as the bill would have to be paid.

Would Close Plant

Alderman Lattimer wanted to know why the matter could not be discussed and cleared up instead of continually paying the deficit. On inquiry from Alderman Lazenby Mayor Follwell stated that in his humble opinion a definite date should be set for the closing of the gas plant giving customers ample time to procure a substitute supply of gas. The matter should be discussed very carefully.

It was pointed out that the gas plant deficit is paid out of the city sinking fund. Alderman Clarke warned, however, that in this connection council was "getting near the bottom of the barrel." The recommendation from Alderman Armstrong followed.

The matter of garbage collection outside the city limits was briefly discussed when J. M. Wood, College Street, asked that council consider collecting garbage from his residence.

Would Have to Amend By-law

Mr. Wood stated he paid considerable city and business taxes but unfortunately lived on the "wrong" side of College Street. He was willing to pay anything within reason to have his garbage collected by the city truck which passed right by his door.

Mayor Follwell stated that council would consider the matter but advised the present by-law would have to be amended. Alderman Butler asked that a committee be appointed to look into Mr. Wood's problem. Alderman Allin suggested that Thurlow township was considering the collection of garbage.

A recommendation from Alderman Hyde, which, if passed, would have made "plumper" votes invalid, was withdrawn at the suggestion of Mayor Follwell who stated the matter should first be discussed by the Mayors' association. The recommendation was to the effect that ballots containing votes for less than four candidates be declared invalid.

Speaks on Recommendation

Another recommendation placed by Alderman Hyde asked that council petition the Ontario Legislature requesting that no person may qualify for the office of mayor or alderman unless he or she is assessed for not less than $1,000. The recommendation also asked that legislation be enacted allowing all bonafide residents over 21 years of age to vote for municipal candidates at any municipal election.

Speaking to his own recommendation Alderman Hyde declared that taxes had been increased 25 per cent but rentals had not been increased and he felt that taxpayers as council members might keep a closer eye on expenditures.

Alderman Duffy declared that his rental had been increased and stated he was sick of local taxpayers who had invested their money in this city. As a war veteran with six years overseas, he stated that he had risked more than any taxpayer in the city.

Tenants Pay for Services.

Alderman Follwell thought that the council might be subject to less criticism if all its members paid direct taxes instead of through rentals. Alderman Tice returned that tenants pay most of water and hydro costs in the city and stated that if a man was of good character he had every right to qualify for council.

Alderman Armstrong stated that the legislation had been on the statutes but had been amended. Mayor Follwell believed the recommendation had merit but asked that it be placed before the mayors' association for discussion, while Aldermen Duffy and Lazenby stated they were definitely opposed to the motion. When the recommendation came to a vote it was lost by a 10-3 margin.

Although the recommendation had been passed in committee Thursday night, council failed to ratify the sale of lots on South George Street to the Belleville Yacht Club when it was pointed out by the engineer that this was the site of the once-proposed sewage disposal plant. George Ling was given permission to erect a concrete block building on the west half of lot 1 S/S Herchimer St., at a cost in accordance with the zoning by-law.

$1,353 Balance Due.

A balance of $1,353 due the MacFarland Construction Company regarding the Purdy Street sewer was recommended paid, while a committee will be appointed to investigate a further bill of $780 for replacement of frozen backfill. The $1,353 is the extra amount due MacFarland for removal of rock from the sewer excavation. The amount is from 1945. "There is no alternative but to pay the bill," stated Alderman Hyde, in presenting the recommendation. "It will be paid under local improvements, but it is the duty of council to protect their interests."

Inquiries Voiced

Under inquiries Alderman Butler asked the cost to date of the public lavatory on the market square and was informed the plumbing contract had been $1,200; the heating $1,400, while prior to that $1,600 had been spent.

Alderman Follwell wanted to know when the new lights would be installed on the Bay Bridge Road, also, when the filthy condition of the police station would be cleaned up and if the replacement of Front Street sidewalk was to be done this year.

To a question from Alderman Lazenby, Mayor Follwell replied that there had been no word received from the municipal board regarding the application from the city on the airport and fire equipment purchase.

Alderman Harvey wanted to know when the chairman of welfare was going to get the three families out of the public works barn, claiming the place was unsanitary. Alderman Duffy replied there had been no other place to put the families who had been evicted from their homes.

Alderman Harvey wanted to know what action had been taken regarding the Frank Street subway and was informed that the city was waiting to confer with railroad officials.

Alderman Clarke asked regarding a report from the city solicitor regarding the council by-law enabling councillors to sit for a two-year term. The query was not answered as the solicitor had left for home.

Alderman Allin wanted to know the amount spent by the public works department in cleaning ice and snow from city sidewalks after the jeeps had ceased operating. He claimed that this was chargeable to the entire city, but only certain streets were thus cleared of snow and ice. Alderman Armstrong inquired regarding breakwater protection for boats using the local harbor.

Two-Member Limit

Council unanimously passed a motion presented by Alderman Clarke limiting council delegations to two members except on definite direction from council when conditions warranted a larger delegation, and asking that itemized expense accounts be submitted to council.

As seconder of the motion Alderman Duffy explained that this was one way that city expenses could be kept down. Alderman Armstrong believed that the motion drew the line a bit too close as in certain instances it was necessary to include the engineer or comptroller on a delegation. Alderman Clarke asserted provision was made for this emergency.

Alderman Allin spoke in favor of itemized bills being submitted by delegations for travelling and other expenses. He referred to a bill recently submitted to council by delegates to the Good Roads convention for an amount of $178 he said had not been itemized.

General Business

Under general business Alderman Armstrong as chairman of the regional planning committee asked permission of council to take the city engineer to Toronto on a delegation in connection with the agreement between the city and Thurlow township regarding the housing development in the College Street area.

Mayor Follwell paid tribute to Aldermen Armstrong and Duffy for their work in connection with the housing projects to be undertaken. He referred to the amount of $18,000 which Belleville had spent in snow removal and compared this to the $450,000 spent in Toronto for the same purpose. Belleville had spent one and one-half mills in snow removal, while in comparison Toronto had spent but half a mill. He complimented Alderman Harvey as chairman of public works for the fine condition in which Belleville streets had been kept during the winter.

To Call For Tenders

Council passed a recommendation authorizing the firm of Meadows and Critoph for tenders for the proposed incinerator following study of the plans and specifications by the city engineer and a committee of Alderman Armstrong, Harvey and Butler.

In view of the current housing shortage trailers will be allowed to park in the city tourist park for the summer at a rental of $10 per week, including water and lights, providing owners agree to vacate on a month's notice, and by October 1st.

Another recommendation passed concerning the housing projects called for no property in any of the sub-divisions be transferred by the city to any promoter, contractor, or builder, unless he has signed an agreement with the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which shall be presented to the city before any building permit is issued by the corporation.

A recommendation from Alderman Allin asking that the $5 paid to council members each meeting be discontinued, and calling for the Mayor's honorarium be cut to $500, was defeated with only Mayor Follwell, and Alderman Allin and Lattimer supporting the motion.

Alex Nathan New President Rotary Club

Alex Nathan, popular member of the Rotary Club here, and a member of the staff of Cliff Barager Tire Service was elected by directors to the presidency of the club at a special meeting held after the weekly luncheon on Monday. President-elect Nathan succeeds President Dr. Bert Howard, and will assume his new position on July 1st.

Rotarian Mac. Macklem was appointed to the secretaryship succeeding President-elect Nathan, while Harry Ackerman, was re-appointed treasurer.

The new president has been associated with the club for a number of years, and is one of its most efficient members. He was given the secretary's post two or three years ago, and has served as a director. His election met with the wholehearted approval of the club.

New Members Welcomed

The club dispensed with usual after-dinner speaker at the luncheon and concentrated its efforts on the welcoming to the club of several new members and a number of old ones. New members include Rotarians Harry Hill, a former member of the club, Jack Badgely, secretary-manager Chamber of Commerce; Clair Hurlbut, Quinte Cement Block Company; Dr. Gage Brearley, in charge of the Ontario Chest Clinic here and Stewart Riley, managing director of the McFarlane Woodworking Company. Other members who were also welcomed were Rotarians, Russ. Hachborn, Gilbert Scott, Harry Croll, Bert Wells and Art Francis.

Rotarian Joe Shortt officially welcomed the members on behalf of the club and presented them with Rotary literature. Attention was drawn to the all-star Rotary program being staged in the Collegiate here on Wednesday next.

PRINCE PAUL

He became George II of the Hellenes after his father abdicated in 1922. But 15 months later he left the country and three months thereafter the dynasty was deposed. He spent the ensuing dozen years living in London in exile.

He recouped his throne in 1935 and decreed a dictatorship. He fled before the Nazi invasion in 1942. He went to London to spend the remaining years of his exile before the postwar plebiscite put him back on the throne.

Means No Change

In London, Greek Leftists said the death of the king would "mean no change for the time being" in the situation in Greece.

"There will be no change," a Leftist leader said, "unless President Truman takes this opportunity to effect a change in the regime." The leader, who has close connections with Left-wing elements inside Greece, recalled that both President Truman and the British Government had acknowledged publicly that the present Greek regime was not perfect.

The return of the monarch to his throne aroused opposition which had never subsided. Greece its people hungry and war-worn, became even more of a storm centre in recent weeks when President Truman announced a plan to bolster the ancient nation's sagging economy with a loan.

The king's brother, Prince Paul, is 45 years old, the husband of Princess Frederika Luise, daughter of the Duke of Brunswick. They were married in January, 1938.

Prince Paul's children are Princess Sophia, born in November, 1938; Prince Constantine, born in June, 1940; and Princess Irene, born at Capetown in May, 1942.

George was married Feb. 27, 1921, to Elizabeth, elder daughter of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Romania. They were divorced on July 7, 1935.

Hekla Threatens To Devastate Farms

Reykjavik, Iceland, April 1 — (AP) — Mount Hekla continued to spew forth flaming lava today, blanketing grazing land in southern Ireland with a four-inch covering of ashes and threatening to devastate 17 farmsteads about 25 miles southwest of the volcano.

As boiling lava streams coursed down the side of the mountain, farmers slaughtered their livestock and hastened to evacuate the affected areas.

Thus far Reykjavik has been in no danger. The city is 80 miles west of Mount Hekla and the winds have been blowing from the northeast since the eruption.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, April 1 — (CP)—With a sharp drop in volume prices generally receded in the early session although a few issues posted new highs and some stocks traded well. Western oils were the exception today on a wider trade than usual on rising prices. Volume for the first three hours was 434,000 shares.

Selected steels showed substantial gains with Algoma up 2 7/8 at 28 1/2. Papers were off for nearly all stocks trading as were foods and utilities.

Golds moved slowly with many issues dormant although a handful traded actively. Base metals were mixed but the majority were off.

HOGS

Toronto, April 1 (CP)—Grade A, dressed bacon-hogs were unchanged at Hull $22 delivered, unsettled with no prices established at Stratford, in markets reporting early today.

Fish and Game Assoc. Meets

Displaying plenty of enthusiastic interest, members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Association crowded the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium to capacity on Monday night when they enjoyed a fine program and discussed matters pertaining to conservation of wild life and fish, angling, hunting and forestry. President Elmer Sandercock was in charge of the meeting.

Work Reviewed.

Secretary Joe Shortt reviewed the work of the association done in the intervals between meetings and read letters from Dr. Oliver Hewitt, Dominion Migratory Birds officer who will be present at the April 23 meeting; the Hon. Harold Scott, regarding deer season dates, and a wire from Dr. J. Harkness, of the Fish and Wild Life Department with regard to restrictions protecting fish during spawning season.

D. A. Ness, Department of Lands and Forests, presented colored motion picture film called the "Realm of the Wild" and outlined the aims of his department.

Nick Nicholson, secretary of the Old Home Week Committee, urged the co-operation of all in the promotion of the forthcoming affair as well as in the activities planned. The club will give every possible support.

Exhibition of Archery.

A fine exhibition of archery was given the meeting by Messrs. L. C. Richardson, Alf. Symons and M. Palmer, and afterwards several members tried their skill at the unique sport.

Among the out-of-town members were Lieut. Col. W. A. Davern, Wellington; Jim Hutton, Trenton, and Frank Correll, president of the Napanee association. Among the reports presented were those on plans for summer activities such as picnics and fishing trips, by Maurice Callaghan and restocking by Dr. Van Blakslee. Great interest was apparent in the organization of a "Fun Club."

Other films shown were "Fishing Thrills," bass, trout and muskies; "Way of the Wild," birds and animals in their native habitats; "Snow Fun," hockey, skiing, "speed bob-sledding," fancy skating, etc.

Spirit of The Commonwealth

His Majesty King George at a State banquet in the city hall of Pretoria, in the Orange Free State of the Union of South Africa referred to the sympathy in the weather and fuel crisis for the people of Britain that the people of South Africa have shown. The King spoke of his constant anxiety about the crisis in the homeland as the only flaw in the enjoyment of "six very happy weeks" in the Union of South Africa with the Queen and their two daughters. He mentioned the generous measure of loyalty, good will and affection offered by the people for Britain which he said would be as heartening as the recollection of it would be everlasting. The people of South Africa had made it easier to bear the anxiety felt over the ordeal Britain had been called upon to pass through. The people of the Union had everywhere shown concern for the men and women of the British Isles who have been facing their troubles so courageously.

On a prayer he heard a South African congregation offer for Britain in her present difficulties the King made an impressive reference to the evidence of the wish to understand each other's troubles, "a wish to help and determination to solve our problems together."

He gave emphasis in the words, "Why should it not be so? Are we not one brotherhood—the greatest brotherhood in the whole history of man, a brotherhood that has been strengthened, not weakened, by past differences, of which like wise men we have forgotten the causes and remembered only the lessons?"

His Majesty's tribute to the memory of many famous South Africans who had hallowed the soil of their land was in these words,

"Here as elsewhere in South Africa, feats of courage were accomplished that will be forever remembered by Boer and Briton alike. And it was here in Transvaal that the name of that great patriot, President Kruger, first became inscribed in the annals of this Dominion.

"May his immortal words, which I paraphrase in English, 'take from the past all that is good and beautiful, shape your ideal therewith and build your future in this ideal' ever remain the watchword of young South Africans."

This understanding by the peoples of the Commonwealth of one another is a happy augury of a day which mankind hopes is not far away when all nations shall understand one another and be in lasting peace.

Holy Week

The most solemn week of the Christian year is now passing, the last week of the Lenten season. It dates from the earliest days of Christianity. The three chief days are Maundy Thursday (Holy Thursday), Good Friday, which is the most sacred of all, and Holy Saturday. Holy Week was once known as Great Week, Silent Week and Penitential Week. In ancient days it was observed with greater solemnity and penitential rigor than in modern day. The washing of the feet of poor men is still observed on Maundy Thursday, one of the most impressive ceremonies of the church.

These days of the Passion bring to an end the Lenten season, in the solemn ceremonies on Good Friday, commemorating the Crucifixion and on Holy Saturday. After the night of sorrow of Lent comes the dawn of Easter, the memorial of Christ's Resurrection and of the passing from the Old Dispensation of the moral law to the new Dispensation of Atonement through the death of Christ.

Indelible Impressions

Winter 1946-47 will leave indelible impressions of the variety and severity of the weather especially in the three months between Christmas and the end of the winter season. Piles of snow developed height that has probably not been rivaled since the days of long ago when the drifts according to residents of that time were plentiful and deep. Among the claims which can be made for the severity of the weather in the season just passed are these, that the elments conspired by sending heavy falls of snow, that there was variety of moisture in all its forms, snow, sleet, hail, rain, sometimes during the same storm to create a combination which almost defied traffic and snow clearance. While there were not continued cold spells of great severity as in some winters in the thirties, there was plenty of snow with storm following storm.

Conditions seemed all a part of a disturbance all over the North American Continent and folk who had gone to the sunny clime of Florida found that the cold weather reached them there. Unable to protect themselves against the severity of the cold, these southern people doubtless were sometimes worse off than those who lived in the colder north.

It has been said time after time that the weather has been changing and conditions moderating from what they were in the good old days. No one takes very much stock in such claims for winters are severe enough. Today however man's ingenuity has done it's best to eliminate drift blockades as soon as possible after they appear, With this winter's record most people will admit that the winters are still severe and really rival the severity of those in the long past.

Bishop Rock Lighthouse

Most people have read about Edward Ward and his enforced stay of four long weeks in the Bishop Rock Lighthouse, several miles south-west of the toe of Cornwall in the Atlantic. But in a recent program "Calling the Islands", on the BBC's Pacific Service, Ward gave some interesting details both about the lighthouse and the rock on which it was built.

"The rock itself", he said "has a rather grim history. In the Middle Ages, long before a lighthouse was built on it, it was used for a very different purpose. The story goes that 'disorderly' women were taken out to the rock and left marooned there until either they were swept off or died of starvation. As a refinement to this somewhat drastic punishment for easy morals, they were left with one day's provisions so as to give them at least 24 hours to meditate on their sins.

But what really struck me was how on earth they ever managed to build the lighthouse. I landed when it was almost low tide but even so there wasn't much of the rock above the surface of the sea. At high tide the rock is practically covered. How did they build a massive granite tower rising over a hundred and sixty feet almost straight out of the sea?

Those engineers who started to build the Bishop Rock Lighthouse getting on for a hundred years ago were certainly faced with a formidable problem. The rock stands seven miles out in the Atlantic, completely unsheltered from the prevailing south-westerly winds which sweep, only too often at gale force, right across the ocean. They started off by building a ring known as a cofferdam round the part of the rock which they decided to use for a base. Then they pumped the water out from inside the cofferdam, levelled the rock and laid the first stone one foot below the level of the low spring tide....

While the base of the lighthouse was being built on the rock the tower was assembled ashore at St. Mary's in the Scillies. Great, granite blocks were carefully cut so that they dovetailed together, numbered, and gradually brought out to the rock. And so the Bishop Rock Lighthouse came into being."

Cellar And Attic

A cellar, cool and damp, was a sweet smelling cave when the vegetables were stored away. It was dark and mysterious, in an attractive sort of way. One always was expecting a brownie to pop out from behind a lump of coal.

The attic however, was the most delightful part of all. Here a lad might encounter a mouse with friendly eyes but wary feet. Romantic trunks were packed with scented clothing. Intriguing magazines were piled everywhere. The finest time, though, was a rainy afternoon. Sprawled on his stomach in any comfortable position, a youngster could attend his business or pleasure without interference. No one was around to remind him to "sit up straight, now." Just above his head, the rain drops plopped pleasantly onto the old wood shingles. A fly might buzz lazily. From such a comfortable perch, stories could take him adventuring around the world, says Minneapolis Star.

But modern architects have abolished such places. Useless waste, they say.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did April-fooling originate?

April 1 is unique in being the one day in the year dedicated to practical joking.

"April" is believed to be derived from Latin "aperire," to open, and may have been applied to the fourth month by the Romans in allusion to its being the time of year when vegetation unfolds and nature renews life.

Fooling friends and acquaintances on April 1 by playing practical jokes on them and sending them on foolish errands is an old custom. The victim of such a prank is called an April Fool and the day is known as All Fools' Day or April Fools' Day.

This conception of April 1 was common in England in the 17th century. In "Gnomologia" Thomas Fuller (1608-1661) wrote: "The first day of April, you may send a fool whither you will." "Poor Robin's Almanac" for 1760 contained this rhyme:

The first of April some do say,
Is set apart for All-Fools' Day;
But why the people call it so
Nor I nor they themselves do know.

Many theories have been suggested to account for the origin of April-fooling, but none of them is very satisfactory. Similar festivities have been popular in different parts of the world for thousands of years. Practical jokes are played by the Hindus on March 31, the last day of the features of the Hull is sending persons on fools' errands.

The Romans played burlesque tricks on February 17, the Feast of Fools (festum stultorium). This burlesque festival was revived during the Middle Ages and was sometimes celebrated even in the churches on New Year's Day.

But, assuming that April-fooling is related to the fun-making of these once almost universal festivals held near the spring equinox, the exact origin of April Fools' Day still remains inadequately explained. The English and Germans apparently borrowed the custom from the French, who called an April Fool "un poisson d'avril," an April fish which may allude to the general voraciousness of fish in the spring —an April fish would be young and therefore easily caught—or to the fact that in that month the sun leaves the sign of the Fish in the zodiac.

Perhaps the best explanation is that April-fooling in Western Europe began with the change in the calendar in France in 1564. When the Gregorian took the place of the Julian calendar New Year's Day was changed from March 25 to January 1. Before that the New Year festivities lasted eight days, beginning March 25 and reaching their peak April 1, which was reserved especially for giving presents and making calls. Possibly the celebration on the old date degenerated into burlesque and mockery after the new date was adopted for real

C.N.R. AUDITING

Third Reading Given.

Earlier, the House gave third and final reading, after several hours of discussion, to a bill continuing compensation instituted during the war for government employees injured or killed at their work.

The House adopted a motion giving government business priority over all other business until April 28 to enable full consideration of the administration's emergency control legislation. Certain periods were set aside for private members' business.

First reading was given a Senate bill to incorporate the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway Co., and a private bill, sponsored by Wilfred LaCroix (L-Quebec-Montmorency), to outlaw organizations which constituted a "menace" to the safety of the state.

Closing the C.N.R. debate, Mr. Chevrier said that if the auditor-general handled the audit he would have to build up a staff of experts, with the result that the cost probably would be more than that now charged by the private firm.

Cost $50,000 Claim.

Mr. Sinclair argued that in one year alone, the private firm had charged $50,000 to make the audit.

He suggested that the appointment bill be sent to the House Railway Committee, where the auditor-general and possibly the private auditing firm could be called as witnesses.

Mr. Sinclair also suggested that Crown companies pay taxes so the public could judge whether they were as efficient as the private companies with which they were competing.

Mr. Nicholson, moving his amendment, said he thought Mr. Sinclair's suggestion would save the taxpayers a substantial sum of money and expressed belief statements made by private companies were "entirely unsatisfactory" compared with official audits.

Study of the compensation bill drew from Mr. Chevrier, its sponsor, a promise to consider a suggestion by Dr. W. G. Blair (PC-Lanark) that the government institute annual medical examinations for its employees.

Dr. Blair said such examinations would be particularly helpful in settling claims made to compensation boards for injuries or diseases suffered at work. For instance, it would be easier to determine how and when a hernia was suffered.

Dr. Blair also suggested the world "pulmonary" be deleted from a section dealing with compensation for government employees who contracted pulmonary tuberculosis while working in government hospitals and institutions treating that disease.

Mr. Chevrier said the word had been inserted after consultation with health department authorities and he did not feel that the change should be made. The hospitals concerned were those treating only pulmonary tuberculosis cases.

BIDS FAREWELL

Ottawa, April 1 — (CP) — Defence Minister Claxton told the Commons that the Veterans' Guard of Canada was due for disbandment yesterday. In a statement of tribute, he said the body of First World War veterans who served in a second war, deserved "heartfelt thanks for a good job well done, and a grateful farewell."

DISCUSS VACATION

Montreal, April 1 — (CP) — F. H. Hall, vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, said last night that union officers will meet here today with railway officials to discuss the union's request for two weeks vacation with pay for some 150,000 employees.

COME, LET US ROLL ALONG

It may strike the casual reader or the medical reader (if any) as absurd, but I do sincerely believe that any person not over 65 who is eutrophic —that is, whose nutrition is good—should be able to roll half a dozen somersaults on the floor or ground at any time without getting upset or flustered.

I have tried to tell you folks how to maintain eutrophy or good nutrition and how many common complaints are wholly or party manifestations of nutritional deficiency, specifically insufficient daily intake of calcium, phosphorus, iodine, vitamin B-complex particularly components thiamine and riboflavin and vitamin D. If you have missed the articles in which I have explained about this, you may get the gist of it in either of these booklets: For growing children and youths "VITE Spells Youth"; for mature adults "The 7 Keys to Vite"—for either booklet send twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

Now back to our somersaulting. Maybe I'm just nutty about some things—I wouldn't know about that—the individual who is really demented or off his nut or "going insane" or mentally unbalanced never is conscious of his own derangement, but rather thinks everybody else is crazy. Be that as it may, I roll a half dozen somersaults first thing every morning and then do the six movements of the Last Brady Symphony described and illustrated in the "Seven Keys to Vite". If there isn't time to do this—the whole business takes only two minutes or so, I do the rolls anyhow—that takes only a few seconds—and omit the calisthenics, for believe somersaults more essential than exercise.

Incidentally, in the pamphlet "Invitation to the Somersaultauqua", available on request if you provide stamped envelope bearing your address, there is an artist's sketch showing how to roll 'em. It did not dawn on me until many years after the sketch was made that the artist had failed to catch an important feature of the technique, namely, the curling up. The figure in the sketch is apparently a young man but he seems as stiff and awkward as an old man might be —and as timid, too, for he has a pillow under his head.

The first caution—no, no, I don't mean that—the first step in turning a somersault — and I don't mean what Webster calls a somersault either, for in my somersaults one never for an instant loses firm contact with floor or ground—the first step in turning a neat somersault is this: Curl up tight as a ball and roll.

The second step is this: Keep curled up like a ball until you come up on your feet.

The third step is this: Squat or crouch down as low as you can and then place the crown or back of your head, not the top or the forehead, on the floor, on pad or pillow so that you are looking back along the floor or ground between your heels. In this position, provided you keep curled up, you need only a push a little with your feet and over you go and right up on your feet plumb tickled about the whole silly business.

Oh, I suppose some dignified old parties who haven't unbent in years will see stars and be dizzy if they ever do get up their nerve to try a few somersaults, but that only goes to show how badly they need just such stirring up of the great splanchnic pool where more than a fourth of the entire volume of blood stagnates!

I hope no reader will think I am not serious about this. I know that a great many readers have been rolling their own for years and they know I'm not fooling.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Hot Baths

I love to take hot baths, as hot as I can stand. They seem to relax me. Also I like to sit and toast my legs in front of the fire. But friends tell me these habits will cause hardening of the . .

(Mrs. D. G.)

Answer —Let your friends tell it to the Marines. Take all the hot baths and toast your legs all you like.

RABBITS AND SEALS FOR EASTER

Rabbits are the symbol of Easter, and Easter seals are emblamatic of the sunshine, health and happiness brought to crippled Ontario children through the work of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children. Here, Timmy, young crippled boy is shown in Premier George Drew's office at Queen's Park, Toronto, with a few of the rabbits that appeared after Timmy sold the Premier the first sheet of Easter seals, when the campaign got under way this week.

Cobourg Presbyterial of W.M.S. Meets in Campbellford Church

[illegible] Cobourg Presbyterial [illegible]ing of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church of Canada convened in St. John's Church, in Campbellford, last week with Mrs. E. C. Roberts, the president, in charge.

Members of St. Stephen Auxiliary of Hoards conducted the Worship service for the morning session. Delegates were welcomed by Mrs. G. N. Maxwell. During a short business period committees were appointed and the "Story of the Year" presented by Mrs. Belyea of Port Hope. A letter of greeting was read from Mrs. W. C. Haggerty President of Bay of Quinte Conference Branch.

Tells of Future Plans

Mrs. A Love, of the Dominion Board addressed the delegates, explaining some of the plans proposed for the future work of the Society. The treasurer, Mrs. F. Denyes of Smithfield, during the presentation of the financial statement, reported an increase of $411 in the givings of last year. Mrs. Jaynes of Cobourg, reporting for the Christian Stewardship Department said that several auxiliaries had exceeded their allocations.

"What Are We Reading?" was a book review led by ladies from Brighton, Port Hope and Colborne auxiliaries, which concluded the session. Lunch was served by the Woman's Association of the Church.

Quiet music was played by Mr. C. Howey, A.L.C.M. on the new Hammond organ as the guests reassembled for the afternoon session, which opened with an impressive memorial service led by the Frankford Auxiliary.

"Christian Stewardship—a priority" was the subject of Mrs. Love's afternoon address. Miss Florence Clearihue, for forty years a missionary in India, spoke on "India as I Know It."

Awards Presented

Reports of committees and the election of officers were followed by the presentation of certificates and awards to Mission Band leaders and Mrs. M. Waite of Wooler gave a report of Baby Bands.

An interesting playette was given by the Mission Band of St. John's Church.

After the election of delegates to the Conference Branch Meeting, the meeting was closed with prayer by Mrs. A. M. Smale.

Rev. G. N. Maxwell, minister of the church, presided for the evening session, when the worship service was led by C.G.I.T. groups from St. Andrew's and St. John's churches. Miss Clearihue again addressed the congregation on the subject "India Today."

An impressive Easter Candlelighting service by the Evening Auxiliary of St. John's Church brought the evening session to a fitting close.

Plan to Honor Hill For His Bravery In Rescuing Animals

Guelph, April 1 — (CP) —Rev. C. J. Loat of Eldora, provincial secretary of the Ontario Humane Society, said Monday that William (Red) Hill of Niagara Falls, will be presented shortly with the Humane Society Certificate of Merit.

Hill will be honored for his bravery in rescuing animals from the Niagara River Gorge.

Hill, who has also saved the lives of several persons, has not been officially notified that his work is to be recognized, said Mr. Loat.

With the aid of a deputy game warden, Hill has often saved the lives of deer which jumped over the restraining fences into the gorge and had been trapped in the swirling waters below.

22nd Annual Meeting of Belleville Presbyterial of WMS Held at Napanee

The 22nd Annual Meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial of the W.M.S. took place in Grace Church, Napanee on March 28. It was hampered by extreme weather conditions, but carried through with high purpose and courage befitting the theme "Now is the Time."

The executive meeting, postponed from the evening before, preceded the rally. It opened with prayer by Mrs. Patton. It was decided that those mimeographed reports prepared by secretaries would be mailed to the auxiliaries.

Mrs. Bailey and Mrs. McCreary were nominated for the branch offices of Christian Stewardship and Literature respectively.

A letter was sent to Mrs. A. D. Way who with Mr. Way had suffered a painful automobile accident.

The meeting opened with prayer by the president, Mrs. Empey.

Mrs. Booth, president of Grace Church brought gracious greetings.

Mrs. Truscott, treasurer gave her report for 1946. She gave as the total amount received by her $17,042.82, with expense account of $199.85. Therefore the amount sent to Branch Treasurer was $16,809. The largest contribution from this Presbyterial by about $200 but requiring still $1,091 to complete the allocation which is $17,900.

Gives Hints on Reports

Mrs. Truscott said "You could make it easier for the treasurer by (1) checking your annual report by your quarterly reports. (2) send the even amounts, no cents. (3) Put in the name society exactly. (4) Add exchange when sending cheques. (5) On annual report form put list of life members for the year.

Mrs. Trumpour, Branch Secretary for Christian Stewardship gave the new method of contribution to special objects, changes made in 1946 (see January Missionary Monthly) and get folder "Gifts for Building Advance (free) viz: After the allocation of the Presbyterial as a whole has been reached, then what is over will go to "Advance," but the Mission Band, Baby Band and C.G.I.T. still have their special objects.

The special objects for Presbyterials are (1) $25,000 for India—a new ward for the Indore hospital. (2) Canada needs $8,000 for a doctors' residence at Battle R. hospital and (3) China needs $20,000 for rooms for home economics for girls' school at Chengtu.

"We may choose two out of three. Let us go over our allocation as a Presbyterial so we may contribute to these. "Christ expects of us Sacrifice," concluded Mrs. Trumpour.

Guest Speaker Introduced

Mrs. Hawley introduced the guest of the rally, Miss Gertrude Hamilton, M.A., appointed missionary to Japan in 1917 and before the Second World War, principal of the girls' high school in Tokyo.

Mrs. McCreary introduced the literature for sale mentioning especially the following: (1) "Literature Needs of India", 20c; (2) "Seeking to be a Christian in Race Relationship", 35c; (3) "One World, One Family", 60c; (4) "Let's Get Together For Teen-age" 35c.; (5) "Five Minutes a Day", and (6) "Spiritual Hilltops", two devotional books, $1.25; (7) "Why Missions?"—answers to arguments against missions.

A very lovely memorial service was conducted by Mrs. F. L. Hooper for the deceased from the five sections of Belleville Presbyterial. In it Mrs. Hooper paid tribute to these special qualities of W.M.S. workers, (1) To the leader, the woman on whom we depend in emergencies; (2) The doer of gracious things, such as welcoming newcomers; (3) the cheerful person, who takes the optimistic view; (4) The peacemaker; (5) The truly devotional-minded person. Each of these advances missionary work. "Still their silent ministries have their place within our hearts".

Miss Lewis sang "Face to Face", a lovely solo.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session opened with worship by Holloway Street Auxiliary on the theme: "Now is the time." Mrs. C. Holmes said in part in her devotional talk: —"Jesus, passionately and earnestly said, 'Now is the day of Salvation,' but we have many priorities, our homes, etc. In the emergency of war there could be no sentimental excuses. There is an emergency now for the Kingdom of God. The harvest is ready, masses in China, millions in India. The time is now."

Mrs. Patton, on the subject of Temperance and Christian Citizenship said in part 'Every church should have a recreational centre, with sports, study, hand crafts, music and with leaders—No better way for a man or woman to spend their time than in helping young people."

Mrs. S. Homan read the "Story of the Year" giving as membership of Auxiliaries 1,969 with 282 members of Evening Auxiliaries with 22 auxiliaries and five evening auxiliaries having increased their givings by 60c per member, Massassaga having made the greatest increase in membership.

Mrs. Thomas Wilson, speaking on Community friendship said in part: 'Keep a report of visits made — welcoming strangers, calling on sick and shut-ins — get the new removal post card."

Some Parents Liabilities

Mrs. Carman Atton said in part regarding the Baby Band. 'The whitest field of the world is its children—Even a little child is not too young to learn. Dr. Emmerson Fosdick has said 25 per cent. of parents are liabilities and give no training to build a Christian home. Choose religious books suitable for the child early —such as "Prayers for Little Children", "God Gave Me Eyes", etc.

The offering was dedicated by Mrs. Farnsworth. Miss Gertrude Hamilton, Miss Hambly and Miss Clazie, three missionaries to Japan, were present.

Miss Hamilton, the guest speaker, said in part, —"The Challenge of the World is strong on us today. In my 25 years in Japan there were many changes. God's punishment of the Japanese has been thorough and what ruined Japan was self-seeking. Now certain events are signs of a rebirth, an emancipation."

Recently the Emperor of Japan gave an audience to four Christian missionaries, two ladies in the group, (never happened before). The Emperor addressed each one and expressed appreciation of work done. General McArthur has expressed his conviction that only religion can make democracy a reality in Japan.

Are we Christian workers too timid in pressing the claims of Christ upon the world and asking largely from those who should give?

Mission Work In Japan

Christian education must be set up in Japan before it is too late, a burning urgency for every Christian—say the Japanese "Missionaries are the greatest gift you could send us—crowds are flocking to hear the gospel."

How will we ever meet the challenge of Japan's rebirth? A story will illustrate the spirit necessary to do this. It concerns a father and mother in Pennsylvania. Their son was killed in 1945 in the Philippines. His insurance policy of $10,000 has been given by the parents for a scholarship for Orientals. This year it will go to a Japanese young man.

The base of forgiveness is —"They know not what they do."

What should we do about Hiroshima? The atomic bomb is a glorious thing, in itself, but we used it to destroy 100,000 men women and children—our own bodies were not destroyed but how do we appear to ourselves beside Him? concluded the speaker.

Mrs. Whiteman sang beautifully "The Lilies They Grow."

Mrs. Hamilton noted the fact that Grace Church, Trenton ordered extra copies of Missionary Monthly and placed them in the Church vestibule—and she said, "What child would not like to receive 'World Friends'?" Extra copies used thus may be "instruments in the hands of God."

From the panel discussion on Christian Stewardship conducted by Mrs. Ralph Sills and Mrs. W. H. Bell the following is part:—God is the owner, man the possessor of things:—The rich young ruler tithed and gave to the poor. What was the matter? The danger of riches is to indulge wants, and purchase ease and comfort, tends to make self satisfied' and self sufficient—to become callous to need and suffering and forget God. Because Christ gave Himself, we gave ourselves to Him. Love and gratitude, never ask, how much must I give but how much can I give? Out stewardship is our life's work, a full dedication of life and possessions not a renunciation but a dedication—a partnership, "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." "A loving service to Christ distinguishes Christianity as opposed to churchanity."

This concluded the afternoon session.

Resolutions

Mrs. Davidson read the following resolutions:

1 That the individual auxiliary be asked to appoint a Temperance speaker to speak once a year to the Circle and C.G.I.T. of their church.

2. That the amount raised be fully reported by the society.

3 That more supervision be made over literature for teenage boys and girls.

4 That all kinds of gambling be discouraged, draws, sale of tickets, etc., even if legal.

5 That the sanctity of the Sabbath be safely guarded.

7 That a resolution's committee be appointed this year for next year and that all resolutions be sent to them.

That these be forwarded to Branch by Mrs. Homan.

Officers, Executive

Mrs. McLellan asked for the report of the nominating committee, which Mrs. Nickle gave as follows:

Finance Committee: Mrs. Stan Haggerty, Mrs. E. L. Fraser and Mrs. Lincoln Elliott; Nominating Committee: Mrs. Ralph Sills, Mrs. W. H. Baugh and the presidents of the following auxiliaries, Morven, Selby, Cannifton, Wellington, Marmora.

The executive otherwise remained the same except Christian Stewardship, Mrs. R. D. Davidson, 15 Patterson Street, Belleville and Literature, Mrs. G. Mackenzie, Yarker.

Mrs. McLellan installed the officers.

Mrs. Empey expressed the appreciation felt by all for the fine record of work done by the retiring secretary of Christian Stewardship, Mrs. Bailey and of Literature, Mrs. McCreary.

After an excellent supper in the basement of Grace Church, Rev. Mr. McLellan presided for a short, pleasant after supper meeting. After the chairman's address Mayor Chalk made a speech of welcome, Rev. Noble Hatton brought greetings from Presbytery. Mrs. McLellan greetings from Conference Branch, Mrs. Townsend making a gracious reply. After one verse of "Blest Be the Tie That Binds", Rev. Mr. Brown dismissed the gathering.

Evening Session

The opening worship was in charge of the C.G.I.T. The theme was contained in the words:

"No duty seems lowly
To one who dwells with Thee
And all of life seems Holy
With Christ of Galilee."

The story was told by Barbara McGlachlin. The title "The Two Old Men"—Ethan made the pilgrimage to Jerusalem in body and Elijah going about God's business, was there in soul.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen speaking for Mission Circles, said in part—"8 Mission Circles are not nearly enough for Belleville Presbyterial. We have lost potential workers both at home and abroad. If you have five girls you can have a real Mission Circle with a good sincere woman interested in missions and in girls as leaders."

Mrs. Baugh sent her report. It was read by Mrs. Wilson in part as follows: "Out of 53 bands reporting, there are two new ones, 20 received recognition. Mrs. Baugh is planning two Mission Band leaders' conferences. Do your utmost to attend."

Miss Morden, supply secretary said, ways are being worked out to help China, Japan and Korea in their desperate need and money may be sent to help furnish the parsonage at Maynboth for Miss Coultes and Miss Willows.

Home Missionary Speaks

Miss Hamilton spoke in the evening as a home missionary, for she had been working since January 1943, among Japanese removed from the west coast (1,700 in Lemon Creek and Slocan Valley, Kootenay district). She said in part, "If the church is to be taken seriously in other lands, sectional rivalry and denominational disunity must go.

We must have an international policy—one world—a family of nations—a brotherhood. One God who is father. Speaking of treatment of Canadian-Japanese Miss Hamilton stated, Homes they had worked 30 or 40 years to build were snatched from them and they were not adequately reimbursed. The conduct of all but a handful of the 23,000 Japanese in Canada had been above reproach.

In the uncleared district to which they were moved they had made the desert "blossom as the rose". They appreciate what the W.M.S. had done in sending missionaries to them. Since the end of war some of the young Japanese had gone home with their parents, where the trained ones are being employed in the army of occupation, the rest are scattered across Canada. Read "The Bomb that Fell on America". We need a new revolution born, not of hate, but of love."

Mrs. C. Holmes, convener of the courtesy committee, thanked those of Grace Church and all who had helped to make the convention a real success. Rev. Mr. McLellan dismissed the meeting.

WEDDINGS

BARKER—HENNINGS

A quiet, but pretty wedding took place in Toronto, on the afternoon of Saturday, March 22nd., at two o'clock, when Mary Geraldine Hennings, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Dick, 1192 Bloor Street, Toronto, became the bride of Donald Samuel Barker, son of Mr. J. Barker, Trent River.

The bride was charming in a powder blue costume with corsage of red roses. She was attended by Mrs. Norval Barker of Roslin, who was gowned in poudre blue silk jersey with a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Norval Barker, Roslin, supported the groom.

After the ceremony a delicious buffet luncheon was served to the guests.

Later in the day the bridal party left for a trip to Ottawa and Montreal. Mr. and Mrs. Barker will make their home at Trent River where the groom is engaged as cheesemaker.

Fried Chicken is Always a Treat

There's a party cookin' when you've got juicy, tender oven-fried chicken on the fire. Using the minimum in time, effort and fuel, build your whole menu around oven dishes. Then dinner will be on the table as smoothly as a product rolled off the assembly line.

Oven-fried Chicken
Escalloped Potatoes
Green Beans
Jellied Salad
Apple Betty

Oven Fried Chicken

1 2 1-2 to 3 lb. chicken
3 tablespoons salad oil
2 teaspoons salt
1-4 teaspoon pepper
2 cups whole wheat flakes.

Clean and cut chicken into serving pieces. Rub with one tablespoon salad oil, salt and pepper. Crush whole wheat flakes into fine crumbs. Roll chicken in crumbs until well coated. Put chicken in greased shallow baking pan and sprinkle with remaining oil. Bake in very hot oven (500 degree F.) 10 to 15 minutes or until browned; reduce heat to 325 degrees F. and bake chicken 30 minutes longer or until tender. Serve at once. Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

So Little Time So Little Sugar

Company's coming, there's nothing for dessert, and the bakery's closed or all sold out—there you have a perfect embarrassing moment! It needn't be one, thought, if you get busy whipping up this Ginger Flake Cake that takes only a half hour to bake. The ingredients are the staple kind that you're sure to have in stock.

Ginger Flake Cake

1-4 cup shortening
1-4 cup sugar
1 egg
1-2 cup molasses
2 cups corn flakes
1 cup sifted flour
1-2 teaspoon soda
1-2 teaspoon ginger
1-2 teaspoon cinnamon
1-2 teaspoon cloves
1-2 cup hot water

Blend shortening and sugar thoroughly. Add egg and molasses; beat well. Stir in corn flakes which have been crushed into fine crumbs and sifted dry ingredients. Add water and beat until smooth. Pour into greased baking pan and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 to 35 minutes.

Yield: 9 servings (8 x 8-inch pan).

Springtime Surprise

From straw hats to spring flowers, there's no mistaking spring. Even your market basket carries home new spring fruit. Pink rhubarb stalks are most inviting and a rhubarb surprise pudding is an enticing way of serving a first springtime dessert.

Rhubarb Crisp Pudding

1-4 cup shortening
1-2 cup sugar
2 eggs
1-2 teaspoon nutmeg
1-2 teaspoon vanilla
1 1-2 cups toasted bread cubes
2 cups whole wheat flakes
4 cups diced fresh rhubarb
3-4 cup honey.

Blend shortening and sugar thoroughly; add eggs and beat well. Add nutmeg and flavoring. Stir in bread cubes and whole wheat flakes.

Put rhubarb in baking pan and drizzle with honey. Cover with whole wheat flakes mixture. Bake in moderate over (375 degrees F.) 35 to 40 minutes or until rhubarb is cooked. Serve warm with thin cream.

Yield: 6 to 8 servings (6x10 inch baking pan).

Hospital Pathologist Speaks On Preventive Medicine And The Adolescent at Meeting

At a meeting held Monday night in the Collegiate auditorium, members of the BCI Home and School Association were privileged to hear Dr. McKay pathologist of Belleville Hospital speak on Preventive Medicine and the Adolescent.

Two violin solos "Berceuse de Jocelyn" by Godard and Madrigale" by Simonette played by Mrs. Geo. Currie, accompanied by Mr. Fletcher, added a distinctive enjoyment to the program.

The guest speaker Dr. McKay was introduced by Mrs. G. G. Wright. In his opening remarks on Preventive Medicine, Dr. McKay stated:

"There is a great deal of truth in the old adage, 'An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.' Parents must continually be reminded that children's diseases should not be regarded too lightly. The aim of modern preventive medicine is to eliminate disease. Much progress has been made in this particular field.

Vaccination has reduced smallpox to a minimum but without eternal vigilance this disease could easily reoccur in our midst. All individuals must be given the protection we have to offer against communicable diseases.

Effectiveness 100 per cent

The effectiveness of toxoid against diphtheria is almost 100 per cent. There is a tendency for this protection to wane but it can be rendered effective again by giving a booster dose about the time a child enters high school. A death due to diphtheria is a black mark against the parents and community alike. Vaccine for diphtheria and whooping cough may be administered together. There is splendid control of this disease. Ontario has the lowest incidence in Canada.

"There is some doubt as to the value of toxoid for scarlet fever," Dr. McKay continued. Because it may be caused by different types of germs, the right toxoid might not be given. But the complications of scarlet fever can be so serious that any protection is worthy of our consideration.

"Small injuries may become infected resulting in tetanus or lockjaw. Tetanus antitoxin must be administered.

Makes No Impression

"Virus infections cause such diseases as measles chicken pox and polio. Penicillin and sulpha drugs make no impression in these cases. The most significant advance in the treating of polio is the Kenny treatment of paralysis. Pest control is recommended to prevent contagion.

"Recently some fairly effective vaccines have been brought out to combat influenza. A cold which insists longer than two weeks may lead to a more serious condition. Chest X-ray reveals tuberculosis which cannot be detected clinically. Some encouraging results have been effected by the use of streptomycin for tubercular meningitis.

Dr. McKay described venereal diseases as an unnecessary human tragedy and an economic waste. "It is a proven fact that the incidence can be reduced until it is a rarity," he continued. "People as a whole must be educated. We as parents must discard the old taboos and give our children's queries direct answers. Alcohol is an aggravating cause of this disease."

For Pre-marital Blood Test

In suggesting a remedy, the speaker stated: A pre-marital blood test should be a legal necessity. A blood test in early pregnancy is an effective measure. Clinics are in aid. We are failing in our obligation as parents and citizens if we do not eliminate venereal diseases."

In concluding his address, Dr. McKay stated it was necessary for students to choose a vocation which they would enjoy. The basic driving factor should be the individuals' eager enjoyment of his work. The best guarantee of the individuals' happiness is that he be educated to give his highest contribution to the community.

Mrs. G. G. Wright president extended a vote of thanks to Dr. McKay for his instructive address. The hostess committee served refreshments at the conclusion of the meeting.

Art and Leather Exhibit at B.C.I. Much Admired

On Monday evening students of the Art Class studying with Mr. Allen Cameron, held an exhibit of paintings in one of the second floor rooms of the B.C.I.V.S. from seven-thirty till nine o'clock.

Speaking with Mr. and Mrs. Cameron, the Ontario Intelligencer learned that the art class term opened in October and continued through March, with classes meeting two evenings each week; making a total of forty-five lessons during the term.

Mrs. H. S. Robbins' collection of paintings in oils, as well as the charcoal sketches of heads, was especially outstanding and the subject of much favorable comment from the visitors.

Oil paintings exhibited included still life, flowers, portraits and scenes, many of the latter being of Belleville and the surrounding locale. There were a large number of charcoal sketches of heads, showing full view, three-quarter and profiles of faces, which were very easily recognized by many of the observers.

In another section fine leather work commanded considerable attention. This exhibit of useful and ornamental objects was the product of students under instruction by Miss R. Cerswell. It included practical articles in plain leathers and in beautiful tooled patterns. Among the various exhibits were key-rings, bill folds, book covers, camera cases, purses, (both large and small) a desk set, book ends and gloves.

Large samples of the skins and of the different finished leathers from which these articles are made were also shown, including sheepskin, calf and the very popular "pig-tex", each of which had been used in making some of the finished products displayed.

Thames Floods Cut Off Farmers — One of the dozen farm houses isolated by flood waters at Jeannettes Creek, near mouth of Thames River, is that of O. H. Taylor. His basement contains a $2,000 crop of potatoes. In background are railway tracks.

These new 1947 Hudsons are now being displayed in the showrooms of Hudson dealers throughout Canada. Two lines, the Super Series and the Commodore Series are available, with a choice of 102 horsepower Super Six and 128 horsepower Super Eight engines. The Super Sixes are available in three or five passenger coupes, broughams, sedans or convertible broughams. Super Eights and Commodore Sixes are available in five passenger coupes or sedans. Commodore Eights are available in five passenger coupes, sedans or convertible broughams. All body types are offered in nine solid colors and four two-tone combinations. Change-over to the new models was made without interruption of production as changes were restricted to carefully selected features of interior and exterior trim. The massiveness of the grille is heightened by enlargement of the crown over the top and sides of the bonnet ornament. Greater protection for the grille is provided by newly positioned front bumper guards. Interiors are improved by changing the upholstery trim style Emphasis on safety is continued through use of patented double-safe hydraulic brakes with a mechanical reserve braking system, patented auto-poise control, centre-point steering and "Canada's safest body."

Churchill Pledges Party's Support To Conscription

London, April 1. (Repters)—Opposition Leader Winston Churchill delivered a sharp attack in House of Commons Monday on "subversive and degenerate elements" in the governments ranks who, by opposing their party's peacetime conscription policy, were threatening to pull Britain down after her recent victory, as they had "nearly brought us to ruin" during the war.

Churchill was speaking in a debate on the National Service Bill extending to 1954 the present transitional arrangements for compulsory callup, and involving 18 months full-time service in the regular army, navy and air force for every able-bodied Britain between 18 and 26, unless he is otherwise ineligible.

Pledging his party's full support to the measure, Churchill congratulated the government for having the courage to resist the challenge of the "crypto-communists and pacificts and other trends to leftwing opinion which they (the government) have exploited to the full in days gone by and which they now very naturally and healthily resent."

Labor Minister George Isaacs opened the debate by declaring that without conscription Britain could not possibly meet her immediate defence requirements.

The debate is expected to reach a climax tomorrow night when "rebel" Labor members force the issue to a division on a motion demanding rejection of the conscription proposal for conscientious, manpower, financial and foreign policy reasons.

Conscription was not only necessary to ensure the safety of the country, but it also was the most democratic way of providing the forces required, Isaac said.

"There is no idea in our minds to get in a fight with anybody, but, on the other hand, somebody might want to have a fight with us, and so, for that reason, we must be prepared to stand our ground and defend our country. We must maintain a reasonable state of preparedness."

Soaring Like A Bird in New Type of Glider

(By Guy Halferty in the Christian Science Monitor)

"This thing could fly from Los Angeles to San Francisco on three gallons of gas!" shouted Ted Nelson as he hauled back on the stick and headed for blue sky after using up only a short slab of runway. "Hang on — I'll show you what I mean!"

"Hang" was the best word he could have used. The Dragonfly, first auxiliary-powered soaring plane in the nation, bobbed and dipped through the dry desert air, its tiny, 25-horsepower engine snarling like an irritated hornet as the chubby, little, toy-like propeller back of the double cockpit chewed for altitude.

"We're looking for a thermal," hollored Nelson. "It's an updraft of warm air from the ground. We want to catch one and ride up with it. Whoa! Feel that!" The ship lurched like a stricken canoe. Nelson veered off to the left, circled around until it lurched again. "There's a thermal. Now we'll get a ride!"

He shut off the dinky engine—and turned on one of the wildest rides any sports lover could ask for.

• • •

In the sudden quiet of the sky, we were, very much "all alone", with nothing but a jazzy-looking contraption and an unseen thermal to prove that gravity isn't necessarily the irresistible force it has been pictured.

Now we were soaring—jockeying joyfully for altitude in a spiraling updraft that was lifting us at 15 feet a second.

With his eyes scanning the instruments — air speed, rate-of-climb, and altitude — Nelson manoeuvred the little ship in the flue of the thermal to an altitude of 3,000 weet above California's cactus-dotted Antelope Valley. Then satisfied that he had milked that thermal dry, he straightened the ship out and we sailed noiselessly off across the sky to find some more thermals.

Not long ago, two of Nelson's pilots, stayed aloft for almost five hours in a Dragonfly on less than three gallons of gas. They covered 83 ground miles and hit an altitude of 12,100 feet. "They would have stayed longer", assured Nelson, "but they got hungry."

• • •

The Dragonfly is the creation of Ted Nelson, industrial manufacturer, and William Hawley Bowlus, veteran glider pilot who flew his first motorless contraption near San Diego in 1910.

Nelson's financial backing and engine savvy, combined with Bowlus' vast store of aeronautical design and soaring know-how, have brought forth a flying machine that answers a stubby old problem long vexing to aviation: How can you and I fly for fun without spending a fortune?

With a 50-pound, 25-horsepower engine and a three-gallon gas tank, they have licked both the light airplane's fuel costs and the soaring plane's laborious towing problems.

They have produced a 550-pound two-place auxiliary-powered glider that has just survived a year's exhaustive Civil Aeronautics Authority tests.

• • •

The Dragonfly, utilizing its four-cylinder magnetism engine, is the nation's first craft—other than its experimental prototype, the Bumblebee—ever to be able to carry an engine of sufficient power and lightness to permit the sport of soaring and at the same time provide the added safety and convenience of the engine.

Its three-gallon gas tank allows for an hour's intermittent cruising at 65 miles an hour, which means you have power when you need it, and pure birdy fun as long as you can catch your thermals.

Thus it is the first airplane to be able to take off under its own power, hop from thermal to thermal — without power — and come down several hundred miles away with the auxiliary engine to enable the pilot to locate his field, follow the traffic pattern, land, and taxi off the field.

Sudden Death Separates Brothers — Joseph Menard, 69, looks at the covered body of his brother Mederic, 67, who died suddenly while crossing a busy Montreal intersection a few minutes earlier. The two brothers, who had been living together for more than 30 years, were on their way to a bank to cash a government cheque which Mederic regularly received for his services in the First Great War.

Warm Houses Charm Wife Of Australian Diplomat

Ottawa (CP)—No one told Mrs. Francis Forde, wife of Australia's High Commissioner, about Canada's central heating system, but more than one well-wisher gave her a chilly description of the Canadian winter. Consequently it was no small wonder that when Mr. and Mrs. Forde and their four children, arrived in Ottawa early this year from Queensland, Australia, they came prepared for Arctic temperatures.

"I brought every kind of warm clothing I could lay my hands on —even to a woolen evening-dress," laughed Mrs. Forde. "But your houses are so warm that it's impossible to wear such heavy clothes indoors."

This isn't the first visit to North America for the gracious wife of Australia's representative in Canada. During the war she accompanied her husband on trips throughout the United States and Britain.

But it is the first time abroad for the Forde children although they know their own country from coast to coast.

"I think it's important that they travel, and Marcia finds the geography she studied in school has made it easier for her in Canada," said Mrs. Forde.

Marcia, 17, graduated from high school before leaving home, and plans on going to a Canadian university in the fall—possibly to McGill where 19-year-old Mary is in third year of an arts course.

Schools Are Similar

Ten thousand miles may be a long way to move a family in which there are children but not so far when it is from one part of the British Empire to another Mrs. Forde has found the educational systems of the two dominions so similar that her four children have fitted into Canadian schools with little difficulty. Pretty, dark-haired Clare, who is 15, and 11-year-old Francis Gerard both are attending day school in Ottawa.

And mothers of Canadian girls now living in Australia may rest assured their daughters are every bit as much at home as the Forde family now feels in Canada. Canadian girls many of whom married Australians during the war, are living in all parts of Australia. Some miss their Canadian Winter, but then they're indulging in surfing and tennis—sports which Canadians may enjoy only in summer.

While Mrs. Forde herself hasn't had a chance yet to see a hockey game, she already is familiar with the sport through Francis who is as keen on hockey as any Canadian boy.

All in all, Mrs. Forde doesn't believe distance is as awesome a thing as it was 10 years ago. The war and plane travel reduced the size of the world.

Finally, the Forde family finds Canadians "very warm-hearted." "We greatly appreciate the welcome extended to us and really feel that a bond of friendship exists between the sister dominions," concluded Mrs. Forde.

BRITON FINDS HOME REALLY NOT CASTLE

London (CP)—The Englishman's home may be his castle but —said a Commons statement—268 government officials have power to authorize inspection and investigation involving entry into private houses and premises without a search warrant.

The statement, tabled by Glenvil Hall, secretary to the treasury, said the number of officials exercising the power in practice was 65.

Port Talbot, Glamorgan, Wales, April 1—(Reuters)—More than 200 claimants — the youngest 3 years old and the oldest 84 — to the $800,000,000 fortune of Robert Edwards, who emigrated from Wales to the United States in the 18th century, yesterday gathered at the Grand Hotel here.

The fortune consists of land on which the business section of New York now stands. In his will, which was lost for many years, Edwards directed that his property be divided among his five brothers and one sister in Glamorgan.

One solicitor handling the affairs of one branch of the family, said: "It sounds very fantastic. I am anxious to hear all the details and see documentary proof."

Thomas J. Jones, a miner, said he represented the fifth generation of his family. He had known about the fortune for years because his great grandmother who was born in 1813 was invited by Edwards to emigrate to the United States as his housekeeper but she refused to go.

Another claimant from Aberdare produced from his pocket what he claimed to be a copy of the will, but he said it was not for publication.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, March 31 (CP)—Prices Board officials are reaching for the headache powders every time they are reminded of the current inquiry into the railways' application for higher freight rates.

Privately, some of these officials are saying that the granting of a 30-per-cent general increase, such as is asked by the roads, would blow the lid off prices together.

While it is considered virtually impossible to calculate the percentage rise in commodity prices that a one-third jump in rates would create, Dominion officials say it would amount to considerably more than that by the time it reached the consumer. Its effects would be cumulative, starting with freight on the raw materials, and winding up with the retailer's markup of maybe 20 or 30 per cent on top of the original 30.

Besides this, there is another cause for agitation on the part of the Prices Board. That is the circumstances that this custodian of the price line will be the final arbiter, after the transport commissioners render their opinion, on whether increases do go into effect.

Thus if an increase is proposed by the commissioners, the Prices Board will be squarely on the hot spot.

Meat: Now that meat rationing is discontinued, some capital sources are predicting a seasonal shortage of meats in butchers' shops in the in-between period when spring ends and cattle leave the barns to feed on the first pastures of the approaching summer.

They recalled that such periods shortages have occurred in recent years and predicted that one likely would develop this season but added that it would not be serious enough to warrant a re-imposition of meat rationing. At most, it might last two weeks.

When your BACK ACHES...

Backache is often caused by lazy kidney action. When kidneys get out of order excess acids and poisons remain in the system. Then backache, headache, rheumatic pain, disturbed rest or that 'tired-out' feeling may soon follow. To help keep your kidneys working properly—use Dodd's Kidney Pills. The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Groucho Marx, the eldest of the three comical brothers, is all set to burst upon an unsuspecting public in a new guise, without his brothers and without his famous black grease-paint moustache.

The picture in which the reconverted Groucho will be seen is "Copacabana," set for release in the summer.

So as not to make the change too sudden, Groucho will be wearing a handlebar moustache which he says he grew himself, "but next time I may appear without any moustache at all."

"I'm tired of doing the same old routine, in painted moustache and frock coat, on the make for a dowager," he said.

For Ballet Fans.

Ballet fans have a treat in store for them in the forthcoming "Carnival in Costa Rica," Twentieth Century-Fox's new musical, which has dances by Leonide Massine.

The great dancer-coreographer not only composes the numbers for Vera-Ellen and the chorus to dance but also appears himself in a wonderful classical Spanish sequence.

His appearance is not billed in the screen credits but he is introduced as "a great dancer who has come to our fiesta."

Alexis Gets Her Wish.

Some time ago Alexis Smith, the stately beauty from Penticton, B.C., wished out loud that she could have the chance of playing "a plain, healthy American girl" for a change and she gets her wish in "Stallion Road." In this she has the part of a horse breeder who mostly wears dungarees.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Dewby S. Keptic eyes with suspicion our Horse Sense easy method of determining tricks. We merely count one for each high card (face or king or queen) and one for each short card (short of three).

His method is different. He combines aces, kings, queens, jacks, and tens into groups. He gives each group a value, usually fractions. He calls these grouped values honor tricks.

So many and a half honor tricks are expected to produce a certain different number of tricks. For instance, four and a half expects to take seven tricks; five and a fraction, eight tricks; and so on.

This, as you can see, is a cumbersome method. It sounds expert. So, anything that is easier or simpler seems less efficient to him. He cannot believe that the Horse Sense count is more accurate.

My north hand in a deal is displayed here:

♥ Q 5
♦ K 10 9 6 5
♣ Q 7 6 4 2

This hand contains six tricks; three high cards, a short heart, two short spades. Easy to count. Easy to understand. And it is the number of tricks my hand will take in co-operation with partner.

My partner opened with a diamond. Bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. With a biddable club suit, my first response is a takeout to clubs.

Five tricks are promised by an opening one bid. So, with my six, our pair should take a total of 11 tricks with what I already know. These are enough to make a game contract.

The signal for showing tricks enough to help make a game is a one-jump. But an immediate one-jump also guarantees two sure tricks. Of which my hand has none. So, I must not jump. At least, not yet.

Thus, my first reply is a non-jump takeout to two clubs. Being a takeout to a new suit, it is forcing for one round.

The partner who crowds winds up in the clouds.

Picton

Picton (Special) — The beautiful Spring flowers on the high altar of St. Mary Magdalene's Church on Sunday were in memory of Mrs. Annie Mae McLean—placed there by her family; and in memory of Mr. and Mrs. W.J. Hambly placed there by their son Cyril Hambly.

Mr. Phil Dodds, news editor of the Picton Gazette, has entered St. Michael's hospital, Toronto, where he will undergo a major ear operation.

Rt. Rev. John Lyons administered confirmation to a large class of candidates that included four adults on Sunday evening. Bishop Lyons delivered a very fine sermon stressing the fact that only would world peace be possible if individuals and nations exemplified Christ's teaching in their dealings with their fellow men or fellow nations.

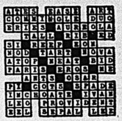
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle



400,000 Miners Quit Coal Pits On Lewis' Order

Washington, April 1 — (AP)— John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers quit their soft coal pits today beginning a six-day stoppage to observe the tragic deaths of 111 Centralia, Ill. miners.

The 400,000 A.F.L. union members began the mourning period at one minute after midnight starting on the east coast and extending to the Pacific through the time zones.

All was quiet in the United States' anthracite mines, too. The hard coal miners laid aside picks and shovels for traditional holiday observances, honoring past president John Mitchell and Lewis.

Industry, in the main, seemed unperturbed. No coal-dependent firms were expected to curtail production. Lewis' timing of the "holiday" comes in a period when little coal is brought to the surface.

Miners traditionally don't work April 1, and few work on Thursday or Good Friday — Saturday normally is a day off. Wednesday is the only day in which full production is lost.

Only in a scattered few Illinois shafts, manned by members of the Progressive Mine Workers (Independent), was industry-vital bituminous coal reaching the surface.

Even so, 2,000 members of the Progressive's largest local — at Bend, Ill. — in effect backed the Lewis order for national mourning among miners. They refused to work yesterday and then voted $7,800 to families of the 111 mine blast victims.

Lewis said he was legally empowered to call the memorial stoppage — that it was authorized by a clause in the union's 1941 contract with the operators and had carried over in every succeeding pact.

However, Walter Thurmond, secretary of the Southern Coal Operators' Association at Charleston, W. V., flatly called the six-day mourning "subterfuge" adding:

"Lewis was forestalled by the courts in his attempted strike as of April 1 and this ostensible mourning period is only a method of bringing to pass by subterfuge what he could not accomplish by direct action."

GAS INCREASED CENT

Toronto, April 1 — (CP)—Imperial Oil Limited yesterday announced a one-cent a gallon increase in the wholesale price of gasoline in Ontario and Quebec, due to higher costs, and said that the price also was being increased in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Controls Off Cream, Rubber; Sugar Price Up

Ottawa, April 1 — (CP)—Latest moves in the government's policy of orderly decontrol touched rubber and whipping cream today and allowed a cent-a-pound increase in sugar prices as unofficial predictions forecast a step soon to lift price ceilings on another wide range of articles both in and out of the Canadian household.

In quick succession these announcements came yesterday:—

1. Effective today sugar advances a cent-a-pound for all size packages at all trade levels to an average of nine cents a pound for refined. The Prices Board ascribed the increase to "greatly increased" costs of raw sugar.

2. Effective today limitations on butterfat content and the number of grades of cream sold to consumers are removed. Price of cream and fluid milk remain a matter of provincial milk control boards.

3. Effective today government controls of rubber, except for price and export restrictions, are lifted. This means the distribution of crude and natural latex returns to regular channels of trade for the first time since Aug. 26, 1941.

More on Way

Close on the heels of these announcements, an informed source said an announcement could be expected shortly lifting price ceilings from a large range of articles from household goods, including frigidaires and ranges, to bicycles and used automobiles.

He said though the "final decision" had not yet been made, it was possible the order — expectable probably this week — would lift possibly a third of the goods now under price ceilings out of that category.

The informed spokesman said the latest test of goods to be released from control would conform to the government's policy of "orderly decontrol" and that decisions on just what would be released from price ceilings would only be given final approval after close inspection of the various factors in the price control picture so as not to cause spiralling prices and inflation.

CONTROLS ENDED

Ottawa, April 1 — (CP)—Government control of rubber, except for price and export restrictions, ended at the close of business yesterday, Reconstruction Minister Howe announced last night.

SUGAR UP CENT A POUND

Ottawa, April 1 — (CP) — An increase of one-cent-a-pound in the retail price of refined sugar, effective today was announced last night by the Prices Board and ascribed to "greatly increased" cost of raw sugar.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma started to laugh out loud to herself while she was eating her grapefruit diet this morning, saying to pop, Really, William, I mean really, that was the most comical social blunder of yours last night.

I cant recall it, pop said, and ma said, Now never mind trying to get out of it by injured innocence. You know very well when Maud Hews interduced you to Mr. Green and Mr. Singer at the same time, you bowed to Mrs. Green in your most debbonaire, man of the werld manner, and said, "How do you do, Mrs. Singer." Not that it was anything serious. In fact everybody had a good harty laff, ma said.

Well naturelly, that was precisely the way I planned it, pop said, The evening had every indication of becoming a very dull affair, but after my little joke everything was gay and jolly, he said and ma said, My, now you're making a virtue of necessitty.

My dear, I believe you still have a gilty conscience about the terrific boner you made the ferst time we met the Bowsers, pop said, and ma said, What boner, for land sakes? We ferst met the Bowsers at the Archers house, and they had their great unwieldly St. Bernard dog with them. My, I'd just as soon think of walking into a person's house with a horse, she said.

Then you might as well ride in, pop said. Anyway, I still have to chortle when I think of how Mrs. Archer tried to interduce Mr. Bowner to you, and you walked over and took that big dog by the paw and said, "Delighted, Mr. Bow Wowser." I'll bet you still blush whenever you think of it, pop said, and ma said, Oh keep quiet and finish your coffee and laff your head off, what do I care.

The result being pop laffed all a ways to the front door.

Edmonton, April 1 — (CP) — Dr. W. G. Hardy pushed aside a professorial memorandum, scanned a page of his fifth novel, then took time off today to deny reports that his pet in the sport world — the International Ice Hockey Association — has been dissolved.

The dapper 49-year-old head of the University of Albert Classics department, who spends his holidays from school working on behalf of amateur hockey, announced that the I.I.H.A. was still very much alive and had not folded as reported from Middleton, N. C.

The Middleton dispatch was based on an interview with Hanzon Dowell, president of the C. A. H. A., who returned recently from Prague where he attended a meeting of Europe's controlling body, the Ligue Internationale De Hockey Sur Glace, of which Dr. Hardy was named vice president, with prospect of becoming president next year.

Dr. Hardy, whose latest novel has a working title of "Our path Emerges," formed the I.I.H.A. during the war period, and says the organization can be dissolved only by action of its own members at a regular meeting. Agreement between the National League, and amateur hockey is with the I.I.H.A. and it still holds.

Says He's Slowing Up

At the Prague pow-wow, L. I. H. G. heads thought it was unsporting of the I.I.H.A. to organize while the Ligue was in the thick of actual battle. But the I.I.H.A. was formed to establish Canada and not Europe as the dominating figure in world hockey, and it may be a while yet before its death is admitted.

Those who have read Dr. Hardy's "Turn Back the River" and "Father Abraham," a book society choice in Great Britain in 1935, look forward to the professor's "Our Path Emerges," a story of what happened to a family during pre-war and war years, set against a background of life in Canada and the United States.

People wonder at Dr. Hardy's inexhaustible energy but he says he's "slowing up actually and really rather lazy." He developed an ability to concentrate as one of seven children — he has three of his own — on his parents' farm home at Peniel, near Lindsay, Ont.

'Son of Eli' First Book

His first book, "Son of Eli," published in 1929, depicted farm and city life in Ontario, which he grew to know so well in his years of schooling through to the University of Toronto.

His best seller was "All the Trumpets Sounded," published in England last June but which sold 10,000 copies before publication. The professor's works seem to have attracted more interest in Great Britain and the United States than in his own country—and critics will tell you that it's because there's still a spirit of puritanism evident in Canada.

In his novels and many of his 100 short stories, the professor heavies on history. If you considered there is spice and life to his books, Dr. Hardy would explain that his concept of the historical novel is that it should if possible show people as real, living persons and not legendary figures.

President Says Game Handled Well in Boston

(By The Canadian Press)

President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League, a witness of the Saturday night game in Boston between the Bruins and Montreal Canadiens, yesterday defended the ferereeing of George Hayes and said that the arbiter had "handled the game quite competently."

Campbell made the statement after general manager Frank Selke of Canadiens branded Hayes' offociating as the "worst I've ever seen in my life."

For the first time since 1942, the Memorial Cup finals for the Canadian junior hockey championship will be played this year in Western Canada, vice-president Al Pickard of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced. The site, however, depends upon the winner of the present series between Brandon Elks and Moose Jaw Canucks for the western title.

Paul (Daffy) Dean, former St. Louis Cardinal pitcher, announced last night he will formally sign a contract to manage Ottawa in the newly-organized Canadian Baseball League next week. He said he already has telegraphed his acceptance of terms and will leave Little Rock, Ark., for Ottawa April 15.

Indications he has designs on Tony Zale's middleweight title, welterweight champion Ray Robinson has signed for a 10-round match with Georgie Abrams, veteran 160-pounder, in Madison Square Garden May 16.

FIGURES SHOW IRISH TO WIN MEMORIAL CUP

Expert Has Called the Winner Three Times in the Last Four Years

By STEVE ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The only known statistical analysis of Canadian Junior hockey puts Toronto St. Mikes' and Brandon Elks —currently still in the playdowns—smack into the Dominion final but balks at a flat decision on which will take the Memorial Cup.

The analyzer, cloaked in anonymity and a dog-eared pile of record books, deduced the finalists after a fortnight's fevered work with slide-rule and calculating machine. The findings were based on virtual X-ray examination of this season's win-and-goal statistics in the light of four previous years of records.

"This analysis never lies in doping the finalists," Mr. System told me. "But there is a mystery-element I can't be sure of in the east-west final—some hidden factor I haven't been able to isolate. Confidentially, at first glance the figures seem biased toward the east, but that may not be what they mean."

Confidentially, I found that Mr. System himself is a westerner, although he has resided in the east for almost 15 years.

"In the last four years, the analysis has named the champions three times. It called Winnipeg over Oshawa in 1943, Oshawa over Trail in 1944 and St. Mikes over Moose Jaw in 1945. But last year that eastern prejudice showed up in the figures. They gave St. Mike's the edge. But Winnipeg took four of seven. I'm trying to figure why."

"That's where Mr. System grabs his pencil and burrows back into his mow of copy-paper and hockey clippings. Over his shoulder, it was possible to divine the 1947 form chart for four of the teams still in the playdowns:

	P.	Pct.	Rating
Toronto	45	.91	47
Montreal	37	.89	39
Brandon	38	.83	37
Moose Jaw ..	47	.71	22

The figures apparently represent games played, percentage won, goals for and against and the rating" that was kicked around by Winnipeg last year after looking good for three years in a row.

"St. Mike's and Elks are in, there's no doubt of that. But that 10-point margin in the ratings may not be enough to pull St. Mike's through in the final. In 1944 and 1945 the east had 31 and 24 points to spare in the ratings—that was enough to win. But last year the east had 14 points and lost. In this analysis, the east needs a real margin to win, it seems."

Then he turned back to his logarithm tables looking for what the west has that doesn't show in the statistics.

Sports Shorts from Britain

London, April 1 (CP)—An indication that Britain is giving way on broken-time payments to athletes competing in international events was given by Lord Burghley, chairman of the organizing committee for the 1948 Olympic Games, who said there should not be too much "rigidity" over this question.

Presiding at the annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Association, Lord Burghley who also is president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation said:

"What I feel on this question is that the real amateur principles must not be lost, but if there are hard cases—as I believe there are—we should consider them carefully with an open frame of mind."

Lord Burghley's remarks were made a few days after it was announced a special meeting of the I.A.A.F. would be held in London June 9-10 to discuss the controversial broken-time payment question. The special meeting was called after demands from some European countries to "settle" the problem.

Sports leaders from England, Scotland and Wales are in France to study French methods of physical recreation and sports training.

The party—chosen sports leaders of the Central Council of Physical Recreation, co-ordinating council of 154 governing bodies embracing all the sports in Britain—were invited by the French ministry of education to take part in a normal French advanced leaders' training course.

The course embraces all sporting activities in France, from athletics to fencing.

Twenty-two daring young women shocked their parents and made history July 13, 1747. Members of two Sussex village cricket teams, they travelled to London to play a cricket match but, according to a newspaper of the time, "the company broke in so that it was impossible for the game to be played out, some of the women being very much frightened and others hurt and it could not be finished until the morning.

Now, 200 years later, descendants of the original teams are to meet for a return match. The game is to be played in August at Priory Park, Chichester.

Fred Whittaker of Vancouver who came to England to fill a centre-forward position with Notts County in the southern section, third division of the English football league, failed to impress in that position and now is a fullback on the club. He has proved a finished player in the latter spot.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

N. A. (Pete) Beach, popular athletic director of Albert College was elected president of the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association held in Toronto recently. Other officers of the 1947-48 year are vice-president, B. T. Griffiths, Welland High School and secretary treasurer, T. E. Moffatt, Tweed High School.

• • •

Present were delegates from all four districts, namely Niagara, Georgian Bay Lake Shore and Bay of Quinte. K. M. Thom, Oshawa Collegiate Institute was in the chair until the new officers were installed. The CASSA will be in very capable hands during the coming season, for the amiable Pete brings a wealth of experience and efficiency to the chair. He has been connected with schools sport for a number of years, and according to the new slate of officers the COSSA appears to be on the threshold of one of its best years.

• • •

While some discussion took place concerning the possibilities of grouping schools in COSSA under the "A", "B" and "C" classes according to numbers of students in schools the matter was laid over for further study.

• • •

It was decided, however, that 12 boys could be dressed and played in junior and senior boys basketball championship tournaments and 14 girls in each of the junior and senior girls series. It was also agreed that 24 players could be dressed and played in junior and senior Rugby inter-district playoff games.

• • •

The meeting also endorsed a recommendation that the COSSA executive work in close conjunction with the executive of the Canadian Secondary Schools Association towards securing permanent secretaries for the various secondary schools associations.

• • •

Championship tournaments for the next school year were set as follows: Junior and senior rugby, semi-finals, November 15, 1941, with the finals to be played on Nov. 22. Junior and senior girls and junior and senior boys basketball tournaments will be held the first weekend before Good Friday, 1948. A senior hockey championship playoff was also decided on, if districts find it possible to sponsor leagues.

• • •

The Second Annual Queen's University basketball tournament scheduled for the Queen's gymnasia on April 9, 10 and 11 is attracting widespread interest in various schools of the district. Albert College, Belleville Collegiate Institute, Picton and Trenton will be officially represented from this district in the hoop round robin which is composed of A, B and C sections, each classified according to student membership.

• • •

Eighteen teams will take part in the tournament which will be the largest of its kind in Canada, and by its scope will give insight on future basketball stars who may attend the university in the future. The district represented will be that bordered by Oshawa on the west, Cornwall on the east and Renfrew on the north.

• • •

Last year's defending champions Peterborough and Cobourg have already entered their squads while new teams from Ottawa Glebe, Renfrew, Trenton, Almonte and Picton will be present. Convener of the tournament is "Jake" Edwards, efficient physical training director of the university.

• • •

Games will start at eight in the morning and will be played continuously until 11 at night. Playing time for each game will be approximately one hour. Tentative plans call for 10 games to be played on Wednesday, April 9; 15 games on Thursday and finals and semi-finals on Friday. Sleeping accommodation will be provided free of charge by the Queen's Athletic Board of Control and arrangements for inexpensive meals have been made with the Students Union.

• • •

"A" Section, schools with male registration of over 500:

Peterborough vs. Ottawa Glebe.

"B" Section, schools with male registration between 160 and 500:

Belleville vs. Regiopolis.
Renfrew vs. Brockville.
Cornwall bye.
Cobourg bye.

"C" Section, schools with male registration under 160.

Albert College vs. Almonte.
Prescott vs. Napanee.
Picton vs. Kemptville.
Trenton vs. Gananoque.

• • •

The action of the world wrestling scene has changed mightily since Belleville fans saw their last matches here last year. The big event of course was the winning of the World Heavyweight Championship by Canada's one and only Whipper Billy Watson of Toronto. The Whip beat Wild Bill Longson who had held the title for five long years. Watson performed the feat first in St. Louis right in Longson's home town and then on the re-match in Toronto two weeks later he made it stick by gaining the first finishing fall the former champion had lost in over seven years.

• • •

Now the offers are pouring in thick and fast for the popular Canadian. Already Billy has defended his title eight times in as many cities and has broken all existing records for crowds in St. Louis, Buffalo, Boston, Baltimore and Cleveland. Next week he has three matches in far-off Texas and Manager Phil Lawson has offers for the two of them to fly to Australia and New Zealand to defend Watson's British Empire Title which he also still holds. The latter offer is from Paris, France, where the old-time great Henri DeGlane is now the biggest promoter in Europe.

• • •

Watson was held to a draw by Lou Thesz the Texas State champion recently and Wild Bill Longson is screaming for another match. The wrestling Duseks (all four of them are afer Billy), and so is the strange character "The Mummy" whose face has yet to be seen in a ring. Brother Jonathan the Mormon Elder has recovered from his spine injury and wants only to get the Whip in the same ring. Speaking of injuries it looks as if Steve Casey will never wrestle again as a result of that bout in Boston when his back became un-jointed again. Ivan Rasputin also suffered a broken back (his second such injury) last December and has been in a cast ever since. Raspy gets out of his rigid harness next month and will spend the summer under the California sun trying to regain his strength.

DAVE CASTILLOUX LOSES CLOSE ONE TO DANNY WEBB

Former Canadian Lightweight Did Not Have Enough Steam for Dancing Negro

By BERT ALLEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 1—(CP)—Dave Castilloux put on a game show in what may have been the last fight of his career here last night but the 32-year-old boxing master wasn't good enough to reclaim the Canadian lightweight title he lost to Danny Webb last fall.

Webb, the perpetual motion kid himself, was too busy a fighter for Dave, especially in the late rounds, and the dancing Negro came through with a split decision in the bruising 12-round slugfest before 8,305 fans who contributed to a gross gate of $25,010.

While the Canadian Boxing Federation refused to recognize the affair as a title bout because both participants came in a pound and a half over the lightweight limit, it made little difference after Dany successfully defended his crown.

The fight was fairly even for the first nine rounds with Webb keeping on the move and throwing punches at a rapid-fire rate while Castilloux fought only in flurries, but got in the harder blows when he connected.

From the ninth round it was all Webb, as Danny won the 10th, 11th and 12th by wide margins. Webb landed at least 50 blows in succession in the 10th when he had Dave pinned in a neutral corner and flailed away with both hands. But tired as he was, Castilloux wouldn't go down.

Montreal, April 1 —(CP)— Newspapers can "bring out the beast" in hockey fans. At least, that's the view held by Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll after witnessing what happened in the blood-and-thunder contest Saturday night at Boston between the Bruins and Montreal Canadiens.

Carroll says that Boston sportswriters, with their accounts of the first two games in Montreal which were won by Canadiens, put the Boston fans in the frame of mind where the Habs were definitely persona non grata.

"This, of course, was calculated to bring out the beast in Boston hockey fans . . . "

Carroll goes on to relate a humorous press-box scene: "A Montreal reporter stood up in the press-box and fired off two cap pistols when Canadiens went two goals ahead in the first period. Somehow word got around that there was a maniac in the building who was carrying a couple of gats . . . The cops pounced on him en masse and stripped him of his weapons . . . but would not allow him to remain in the Gardens and he missed the third period."

Dink also says that the Boston hockey writers painted Murph Chamberlain as a "cross between Al Capone and John Dillinger, blaming him solely for the dents, abrasions, sprains and gashes worn by their noble Bruins."

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 1 — (CP) — The business of selecting apt and picturesque names for throughbred race horses, a fascinating pastime which produces such spectacular flights of imagination as "Same in Summer" for a horse foaled by Helen Winter, is exercising some of the best brains in New York these days . . . the occasion is a contest sponsored by the N. Y. World-Telegram, which invites readers to submit a maximum of five names apiece for a yearling colt by Impound out of Floradora Girl which seems destined to become one of the most publicized horses in racing history.

Gift Horse

To backtrack a little, the story of the nameless horse started when the World-Telegram criticized thoroughbred owners for racing their charges too extensively as two-year-olds . . . Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, master of Sagamore Farm, replied "Show me" by offering to donate a foal to the newspaper's sport department as a test case . . . The paper accepted and shares to cover the cost of keeping the gift colt were distributed among staff members, who now seek a name for their protege, preferably with a sporting or newspaper connotation.

What's in a Name

The final selection won't be made for some time, but contributions are published from day to day, including "Pound D'Or," submitted by John Kieran, radio quiz expert, and "Press Time," from Dr. A. H. McDannald, editor of the Encyclopedia Americana . . . Other suggestions include Banner Line, Flash Copy, First Run, Running Copy, Home Edition, Teletype, Newsbreak, Sporting Blood, First Lead, Bulletin, First Flare, Running Proof and Al's Gift.

BOSTON BRUINS IN BETTER SHAPE THAN LAST GAME

Canadiens Will be Weakened by Loss of Reardon, Out With Cut Tendon

Boston, April 1 — (AP)—Battle-scarred but still optimistic, Boston Bruins gave advance notice during a workout yesterday that they will go all out to even the Stanley Cup playoff with Montreal Canadiens tonight.

Canadiens meanwhile appear undisturbed by the Bruins 4-2 win Saturday night and are determined to register their third victory of the series and then wind it up Thursday night in Montreal.

Coach Dit Clapper of the Bruins reported that defenceman Moe Henderson is definitely out with a groin injury, and that Milt Schmidt, who was moved back for Saturday's tilt, will team up again with Clare Martin on defence.

Some of the bad news for Bruin followers was offset by the announcement that Jack Crawford's injured hip has responded well and he may see some action.

The Canadiens are sure to feel the loss of defenceman Kenny Reardon whose foot is in a cast as a result of a cut tendon, but his loss was offset by the return of Buddy O'Connor, who has been sidelined for the last 10 days with a fractured cheek bone.

One of the features of tonight's game will be the presentation to Eddie Shore of his Hockey Hall of Fame scroll. Mayor J. Stewart Crawford of Kingston, site of the ice game's shrine will make the presentation to the Boston hockey immortal, now owner of the Springfield, Mass., club of the American Hockey League.

PLAYOFFS OPEN

(By The Associated Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets and Hershey Bears, the American Hockey League's playoff finalists, open their best-of-seven championship series for the Calder Cup tonight in Hershey, Pa. Neither team has even won a playoff.

The first two games will be played in Hershey with the third and fourth games at Pittsburgh. If further games are necessary the fifth and seventh contests will be played at Hershey while the sixth will be at Pittsburgh.

HAMILTON TIGERS EARN SHUTOUT OVER HOLLINGER

Visitors Carried Sticks High and Lost Valuable Players Through Penalties

Hamilton, April 1 —(CP) — Goalie Art Childs earned a shutout as Hamilton Tigers handed Hollinger Greenshirts a 3-0 shellacking here Monday night in the first of the playofff series for the all-Ontario Hockey Championship.

With Hollinger carrying their sticks high and tending to play rough, the Tigers chalked up a singleton in the opener and a pair in the second, while the Northerners put their all into five minutes of the third period to no avail. Greenshirts suffered a heavy penalty with Lallo, defence star, spending six minutes in the box and Cecchini four. Cecchini was the only real casualty suffering a cut mouth from Bill Sherry.

Star of the Hamilton attack was Bert Peer 38-year-old veteran whose age did not prevent him from firing both middle frame goals. The first Tiger goal at 12.45 went to Johnny Conick, who took Clarence Shillington's pass and whipped the rubber over the prostrate goalie. That was the lone score until Peer got his first half way through the middle frame, turning Liscombe's pass into the corner of the net.

Hollinger's close checking baffled the Hamilton team, who tended to coast in the third period, and they lost the smooth play that carried them to their sixth straight O.H.A. title. For the visitors Cloutier, Wilson and Stewart looked the best, along with Cecchini, who kept goalie Art Childs busy with some fine rushes.

Bobby Laurent in Tiger livery shone behind Hamilton's blue line carrying the puck out of danger in the third period many times. Shillington and Ab Conick turned in useful efforts in Hamilton's No. 1 line.

The teams will play the second game of the best-of-five games here Wednesday night, then shift to Schumacher for games on Friday and Monday nights.

WINGS HAVEN'T BEAT LEAFS AT HOME THIS YEAR

Adams Expects Toronto to Bounce Back After Their Bad Game Saturday

Detroit, April 1 —(CP)— The return to home for the third game of their National Hockey League playoff "B" series with Toronto Maple Leafs brought little comfort today to Detroit's Red Wings who haven't beaten the Leafs here all year.

Manager Jack Adams, stimulated by an even break at Toronto in the first two games of the best-of-seven series, said only that Detroit "isn't downhearted" over its chances to reach the Stanley Cup finals.

At the same time, Adams wasn't crowing over Detroit's 9-1 victory that levelled the series last Saturday.

"Toronto was bad in that game, but not that bad," Adams said. "We're expecting the Leafs to bounce back and the record shows how much trouble they can be for us."

In 12 regular games with Toronto the Red Wings won only two — both on Toronto ice—and lost eight.

Adams said there would be no changes in the Detroit lineup that swamped the Leafs Saturday.

Harry Lumley, regular goalie, underwent an operation yesterday for a groin injury. Physicians said it was "successful" although he would remain in hospital for "some time."

St. Louis Cards Picked to Win National Loop

Tampa, Fla., April 1. (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals' infield should come to be recognized this year as one of the greatest in the history of baseball, and Manager Eddie Dyer's world champions most likely will win the National League flag by a decisive margin.

The foregoing is the principal fruit, so far as this writer is concerned, of six weeks spent wandering through the Spring baseball mart.

If pressed for a complete order of finish in the National, this observer would guess something like this: (1) St. Louis, (2) Brooklyn, (3) Boston, (4) Chicago, (5) Pittsburgh, (6) Cincinnati, (7) Philadelphia and (8) New York.

Brooklyn must have it to star, Pete Reiser, in the outfield day after day if the club is to be anywhere near its best.

Most recent reports on Pete's various injuries and ailments, however, seem to bear little hope that he is ready to lay a full season of his customary hell-for-leather baseball.

O.H.A. Finalists May be Decided This Weekend

Toronto, April 1 (CP)—Finalists in the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate "A" series will be decided this week, the O.H.A. announced yesterday.

Brantford and Barrie open a best-of-three semi-final series in Barrie Tuesday night and play the second game in Brantford Thursday night. If a third game is necessary it will be played Saturday night, venue to to be decided by the teams. Georgetown and Peterborough are playing in the other semi-final, meeting in Hamilton Tuesday night in the second game of their two-game total-goal series. They tied the first 5-5.

Four teams remain in the junior "B" series and one—Toronto De La Salle—has a bye in the final. Hamilton and Owen Sound are in a two-game total-goal series to decide which will enter the semi-final with Port Colborne. They play the second game at Owen Sound Wednesday night. Hamilton holds a seven-goal lead.

LIBERAL ELECTED

Mr. Buhay charged after conceding the victory to Mr. Hartt that there had been "an unprecedented campaign of slander and abuse against my party" and said campaign issues "were obscure and pushed aside by the crushing weight of high-priced propaganda and malicious lies and slander which the entire liberal hierarchy brought to bear on the people of Cartier."

Mr. Masse made no statement but said he would demand a recount because of alleged "irregularities" and that he would decide after the recount whether to protest the election.

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 1 —(CP)— Liberal members of the Commons today saw the results of the federal by-election in Cartier as a "serious setback" for Communism in Canada and the breaking of a "possible Communist stronghold in Montreal."

The results, termed by Prime Minister Mackenzie King a "very significant victory," brought favorable comment from parties on both sides of the Commons.

John Bracken, Progressive Conservative leader, said the "electors of Cartier are to be complimented on the fact that three-quarters of their number have turned their backs on Communism." The Canadian people "will wholeheartedly approve of that decision."

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, and Solon Low, Social Credit leader, were not immediately available for comment. None of the three opposition parties had a candidate in the by-election won by Maurice Hartt, the Liberal standard bearer.

Given Six Years.

The Cartier seat was held from 1943 up to last January by Fred Rose, a Labor Progressive, who was sentenced to six years in the penitentiary for participation in Russian-directed espionage activities in Canada. Michael Buhay, succeeding Mr. Rose as Labor Progressive candidate, placed third behind Mr. Hartt.

Mr. King made no reference to Communism in his statement telephoned to his office here from Virginia Beach, Va., where the Prime Minister is holidaying.

Prime Minister Pleased.

He said he was "greatly pleased" with the outcome of the by-election and added:—

"That is a very significant victory and one which will be appreciated in the whole of Canada and in many parts of the world, particularly in the United States and Great Britain."

As a result of the by-election the standing in the Commons is:

"Liberal 126; Progressive Conservatives 67; C.C.F. 28; Social Credit 13, Independent four; Bloc Populaire two; Independent Liberal one; Independent Progressive Conservative one; Independent C.C.F. one; L'Union des Electeurs one; vacant one, total 245.

GENERAL APPROVAL VOICED

Toronto, April 1 — (CP)—General approval was voiced by Ontario mayors and reeves available for comment last night on the province-wide campaign launched by Premier Drew to raise clothing for the people of Britain. Mayors of London, Ottawa and Windsor said they would do all they could. All reeves and mayors were called upon by the premier in the Legislature yesterday to set up receiving centres for clothing which will be forwarded to a clearing-house in Toronto for shipment overseas as soon as possible.

SARNIA RATE INCREASED

Sarnia, April 1 — (CP) — City council met last night to strike the tax rate for 1947 which it is anticipated will be set at 45 mills.

Alderman J. G. Church, chairman of the Finance Committee, said Monday he anticipated the recommendation that the budget be passed at a rate approximating that figure would pass with-

Stewart Against

The first amendment would have compelled all municipalities to vote on the question of cocktail lounges and Mr. Stewart, who recently resigned as speaker of the House, said the majority of the people in his constituency "feel they should be allowed to vote" on the question.

Attorney - General Leslie Blackwell, who raised government objections to the amendment, said restrictions of issuing licences were unacceptable because the Act was proclaimed January 1 and many licences had been issued. The motion would prevent issuance of further licences until next year and jeopardize the chances of application which have been reserved..

Calling Mr. Abbott's statement in the Federal House "the most bare-faced piece of political blackmail which has ever come to my attention," Premier Drew said the Minister's statement that further Dominion-Provincial conferences were "quite futile" until Ontario and Quebec were ready to enter taxation agreements was a "threat."

Claims Open Threat

"Not previous to this has there been such an open threat to the province," said the Premier. "This is the first time that a member of the Dominion government has baldly made statements that there will be no social security agreements until Ontario and Quebec submit to wholly inadequate proposals.

"When was such a club held over the heads of provinces since Confederation? This government has asked time and again that a new conference be called and has indicated its willingness to give up the fields of corporation and income taxes.... we urge the Prime Minister of Canada to make it clear that Mr. Abbott's remarks are not on behalf of the Dominion government."

The Lieutenant-Governor gave royal assent to 56 pieces of legislation after the House approved third reading of 16 bills.

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 5

"You'd say that no matter how you felt. And when I said you were looking perfectly swell, I meant it. You do. One of the things about a person born with good bone structure is that no matter how you feel, you look fine. Your bones don't let you down. I hope you like the apartment and all the liberties I've taken with it. I found you a maid, too, Bessie. She'll be in in the morning. I found a place for Rosie too, out in the country where she likes it."

Carol turned her head and smiled. "Is there anything you don't think off?"

"Plenty, darling. Plenty. And by the way, I'm having a bridge luncheon tomorrow for twelve and I want you to be there. It's important for you to be there looking your best and talking a blue streak. If it kills you, talk. They'll forget about it much sooner if you talk."

"All right. But I'd rather not."

"You got to tackle this town as I tackled it—with everyone talking about you and trying to look into your mind and trying to tear what they find apart. Don't kid yourself. They can't wait to see you. But unfortunately in a few weeks somebody will get married or have a baby or something and they'll stop talking about you. But the important thing at the moment is to keep going, be in evidence and look your stunning best."

"So that they won't be sorry for me?"

"Frankly, yes. But don't overlook one thing, baby. Any girl as attractive as you is a menace when she's free. You can't slip out and have a drink at the bar with somebody else's husband as you used to with nothing thought about it. I'm giving it to you straight. And you'll probably hear an earful from the husbands of your friends—how misunderstood they are and won't-you-have-lunch-with-me sort of things I hope you'll tell me the first man who makes a pass at you. Well, here we are."

On the third floor Freda put the key in the lock and opened the door. Carol stepped into the foyer. The living-room was large, a long, rather narrow room into which her furniture, a soft mixture of mulberry and green and gold, fitted nicely.

Yes, these were her things in this strange place...her scattered Oriental rugs on the newly polished floor, her small mahogany tables with the tall lamps, her phonographic-radio in the exquisite cabinet (a Christmas present from Bill a year ago), her mahogany dining-room furniture, polished, graceful, with the silver service on the sideboard and the silver candelabra on the table. A kitchen, black and white and anonymous as most kitchens were, a breakfast nook furnished with maple and with red and white checkered gingham at the windows and ivy shooting new buds from a familiar little, crystal hanging vase.

Freda said, leading the way, "There were two bedrooms and I didn't think you'd have need for two, so I made the smaller one into a sort of study and lounge room."

The chaise longue covered newly in chintz, the desk, books and a deep comfortable green chair were in the smaller room.

"And your bedroom," Freda said, opening the door.

Her bedroom. Only hers now. And once, planning the master bedroom of her house, she had thought that it must not be too feminine since Bill was to share it...This was a large room, too, furnished with the familiar blond maple pieces and the blue and white draperies and the dark blue broadloom rug. She stood quietly, missing something so much that there was a pain in her. Missing Bill's things, his silver brushes, his shoe trees that he always tried to hide under his bed...Missing in a room, furnished with all familiar things, a sense that it was also a man's room and the intimate room of marriage.

The closet door was slightly ajar. She did not see Bill's robe or the gay pyjamas he favored or his rack of ties...Her eyes rested on the highboy. It was empty, she knew. Empty of his things that had filled every neatly kept drawer. His highboy, easily accessible to his bed. Empty, it no doubt smelled of a recent scrubbing. Empty highboy, highboy without a master and a bed that would not be touched. Everything familiar, everything beautifully in place except Bill who would not come in and say, "Greetings!" and kiss her..kiss her sometimes with the dutiful peck of a tired young man who has had a tough day in town, but at other times kiss her with the lips of a lower.

Straightening because suddenly she was hurting all over, Carol turned to Freda.

"It's lovely! You're a wonder.."

"Thanks. I've had the time of my life. I've loved doing it. Ian says I've been so exhilarated it's worked all my temper out of me. Is there anything else I can do? Make you some coffee or unpack or run you a bath "

Carol pulled off her hat. "Certainly not. You've been wonderful It would have taken so much out of me to do this. Freda, I can't thank you enough."

"Oh, forget it. It was fun. There's one thing more. Your car is in the garage two blocks away ...I don't want to run, but you know Ian, darling. He wants to sit and listen to the radio and not say a word to me but he wants me to be there. Carol..."

"I'm all right, Freda. I know how you feel about Bill, too. It's funny but I resent the nasty things people have said and will say about him. When Bill's brother telephoned just before I left and cursed Bill horribly, I was angry with him and then angry with myself for being angry." She shook her head. "It doesn't make sense." Then, "Are they back? Do you know anything about her?"

Freda said, "Yes, they're back and they're at the Beaumont. That's all I know."

Carol nodded, "I'd like to know what she looks like and how she speaks. But most of all I'd like to know what she's thinking and feeling. I've tried to put myself in her position and I couldn't. It's no use to pretend, Freda, especially to you. No matter how plainly or how firmly I tell myself that it is over between Bill and me, I know I'll live in a state of waiting for him to come back to me which will probably last as long as I live...Isn't it horrible to know you're going to live like that?"

"That's what I was afraid of," Freda said quietly.

• • •

On the Saturday following Carol's arrival home Freda parked her car before the Beaumont Hotel. She was going to call on Evelyn Sturtevant...The thought had burst like a bomb in her mind and though she knew she would stir Ian's rare, but violent temper if he knew, she was, nevertheless, following her impulse. Fair always, it occurred to her that it was a dishonorable act to pay a social call which would appear to be the act of a potential friend when, actually, she merely wanted to meet Evelyn before anyone else met her and thus form her own opinion of her.

Right or wrong, dishonorable or not, she was a person to follow a strong impulse and certainly a strong one had led her almost to the door of the hotel. Not without misgivings she thought, "Well, here goes," and slid out of the car and walked, slim, attractive in black with silver foxes, to the hotel entrance.

Inside she went to the house telephone and asked for Mrs. Sturtevant.

A second later she heard a slow drawl, "Hello."

"Mrs. Sturtevant?"

"Yes."

"I am Mrs. Ian Kelly. I've known Bill for a long time and I—" She added quickly and with complete honesty "I'd like to meet you."

"Why, of course, Mrs. Kelly. By all means come up."

That voice—cool, indolent, cultured. Freda's eyes flashed with excitement, and color rose to her face. "I'm not presumptuous," she thought. "Not much! But in a few minutes I'll see the girl for whom Bill threw over Carol. I've done crazy things in my life, but this is probably the craziest."

In the elevator she remembered Carol as she had been at Freda's luncheon-bridge the day ofter her arrival. Carol had been the first to arrive at Freda's handsome Georgian home. That had been smart, Freda thought, Carol's arriving first and not making a belated entrance when all eyes would have been turned on her at once. She had looked lovely in a deep frock which had enchanced her sunburn and fair hair.

Carol had acted—at what sacrifice Freda could only guess—precisely as Freda had hoped she would. She had talked about the cruise and even mentioned the motion picture actress she had sen on the street in Reno. No tears, no sadness, no invitation for the sympathy of her friends who had been anticipating an embarrassing ordeal. And Carol had been the last to leave, knowing that at least her friends could not talk about her until they were out of Freda's home.

Freda lifted her hand and knocked at the door of Bill and Evelyn's suite. She hated being a little nervous and scared. The door was opened quickly and Evelyn was smiling and saying, "Do come in, Mrs. Kelly." Freda stepped into the sitting room. "It was so sweet of you to come. Not expecting any visitors and not knowing anyone here, I haven't dressed. Will you have tea or cocktails? I'll have them sent up."

Freda said, "I'll have tea, thank you. I never drink in the afternoon when I'm driving. And when I leave here, I'm picking up my son at his little friends' house."

So this was Evelyn, this tall, lithe, beautifully-formed girl in tailored blue crepe pajamas. This girl with a thin, olive-tinted, aristocratic face and dark hair which grew back from a pronounced widow's peak and the loveliest hands—and nails deep crimson—that Freda had ever seen. This seemingly gracious girl who walked with the grace of a cat and whose movements seemed studied, so perfect were they.

Then Freda looked directly into her eyes. They were almost green, eyes set rather close together above the small nose and rather large, crimson mouth. Evelyn's teeth were beautiful, large, even, white. But Evelyn wasn't beautiful, Freda thought stubbornly, she was beautiful only when you regarded the all of her. But one thing Freda could not deny was that Bill had married a girl of poise and background and social assurance.

Evelyn said, getting up to offer Freda a cigarette and to hold a silver lighter to it and then to light one for herself. "It's grand having someone to talk to. It was so thoughtful of you to come." The voice was still cool, indolent, cultered. "I don't know anyone here, of course, and we're not settled yet: We wanted to think a bit about where to live. Not that hotels are new to me. I've lived rather a good bit in them here and abroad. This one is particularly dreadful."

Freda said, "It is. I heartily agree with you. But transients usually pass through here on their way their way either to Washington or New York. That's perhaps why Clinton is sometimes called the city of homes."

"Really?" Evelyn asked pleasantly. "I didn't know that. I've only passed through it myself. You see, most of my life has been spent around New York and Long Island and in Europe. I went to school in Switzerland. That was when my father was something or other diplomatically in Italy. I've been back here only a few years and I've been living with my sister on Long Island or at her place in South Carlina."

Freda was aware that she was expected to be impressed. Though Evelyn spoke casually of her past, Freda was aware that it was information to be broadcast. Or was it? She thought, "Is she clever? I'm not sure. In the beginning you don't know whether some women are smart or dumb. She is superior. No doubt about that. She thinks she's done Bill a favor by marrying him and our town and all of us besides."

Freda said, "You've had an interesting life obviously. I hope you won't find it too dull here. I think that this is a fairly representative American community, somewhat better than most. Our social life centres about the country club and ,of course, our homes. How is Bill?"

Evelyn opened her eyes wide and her long lashes swept down and up again. She smiled a lovely, warm, young smile. "He's perfectly grand, and he'll be so glad to know I've met one of his friends."

The tea arrived and Evelyn poured as though pouring tea was to her a daily and serious ritual. Freda was conscious of her own nervous hands as she glanced not a little enviously at Evelyn's long, steady fingers. But though Evelyn was entirely gracious, Freda felt uneasy, because Evelyn's coolness and sureness made her feel small and obscure.

Perhaps Evelyn was secretly scorning her or laughing up her trim tailored sleeves. Words were unnecessary. Freda had lived by her feelings and that to Ian she called her "hunches" and made her lucky at games. Her feelings spoke now to tell her that Evelyn had no fears of Clinton or Bill's friends and no sympathy for the first wife. She was supremely confident that Clinton would be proud to accept her.

Freda felt the heat of her temper rising about her. The nerve of her, she thought! The colossal egotism of her! She isn't nervous. She isn't sorry. But she's a girl to tempt and fascinate a man. Poor Bill...He'll have so much to live up to with her. I wonder if she's ever counted laundry or if she has any idea of the rising price in food.

Evelyn straightened. Her look was young and appealing. "I hesitate to speak of this but—but as a second wife, I realize I have quite a handicap." She shrugged and even her shrug was a thing of grace. "Of course divorce is accepted quite matter of factly among my friends, and divorced people even remain the best of friends."

Alleged Counterfeit Ring Broken Open

Equipment Seized 'Finest Uncovered In This Province'

Rookie Cop's Suspicions Lead to Two Men's Arrest

Toronto, April 2—(CP)—An alleged counterfeit ring believed operating on a large scale cracked open today with the arrest of two men and seizure of equipment said by Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers to be "the finest and most complete ever uncovered in this province."

The arrested are Johann Rudolf Larsen, 39, of Sudbury, and James Sharpe, 46, of Toronto. Charged in Magistrate's Court with being in possession of counterfeit equipment, they were remanded one week without bail.

Their equipment was said to be capable of turning out hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of fake $5 and $10 bills. Investigations continue and further arrests are expected.

Police Constable Walter Heaslip, a motorcycle officer, became suspicious of an auto he saw at Dundas Street and Broadview Avenue in East Toronto and that led to the arrests and seizure. He questioned the driver of the car and took him and a companion to the police station.

Later city and Royal Canadian Mounted Police made the seizure at a rooming house on Spadina Avenue in west-central Toronto.

Negatives Found Say Police

They said they found 50 photographic negatives for use in counterfeiting hidden between the pages of a copy of the book, "Jane Eyre." They also found 24 engravings and said the equipment was evidently the work of an expert. They said they thought the equipment had been moved from Sudbury to Toronto in the last two weeks.

Constable Heaslip, who made the arrests after a mile-a-minute chase down Toronto streets, is a 26-year-old rookie policeman. He joined the force in 1946 and has twice been awarded merit marks for outstanding arrests.

Gaudy Neckties To Be Returned To Toronto

Montreal, April 2. (CP) — A shipment of men's neckties, considered by the court to be too immoral for Montreal because they bore painted replicas of nude women, is to be returned to the distributors—in Toronto.

Charges of selling articles that would affect the morality of the district were laid in police court yesterday against Georges Daignault, a clerk, and the Grover Chain Shirt Shop, Limited. The clerk and his employers pleaded guilty.

Antonio Lamer, city police attorney, told the court the prosecution would be satisfied if court costs were imposed.

"We only wish to let these people know that they cannot do this sort of thing in Montreal," he said.

The court clerk asked where the seized goods should be sent.

"To our distributors in Toronto," replied the representative of the store.

There were chuckles in the court as the clerk added: "To Toronto the Good".

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 2—(CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m. — Throughout Southern Ontario this morning temperatures are in the middle thirties and rain is falling. Over Northern Ontario skies are generally clear with temperatures well below freezing. A weak disturbance near Windsor is moving east slowly and will pass south of Lake Erie and Ontario today. Rain with normal temperatures will prevail throughout Southeastern [illegible]rio today becoming clear [illegible]oler on Thursday. In North[illegible]tario clear cold weather w[illegible]vail today and Thursday.

Boys Torture Baby

Toronto, April 2 (CP)—Three boys are slated to appear in York County juvenile court today in connection with the torture yesterday of a four-year-old baby boy. The child Melvin Wolfe, had been pricked about the face and forehead with a pin taken from his own diaper and had been almost strangled by a crude rope noose.

Chas. McCullough Canadian Clubs' Founder Dies

Hamilton, April 2 —(CP)— Founder of the Canadian Club movement, Charles R. McCullough, 82 died today at his home. Canadian Clubs are businessmen's groups which arrange luncheons at which speakers discuss national affairs.

Born in Bowmanville, Mr. McCullough taught in business colleges in Belleville, and in Hamilton. Helped organize the organization known as Federated Business Colleges, later re-named the Business Educators Association of Canada. In 1903 he entered the engraving business and later became president of the Ontario Engraving Company.

Two Are Killed In Train Wreck

Armstrong, Okla., April 2 — (AP) — The Missouri-Kansas-Texas (Katy) special passenger train and a freight train engine sideswiped here today, killing two persons and injuring several others.

At Durant, one hospital reported several persons from the train wreck were still in the emergency ward and more were arriving.

The engineer and fireman on the passenger train were reported killed, the engineer on the freight injured, and several passengers on the Texas special hurt.

First reports gave the following account:

The engine of the passenger train and one passenger car were overturned and four other cars jumped the track. The engineer and firemen were crushed to death and acetylene torches are being used to extricate them.

Dying Warrior's Wish Fulfilled, King, Queen Leave Hall to Greet Him

By LOUIS WULFF

Johannesburg, South Africa, April 2 — (Reuters) — The King and Queen fulfilled the wish of a dying man when they left the city hall at Benoni, in the East Rand, today to speak to Charles Maurius Johnsen, 76, who is being kept alive by injections.

Two doctors attending Johnsen said they were amazed at the way in which he rallied today.

Johnsen has been bedridden 10 months and doctors have been expecting him to die at any time.

Last night he polished his war medals, dating back to the Matabele Wars in 1896 and 1897, and insisted on being dressed by 6 a.m. He went to the city hall in a wheel chair.

While waiting for the Royal Family to arrive he was given several injections.

The King and Queen were told about him and they said they would like to meet him.

Johnsen said he had seen them at the Coronation — but had not received a Coronation Medal.

The King asked Johnsen for his address saying that he would see that the medal was sent to him.

The King and Queen looked at his ribbons and medals and, on learning of his long record — he dyed his grey hair in 1939 with boot polish and served in North Africa with the Imperial Light Horse as a cook — the Queen said:

"You are a great warrior. You have served your country magnificently. Well done indeed."

MACLEAN GIVEN FIVE-YEAR TERM IN TORSO CASE

Evelyn Dick's Father Guilty of Being An Accessory After The Fact in Killing

Hamilton, April 2 — (CP) — Donald MacLean, 69-year-old father of Mrs. Evelyn Dick and former street-car company janitor, today was sentenced to five years in penitentiary on a charge of being an accessory after the fact in the torso-slaying of his son-in-law, John Dick. He pleaded guilty yesterday.

Except for three weeks last month when he was free on bail, the heavyset, ruddy-faced MacLean already has been in jail a year awaiting trial.

The sentencing of MacLean brought to a close the trials resulting from finding of the torso of John Dick, 40-year-old Hamilton streetcar driver, on Hamilton mountainside on March 16, 1946.

The elderly MacLean had been charged with murder in the Dick slaying. Yesterday, the case was taken from the jury and an acquittal was directed, after which the court under Mr. Justice A. M. LeBel proceeded with the charge of being an accessory.

That was what had resulted in the trials following discovery of John Dick's dismembered body just over a year ago:

Mrs. Donald MacLean, charged with murder in the Dick slaying; the charge was withdrawn at preliminary hearing after which she became a Crown witness.

Evelyn Dick charged with murder in the Dick slaying, first was convicted, won appeal, was acquitted at her second trial. Then she was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to life imprisonment on a charge of murder in the slaying of an infant son.

So that today's sentencing of Donald MacLean wound up a series of trials with no one convicted of the murder of John Dick.

But the legal proceedings were not ended. The Crown is appealing the acquittal of Mrs. Dick in the murder of John Dick. The defence is appealing the sentence of life imprisonment—but not the manslaughter conviction —of Mrs. Dick in the baby death.

Crown Counsel T. J. Rigney, K.C., of Kingston, yesterday interrupted the MacLean hearing by announcing that he had no more evidence to offer.

The Crown and defence counsel Walter Tuchtie, with Mr. Justice Lebel, had been in conference from the noon hour on procedure.

Mr. Rigney went before a special grand jury summoned for the occasion, to outline the evidence already heard by the Supreme Court jury trying MacLean on the murder count. The grand jury returned a true bill

NewfoundlandDelegates To Consult With Canada On Future of Island

St. John's, Nfld. April 2 (CP) —Seven members of the National Convention were chosen by secret ballot yesterday to go to Ottawa some time in June to consult with the Canadian government on economic and political matters relating to Newfoundland's future, it was learned today.

The delegation will comprise F. G. Bradley, chairman, Hon. R. B. Job, G. F. Higgins, Rev. L. Burry, J. R. Smallwood, C. Ballam and T. Ashbourne.

They will leave for the Canadian capital after the return to Newfoundland of a delegation flying to London April 24 for similar discussions with the Dominions office. This was said likely to be some time in June.

Newfoundland, formerly a British Dominion, has been governed by a governor in commission since 1934, when the legislature was suspended pending reconstruction of the Island's finances. A national convention was elected last year to recommend possible forms of government to be decided by a national referendum.

Walkout Will Mean a Loss of 238,000 Tons of Sorely-Needed Coal

By JAMES DEVLIN

Essen, Germany, April 2 — (AP)—A one-day strike involving nearly 300,000 men in 171 Ruhr coal mines was ordered by trade union leaders today as a protest against food shortages. The walkout will mean a loss of about 238,000 tons of sorely-needed coal.

The decision was taken by an overwhelming vote of 50 mine union leaders after a three-hour session in the nearby coal mining town of Bochum, where 4,000 miners struck earlier in the day.

The output of coal in the Ruhr mines has been declining steadily since March 21 because of sporadic strikes and general unrest over failure of British and German administrators to fulfill promised food ration quotas.

The one-day stoppage was set for tomorrow.

There was no immediate comment from British authorities. British officials earlier, however, had said that a halt in Ruhr production, upon which the economy of Germany and other European countries is largely dependent, would be "catastrophic."

The Bochum miners walked out as part of a general strike and demonstration in that city which apparently was intended to give moral support to the trade union conference.

Demonstrations, following up similar protestations which began last week in the British zone of occupation, also were being held at Neuss and Wesel, but scheduled protests at Cologne and Muenchen-Gladbach failed to materialize.

Bochum was the fourth city hit by coal mine strikes since public agitation over food shortages began. Previous walkouts at Dortmund, Hamborn and Duisburg sent the Ruhr coal output — vital to Europe's economy — into a tailspin.

Clergy Appointed To Four Charges

Kingston, April 2 — (CP) — Rt. Rev. John Lyons, Bishop of Ontario Diocese, today announced appointment of clergy to four charges in the Diocese effective May 1. Rev. R. F. Cardam of Bancroft has been appointed Rector of the Parish of Elizabethtown and Ballycanoe. Rev. Fred Payne, Rector at Sydenham, will become incumbent of the Missions of North Hastings. J. B. Hall, lay reader at Lyn, will become assistant to the Missions. Rev. F. C. Whittington, Rector of St. Mary's Church, Brandon, Man., will become incumbent of Loughboro with residence at Sydenham.

LARCENY WARRANT ISSUED

Utica, Mich., April 2 — (AP)— A larceny warrant has been issued against the man who came to dinner, stayed a week and then left with some of the hosts's clothing, jewelry and silverware.

Theodore Mulyk, who signed the complaint, said his dinner guest, and a woman companion he brought with him, took advantage of Mulyk's hospitality for one week. When they finally left, he said, they took a quantity of "souvenirs" with them.

PREMIER DREW'S MOTION UPHELD BY 57-21 VOTE

Toronto, April 2 — (CP) — By a vote of 57 to 21 the Ontario Legislature late last night approved Premier Drew's resolution on Dominion-Provincial relations — a resolution which said that "a strong Federal system is the best form of government for Canada" and added that the House "approves the steps taken by the Ontario government to preserve that system and to protect the established rights, customs and educational system of this province."

A full-dress debate on Dominion-Provincial relations preceded the vote. The House also rejected by 68 to 17 a C.C.F. sub-amendment which would have regretted that failure to reach an agreement with Ottawa "was used as an excuse for not introducing essential measures of social security and social welfare."

Then by a similar vote — 68 to 17 — the House defeated a Labor-Progressive sub-amendment, asking that the Dominion-Provincial conference reconvene immediately "in order that a taxation agreement be concluded which will make it possible to implement the Dominion's social security and public investment program."

The main amendment, moved by the Liberals, defeated by 57 to 21, would have regretted that the government "by the adoption of an uncompromising attitude towards the Dominion government" obstructed establishment of social security measures.

Made for Members

Winding up the debate Premier Drew said that the reason he alone had spoken for the government was that his speech was made on behalf of the government members and with their approval. He said that a vote against the government would be a vote approving a five per cent increase in personal income taxes and a poll tax of at least $12 per capita for every person in the province over 18 years of age.

Premier Drew made his main speech earlier in the day, telling the House that there was danger the British North America Act would become a "scrap of paper." He said also that the framework of Canada's national structure was being undermined; that freedom of Canadians was being challenged; that there was a possibility of despotism in Canada; that there might be need to write a new constitution to protect the rights of Canadians.

Steel Scrap Prices Are on Downgrade

New York, April 2 (AP)—Steel scrap prices are on the downgrade in every major district in the United States, the Iron Age, national metalworking paper, reported today

The Iron Age scrap composite price was $37.33 a gross ton, down $2.17 a ton.

Scrap consumers were reported going on a day-to-day purchasing basis in an effort to force prices lower.

The drop in the steel ingot rate this week from 97 to 96 per cent of rated capacity, the paper said, was "a temporary situation," due to gas shortages at Pittsburgh.

BRITISH SHIP'S CAPTAIN INJURED DURING BOMBING

Vessel Was Unloading UNRRA Goods When Attacked by Chinese Nationalist Plane

Shanghai, April 2 (AP)—Captain William Lee of the British tank landing ship Wanshen was seriously injured today when his ship was bombed and machine-gunned while unloading U.N.R.R.A. supplies at the Chinese Communist port of Shihkiuso.

The planes were identified as belonging to the Chinese Nationalist Government in reports to U.N.R.R.A. headquarters here.

The planes, according to reports to U.N.R.R.A. here, subjected the Wanshen to three attacks in which the Captain, Chief Mate William D Haining of Vancouver, B. C., and an unidentified Chinese quartermaster were injured.

Lee, the report said, suffered fractures of both legs and was "bleeding profusely" when transferred to the United States grain boat Wilkie. Haining was wounded, not critically, by flying shrapnel and the Chinese quartermaster suffered a compound fracture of the left leg.

Judge German Appeal Continues

Toronto, April 2 — (CP)—Arthur Slaght, K. C., of Toronto yesterday asked the Ontario Court of Appeal to quash a drunken driving conviction against 57-year-old county Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg, Ont., on the grounds that the Crown had no right to change its election. He said the Crown had elected from the outset to proceed by summary trial on this count and by indictment on a charge of dangerous driving.

He emphasized the fact no committal was made in Magistrate's Court on the dangerous driving count and that for this reason the Crown had no right to change its election on the drunken driving charge to which Judge German had pleaded innocent on his arraignment.

He said the charge was withdrawn Dec. 16 — two days after Judge German had been found guilty by a jury of drunken driving and dangerous driving. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail on the first charge and fined $250 on the second.

The charges arose out of an accident last Sept. 3 in which Mrs. Jeanne Taylor of Cobourg was injured when struck by an automobile said to have been driven by Judge German. Cyril Taylor and his wife filed a civil suit Jan. 17 against Judge German for damages of $60,000.

The appeal is continuing today.

Canadian Motorists Find It Costs More to Drive Up and Say 'Fill' er Up'

(By The Canadian Press)

Canadian motorists found it cost them anywhere up to 2¼ cents a gallon more to "fill 'er up" today as a combination of tax readjustments and consumer increases changed gasoline prices.

The changes varied from province to province, just as does the price, and were not felt everywhere.

Effective in most provinces yesterday following the ending of price controls on oil products, they were coincident with the federal government's abandoning of its wartime tax of three cents a gallon. In most cases, the provinces took over at least two cents of the tax.

In Manitoba, price signs remained about the same at gasoline pumps when price increases of about a cent were accompanied by a provincial levy of two cents which coincided with dropping of the three-cent federal tax.

But at Regina, gasoline increased 2¼ cents to 40 cents a gallon. The increases actually ranged up to 3½ cents but consumers gained a cent in the taxation change-over.

In Alberta, increases ranged from one cent a gallon on regular diesel fuel to 3½ cents on unleaded gasolines but the net result to motorists was a 1½ cent increase. At Edmonton, the new price is 38.4 cents a gallon for ethyl, 36.4 for standard. At Calgary, it's 36 and 35 cents.

In Ontario and Quebec, the boost generally was one cent a gallon while British Columbia oil companies have applied to the provincial coal and petroleum control board for increases. Standard gasoline costs 29 cents a gallon in B.C., ethyl 31 cents.

Prices in Ontario and Quebec for standard and best grade gasoline now are: at Montreal, 32½ and 34½ cents a gallon; at Ottawa, 34 and 36 cents and at Toronto 34 and 36 cents.

In the Maritimes, New Brunswick reported a price of 33 cents for regular, 35 cents for the more expensive grade. In Nova Scotia the figures were 33½ and 35½.

Auto, Fuel Ceilings Off in Sweeping Decontrol Program

Rentals, Eviction Controls Must Remain Says Abbott

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 2 —(CP)— Price ceilings disappeared today from a wide variety of goods and services as the latest phase in the government' decontrol program, announced yesterday in the Commons, went into effect on a broad and varied front.

The move, announced by Finance Minister Abbott, came as the highlight of the continued debate on the main government bill for the continuation for another year of many of the war-induced controls in prices, rentals and other fields.

In announcing this step, which again narrows the list of commodities still under price ceilings, Mr. Abbott said the government believed the action would bring prices "smoothly to the levels which now are appropriate."

In a nutshell, the goods now being freed from control include these:

All motor vehicles; all soft drinks; all coal, coke, charcoal, and fuelwood; all footwear; foods such as turkey, ducks and geese in live or dressed form; certain non-standard kinds of sausage and some canned and cooked meats; all candies and confectioneries; cocoa beans, their derivatives and beverage preparations made from cocoa; wools in all forms; all chemicals and plastics and such house equipment as cooking ranges, refrigerators, domestic washing machines and domestic sewing machines.

Subsidies Taken Off

Of rentals, Mr. Abbott said "acute" difficulties made it apparent rentals and eviction controls must continue but added that he hoped "very shortly" to announce changes in this field.

He disclosed that subsidies of "every kind" on either imported or domestic fuels were being removed, a statement which drew from Prices Board sources the comment that increases might be as much as $3 a ton. Removal of ceilings on coal and coke does not become effective until midnight, April 15.

It was estimated the decontrol measures — the fourth major step in that field over the last year—would remove price ceilings from roughly one-third of the goods and services still under control.

(By The Canadian Press)

Caught by surprise by the latest raising of price ceilings, the Canadian public reacted swiftly today, some with dismay at what they thought might be further inroads on their pocketbooks and others with aplpause at greater easing of government controls.

Industry generally was pleased at Finance Minister Abbott's announcement that the lid was off on roughly one-third of goods and services which had been under control. First reaction of some labor leaders last night was of dismay and a prediction that further wage increases would be needed to make up for the probable added cost of living.

But most producers of the goods affected were against price increases in early reaction to the order.

Here are the statements in brief:

Cars

There "definitely will be no price increase in General Motors of Canada, Limited, automobiles "as a result of the decontrol itself."—W. A. Wecker, President. At Windsor, Ford Motor and Chrysler Motor Company officials say their prices will hold firm with Ford emphasizing that a decrease of $35 on all their cars set only 10 days ago would be unaffected. Toronto used car dealers see an increase.

Confectionery

General increase in prices and even greater shortages foreseen because of the lack of sugar — William Robertson, President of Robertson Brothers, Limited, at Toronto. In contrast, Montreal official of candy firm with stores in leading eastern Canadian cities says policy not to raise prices, though rising costs may force it.

Coal

Toronto dealers predict prices will go slightly higher than the present subsidies paid by the government which amount to $2.13 per ton on anthracite coal. Many say the increase may amount to $2.50 per ton.

Soft Drinks

Several beverage firm officials, notably Coca C[illegible]a and Canada Dry, say their prices will not increase.

Refrigerators

Footwear

Spokesman for the Shoe Manufacturers Association of Canada expresses belief at Montreal prices on the whole should remain unchanged but increases might be seen in certain lines of slippers and related products.

Clothing

Retailers divided in opinion on whether higher prices and shorter supplies will result.

Cat Saves Owner's Life

Toronto, April 2 (CP)—Tippey, a big tortoise-shell cat which clawed open the door of a bedroom into which coal gas fumes were seeping Monday night, was credited today with saving the life of its owner, eight-year-old Carol Greig. Other occupants of the West-Central rooming house called firemen who used inhalators to revive Carol; her sister, Joan, four, and Leonard Reid, five.

P.C. JACK HATCH TAKES OVER WIFE'S ROOM IN HOSPITAL

Provincial Police Constable Jack Hatch of Madoc is a firm believer in family environment. He has an attractive wife and when Mrs. Hatch was taken to Belleville General Hospital to undergo an operation, the police officer was a constant visitor at her bedside.

In fact, Constable Hatch became so used to the hospital surroundings, and the room which his wife occupied, that he grew to like it.

So much in fact that, with the help of Mother Nature, he developed appendicitis and was taken to hospital a day or so after Mrs. Hatch left for home. He is occupying the same room, and is progressing favorably after the appendectomy.

J.H. Legate Named Chairman Of Hospital Board of Governors

Payroll for 1946 Totalled $163,274 Annual Report Reveals — Monthly Expenses Over $30,000

General manager of the Canada Cement Company at Point Anne, J. H. Legate was named chairman of the board of governors for Belleville General Hospital when the board met in its annual meeting last week. Mr. Legate succeeds Mackenzie Roberston who had acted as chairman of the board for the past ten years.

Indicative of the growing use of the hospital by patients from Belleville and surrounding district was the hospital report showing a total of 66,262 hospital days registered during 1946. This compares with 60,937 hospital days for 1945.

5,994 Admissions

Total admissions for the year not including births, were 5,994 as compared with 5,612 the year previous, while the average number of patients was 181.6 as compared with 166.9. Births at the hospital totalled 1,346 as compared with 1,035 one year ago.

During the year the average occupancy of the hospital was 90.8 per cent as against 83.4 per cent in 1945. Cost per day per patient was $5.02 as compared with $4.53 in 1945.

All salaries were reviewed and adjusted in October, 1946, the resulting monthly increase amounting to approximately $5,000. Total cash salaries in 1946 amounted to $163,274.49 as compared with $134,852.13 in 1945. Payroll for 1947 will exceed $200,000, it was stated. Total expenses of the hospital are now averaging over $30,000 per month.

$56,050 Expense Increase

A review of the auditor's report shows an increase of $56,050.80 in the annual operating expense of the hospital.

Donations received by the hospital during the year included $1,262.50 from the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, a portion of this being used for the purchase of two baby incubators and an orthopaedic table; Dr. G. S. Cronk, $300, used for the establishment of a medical museum, for mounting and preserving clinical specimens for teaching purposes; Estate of Robert Tannahill $104 (annual) Harry Kay $100, and Estate of M. Cory, $76.

Officers And Committees

Chairman, J. H. Legate.

Vice-Chairman, President of the Medical Staff, Dr. Austin Walters.

Finance Committee, C. L. Jewell, Chairman; Alderman W. B. Lattimer, E. S. Denyes, T. Y. Wills, Mackenzie Roberston.

Property Committee L. E. McLean, Chairman; Dr. G. S. Cronk, E. S. Denyes, Mayor Frank Follwell.

Supervision Committee, Alderman W. B. Lattimer, Chairman; Dr. J. B. McKay, Mrs. J. W. Imlah, T. Y. Wills.

Daily Gold Output Higher Than in '43

Toronto, April 2 —(CP)— Daily average gold output by 48 Ontario gold mines in February established a new high since July, 1943, the Ontario Department of Mines reported today. A total of 606,790 tons of ore was milled during February, containing 151,103 ounces of gold, 24,554 ounces of silver for a value of $5,304,922.

Grade of ore at $8.74 was higher than in January, although lower than the average for 1946.

In January, 643,059 tons were milled, containing 155,842 ounces of gold and 16,200 ounces of silver, worth $5,466,983.

Daily average figures for February showed a total of 21,671 tons of ore milled — the highest since June, 1943 — and gold recovered amounted to 5,397 ounces, silver 877 ounces. Value of bullion produced was set at $189,462.

Customs and excise returns for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1947 showed an increase of $1,787,026.48 over the comparable period ending March 31st, 1946, it was announced today by Customs Collector E. A. Geen.

Returns for the fiscal year ending March 31, last totalled $7,048,272.78 as compared with $5,261,246.30 for the period ending March 31st, 1946.

Customs returns for the month of March 1947, totalled $466,449.67 as compared with $494,943.07 for the same month in 1946. This is a decrease of $28,493.40.

Some Statistics On Weather For March

According to 1946 standards, local residents had plenty to complain about regarding weather conditions for the month of March.

Statistical records maintained at the local water purification plant on Trent Road by Manager Harry Mills show that during March the mean temperature was but 28 degrees as compared with a mean temperature of 39.5 degrees for the same month last year.

It's not too long ago but possibly some residents will recall the temperature soaring to a high of 71 degrees during March of last year, while the highest last month was 48 degrees. The low reading in March of last year was 11 degrees and last month nine degrees.

There was also a wide difference in precipitation received with 30.9 inches of snow falling last month and 1.56 inches of rain for a total precipitation of 4.65. During March last year rainfall was 1.03, while only three-fifths of an inch of snow fell.

"Degree Days"

But it is the number of "degree days" in a certain period that interests the householder. This means the number of degrees room temperature has to be raised and is that which heating experts must know before satisfactory installations can be made.

Degree days in March just past totalled 1,149 as compared with only 796 in March, 1946. During the two winters there was not much difference, however—5,777 for the winter of 1945-46 as compared with 5,828 for last winter.

Just how are "degree days" figured? The high and low temperatures for the day are totalled, divided by two and then subtracted from 65.

Gerard McEvoy Acquires Former Blue Food Store

Bright and attractive in its new interior decorations, which will be completed within the next few days, the shop, formerly the Blue Quality Food Store at the corner of East Moira and North Front Streets, will provide a new departure in groceries and meat facilities for residents of that district.

Recently acquired by Mr. Gerard McEvoy, a former Bellevillian, who brings lengthy store experience with him, the new business will be known as McEvoy's Marketeria. Mr. McEvoy, a former student of St. Michael's Academy here, is a son of the late Owen J. McEvoy, former cheese instructor of Madoc, who was well known throughout Hastings County.

The new shop is being decorated in attractive blending colors, with new flooring, ceiling and fluorescent lighting throughout.

Mr. McEvoy will carry a full line of groceries, fresh and cooked meats, vegetables and fruits. Delivery service will be given at 11 and 4 o'clock daily. Store hours will be from 8.30 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily and Saturday nights until 9.

A new entrance is being constructed and Mr. McEvoy intends making his new business one of the most attractive to the shopping public in the area.

Before acquiring the former Blue Store, he was associated as a partner in a flourishing grocery and meat business in Washago, Ont.

PRACTISES OVER 50 YEARS

Eganville, April 2 — (CP) — After 50 years of dentistry practice in Renfrew county Dr. J. A. Lamburtus, 74, doesn't intend to retire. An ardent fisherman and hunter, Dr. Lumburtus has international fame as exhibitioner and breeder of prize fowls, and has won prizes in Barcelona, Wembley, Berlin and Ottawa.

Warehouse, New Garage Boost March Permits

A Shell Oil warehouse on South John Street costing $20,000 and a new garage by Bateman Motors to be constructed on Pinnacle Street at a cost of $25,000, headed the local building list for the month of March, according to statistics released today by City Engineer Charles Mott. The total for the month totalled $64,650.

The Shell Oil warehouse is being constructed on property near the present warehouse office, while the Bateman Motors building, 43 ft. by 43 ft. and 70 ft. by 100 ft. will be constructed on Pinnacle Street just south of Modern Cleaners' building. The building will be of concrete block construction.

Other permits issued during March included the following: A. McCoy, alterations at 245-7 Ann Street, for apartments, $1,800; M. A. Harvey, residence 21 Albion Street, $4,000; Commodores Orchestra, addition to present Fair Ground building for check room and insulation, $3,000; Superior Cleaners, boiler room, $1,000; Mary Morton, new bath room, 143 Bridge Street, $125; Richard Black, sun porch glassing, 23 Howard, $125; J. Former Staff Member Of Albert College To Speak Good Friday

The visit of the Reverend E. Waldo Smith to the city this week will be of interest to his many friends in the city and district. He is to speak at the Good Friday service of the three United Churches to be held in Bridge Street Church. While he was a member of the teaching staff of Albert College he became well-known in the city. He came to Belleville after doing post-graduate work at the University of Chicago and again upon returning from the University of St. Andrew in Scotland.

Waldo Smith joined the chaplain's service in the Summer of 1940 and went overseas in June 1941. He was attached to the 1st Canadian Armoured Brigade. During the raid on Dieppe, Capt. Smith was the padre who read from the 6th Chapter of the Ephesians as the landing barge floated toward shore.

He took part in the Sicilian campaign and the battle of Italy. He was awarded the Military Cross for evacuating wounded under gunfire but was himself a casualty. Jaundice and malaria weakened him so much that he was returned to England in March, 1945, where he was given the job of setting up a school of Christian citizenship for Canadian troops in England.

He was sent home in July and returned to Grafton in October after a siege at the Chorley Park Hospital in Toronto. The members of his church had kept the charge open for him and his wife and children had continued to live in the manse while he was overseas.

Mrs. Tillie MacDonald, Point Anne, Was Canada's First Lady Scoutmaster

Was Recently Appointed Honorary Scoutmaster of Fourth Quinte Troop

Responsible for the organization of the first Quinte Boy Scout troop at Point Anne 33 years ago, Mrs. Tillie MacDonald, Canada's first lady scoutmaster, is still vitally interested in the Boy Scout movement.

Indicative of this fact is that Point Anne's "grand little lady" who for the past half century has taken an active part in community affairs, is honorary scoutmaster of the Fourth Quinte troop which only recently was re-organized and at its charter night last week had the honor of presenting the charter to the troop's scoutmaster, Frank. L. Insley.

"Happiest Day of Life"

According to Mrs. MacDonald's own admission "it was the happiest day of my life when in 1914 I received my appointment of Lady Scoutmaster." Mrs. MacDonald's appointment was signed by Byng of Vimy, then chief scout for Canada and J. W. Robertson, chief commissioner. She was recommended by the late Colonel W. N. Ponton.

"I take great pleasure in presenting you, Frank Insley, with this scout charter for the Fourth Quinte Troop," stated Mrs. MacDonald as she officiated at the charter night presentation. "May you be as proud a scoutmaster as I am a lady scoutmaster."

With the value of scout training not as much appreciated then as now, it was a difficult task for Mrs. MacDonald to organize back in 1914 one of the first Boy Scout troops in Canada. But when the cause was right, no task was too great for Mrs. MacDonald' and Canada's first lady scoutmaster has lived to see the scout organizations grow into one of the best youth training organizations in the world.

Used Car For Scout Work

One of the first women to own and drive a car in Point Anne, Mrs. MacDonald was able to give members of her scout troop many happy hours and at the same time see parts of the country which otherwise would have been impossible.

Resident of Point Anne for the past 50 years Mrs. MacDonald has been a great church worker and back in 1903 was organist in the little frame Methodist Church now occupied by the Orange Fraternity. For 40 years she acted as assistant at Point Anne post office.

But her activities in the community went further. She was president of the Ladies Aid of the Methodist Church for 20 years and has been a member of the Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute for over 25 years.

Laid Cornerstone

Back in 1925 she officiated at the laying of the cornerstone in the tower of the United Church at Point Anne and did the honors armed with a silver trowel presented to her for the purpose.

In May, 1926, Mrs. MacDonald was appointed chairlady of the Ontario Old Age Pension Board at Dovercourt Rd., Toronto, and with Mrs. Grace Farrow spoke regarding this matter at Sherbourne St. hall, Toronto.

With an inherent love for music Mrs. Macdonald studied the pianoforte, passing her examinations through the Toronto Conservatory of Music in 1920. She had several years vocal tuition under Prof. D. A. Cameron and the late Prof. Anglin of Albert College.

Granddaughter of the late Nancy Lawrence of Lancashire, England, and of Matthew Shaw of Dumferline, Scotland, Mrs. MacDonald can trace her ancestry to Sir Robert Lawrence, a crusader and soldier during the Holy Wars. The Lawrence Castle was erected in 1191 and Mrs. MacDonald has the Lawrence coat of arms which she inherited with some of the family jewels. She is an aunt of Manly MacDonald, A.R.C.A. and O.S.A., artist of Toronto.

Has Interesting Relics

While overseas during the First World War Captain Shaw of Foxboro, a cousin of Mrs. MacDonald, visited Lord Shaw of Dumferline, Scotland, a relative of Mrs. MacDonald's grandfather. She has in her possession many ancient and interesting relics handed down from the family of her husband, the late Donald MacDonald.

Boys Found Throwing Stones At Baby

Small boys sometimes discover rather unusual objects as the targets for their stone throwing activities, but the incident reported to local police yesterday from the Cannifton Road district was one which may very well have had unfortunate results.

A housewife residing on Cannifton Road near the outskirts of the city had parked her baby in its carriage on the porch and serene in her thoughts of the baby's safety had proceeded about her morning's housework.

But she heard strange staccato noises from the porch and investigating the source was amazed to find several young boys throwing stones at the baby in the carriage. Police investigated and warned parents of the boys to exercise more control over their offspring.

Soft Drink Price Will Remain Unchanged Says Branch Manager

Despite the removal of price ceilings on soft drinks announced today, there will be no increase in their prices to retailers, the Coca Cola Ltd. Belleville branch officials stated today.

"The price to retail outlets will remain unchanged, that is the policy of the company," Manager Aubrey Coe said.

It is the prime consideration of his company, Mr. Coe added to keep the price of their product within the reach of everybody, and eventually back to the five-cent level.

Retail prices of Coca Cola have been five cents plus a two-cent tax, and the manufacturers, Mr. Coe stated, will make a determined effort to keep the levels as low as possible.

While he believed that retail prices may increase in some quarters he was of the opinion that generally, they would remain the same. The public, he said, should not pay exorbitant increases when there is no extra cost to the retailer.

Great Waste Of Water Still Covers Fenlands

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Earith, Cambridgeshire, England, April 2 (CP)—Seventeen days after hundreds of farmers and small householders were driven from their homes in the relentless sweep of floods, hundreds of millions of gallons of water still cover the flat, fertile fenlands, concealing all but a few stunted trees, projecting chimneys and isolated rooftops.

Here at the edge of the flood waters I can see little but a great waste of water extending almost t the horizon and reaching right and left for several miles.

At its deepest the water covers the land to a depth of 30 feet and combined efforts of 100 fire service workers pumping out thousands of gallons daily has made little appreciable difference because the floods have been aggravated by further rain.

"The water dropped two inches yesterday," fireman Jack Sewell said. "But even with a spell of dry weather it will be weeks before the flood subsides."

Standing on high ground near a friend's house where he has been given shelter, farmer Walter Newman looked out sadly over the grey, desolate lake concealing his home and property—all but an arch of broken red-tiled roof and a few inches of attic window.

Like Nightmare

"It's like some awful nightmare," the tall, grey-haired farmer said. "We built that house 21 years ago and we have worked hard ever since to raise a farm we could leave to our sons.

"Now it's all buried out there. How we can ever begin again I don't know. After what's happened I could never farm this land with any confidence again."

A year ago young Arthur Hawkins, with his wife and nine-month-old baby, moved into a new bungalow. When the floods came Hawkins escaped with a few of his most valued possessions. The rest, with the beginnings of a new barn, now are hidden under 20 feet of water.

Today he began work as an odd job man for a neighboring farmer who had escaped disaster.

Many flood victims were cheered by the news the Canadian Red Cross is spending £375,000 ($1,300,000) for their relief.

Claim Bligh's Tomb Forlorn, Forgotten

London —(Reuters) —Allegations that the tomb of Captain Bligh—protagonist of the Nordhoff and Hall historical novel, "Mutiny on the Bounty" is "forlorn and forgotten" have led to an Australian suggestion that his remains should be disinterred and shipped to Sydney, Australia.

But Rev. Henry Hedley, rector of the Lambeth church in the yard of which Bligh lies buried, says "there would be an outcry" if the body were moved.

The controversy opened when J. M. Tully, New South Wales agent-general in London, wrote to Sydney City Council's Works Committee, suggesting the tomb be moved. The letter said the tomb, damaged by bomb-blast, was in poor condition generally, acid in London smoke was causing its surface to deteriorate and it appeared "forlorn and forgotten."

The letter was referred to Britain's Royal Historical Society for advice. Meanwhile Mr. Hedley commented:

"I would have thought that before these people did anything they would have got in touch with this end before putting Sydney Council to the trouble of discussing the matter.

"If Sydney cares to restore the tomb that would be very nice. As for removing the whole tomb and contents to Sydney—there would be an outcry in Lambeth if anybody touched it."

NEW YORK

U. S. Steel	73 1-2

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 2 (CP)—Golds jumped ahead sharply in brisk trade shortly before noon when senior golds as a group and juniors on a fairly broad front posted substantial gains. Industrials held well for fractional gains and base metals showed signs of improvement.

Volume for the first three hours was 857,000 shares.

The jump in gold prices took in all seniors trading for gains ranging up to a full point. Secondaries showed equally good advances but on a more selective basis.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, April 2 —(AP)—The stock market enjoyed occasional recovery moves today although a number of pivotals failed to participate.

Selected industrials and rails were favored, while activity in the air transports continued with some at record highs. Near the fourth hour the list presented a mixed appearance.

Leaders on the upside were Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Pere Marquette common, Bethlehem, International Harvester, United Aircraft, Eastern Air Lines, Douglas Aircraft, United Air Lines and Allied Chemical.

Hiram Walker, with a loss of 3-8, was the heaviest loser at mid-day among Canadian issues which generally gave up fractions. Dome Mines was off 1-2 and Canadian Pacific eased 1-8. In the curb Lake Shore added 1-8.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 2. (CP)—Cattle prices were generally unchanged on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Veal calves, hogs, sheep and lambs were steady. Unsold from yesterday were 200 head of cattle. Receipts—Cattle 500, calves 180, hogs 500, sheep and lambs 70.

Weighty steers were $14-$15.25, butcher steers $13.25-$14.75, heifers $14.50 down, butcher cows $9.50-$12.25 with canners downward to $6; bulls $10.50-$12.35, fed yearlings $14-$15.

Hogs were dressed, Grade A $22, Grade B1 $21.60. Sows $19.25 dressed.

Common to medium lambs brought $11-$15.75.

A few sheep ranged $5.50-$10.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, April 2 — (CP) — Produce prices in the spot market here today were reported as follows:

Butter prints unchanged, 1st grade 42, 2nd grade 41, 3rd grade 40.

Eggs: There is a firmer undertone in egg market with prices tending toward higher levels, demand for Easter good; Wholesale to retail, A large 39-41, A medium 37-38, A pullet 36, B 35-36, C 33-34; country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free, A large 36-37, A medium 34-35, A pullet 32-33, B 32-33, C 30-30½.

Butter solids unchanged, 1st grade 40, 2nd grade 39.

HOGS

Toronto, April 2 (CP)—Grade A dressed bacon-hogs were up 25 cents hundredweight at Stratford, to farmers $21.85, to truckers $22 delivered, unchanged at Hull $22 delivered, unchanged at Brantford $21.85 delivered, in markets reporting today.

DETECTIVE AWARDED MONEY

Philadelphia, April 2 —(AP)—Detective Daniel J. Carr finally is going to get the $5,828 he found in the basement of the board of education building.

Judge James C. Cruelish awarded the money to Carr and overruled a claim of Maurice Felt, O.P.A. employee, who said he helped Carr lift the crate under which the money was discovered during the investigation of a ration book theft.

BRITISH CIVIL SERVANTS

London April 2 (Reuters) —Britain now has one civil servant for about every 28 of the total working population of more than 20,000,000. A government White paper published last night showed the public payroll supports 722,294—18,189 more than last October and 345,803 more than before the war.

Appeal to Close Centralia Mine Was Rejected

Centralia, Ill., April 2. (AP)—An Illinois State Mine Inspector says his plea two years ago for closing the Centralia coal mine where 111 miners perished March 25, was rejected by Robert M. Medill, who resigned yesterday as State Director of Mines and Minerals.

State investigators who today planned to resume taking testimony also were told that the mine management decided it was not "economical" to install a sprinkler system which was recommended by inspectors to keep down explosive coal dust.

The State Mine Inspector, Driscoll O. Scanlan, testified he pleaded in March, 1945, for authority from Medill to close the mine because Scanlan felt an explosion in the mine would kill every miner in it. Scanlan said Medill replied:

"Well, we'll have to take that chance."

Medill's resignation was announced yesterday by Gov. Dwight H. Green of Illinois, who said the director had quit "for the good of the service". Green did not elaborate, but Medill said he thought "it would be better if I stepped out of the picture."

CANARY BECOMES JEALOUS

Boston, April 2 — (AP)—Making the canary sing has turned eight-months-old Stephen Brown into what his parents believe is the world's youngest whistler.

Mr. and Mrs. Saul Brown said that Stephen gave forth with his first whistle mimicking them as they tried to make the family canary produce a tune.

They say that Stephen spends most of his time whistling now; so much, in fact, that the canary has evidently become jealous and stopped singing.

Legislature Quieter After Children Leave --Promptly at Four

Toronto, April 2 — (CP) — Every day for the last four weeks, thousands of eyes have watched the large clock above the main door in the Ontario Legislative Assembly.

Precisely when it says 4 p. m. the owners of these eyes rise as a body and in an almost - quiet almost-orderly fashion they leave the visitors-galleries. The few interested persons who remain, move down to the front rails for a better view of the proceedings uninterrupted by the whispering of hundreds of school children.

The school day over at four o'clock, rarely do the youngsters visiting from Toronto as well as out-of-town schools, stay to see the end of the day's business which was to be their practical lesson in the administrative end of government.

The newspaper men in the press gallery and sundry members of the House strain less to hear what is going on after that hour. The House settles back to normal — if normal it ever is.

During the last few days, however, the hard-of-hearing have suffered an added inconvenience. With the House sitting daily at 2 p. m. — an hour earlier than usual — in order to wind up the business remaining on the order paper prior to Thursday's indefinite adjournment the parade of children moves into the House about 45 minutes after the sitting starts. Then in their inimitable "quiet" way, they move out an hour and a quarter later.

1946 CHRISTMAS GIFTS NOW AWAY

Capetown, April 2 (Reuters)—The South African frigate Natal has left Capetown on 3,800-mile voyage to Tritan Da Cunha carrying stores and Christmas mails for 1946 to the loneliest island community in the world. The last mails and stores to the remote South Atlantic Island, almost due west of here, were delivered in May, 1946.

King George Second of Greece

King George Second of Greece has died at an unsettled period of that country's history at a time when the Greeks had charged their neighbors, Albania, Yugoslavia and Belgium, with having encouraged guerilla fighting and when the question of American aid to Greece and Turkey has occupied a large place in the news of the world with the prospect of the loan of money to bulwark Greece and Turkey against communism.

It was said long ago of another monarch, one of the English kings, "uneasy rests the head that wears a crown." A large part of King George the Second's life was colored by events which took place in his country and elsewhere. His father King Constantine abdicated in 1917 and George was barred from the throne, his brother Alexander assuming the royal purple. When the latter died in 1920 George took the throne of his brother, but events forced his abdication in 1922, his exile lasting thirteen years when Greece became a republic. He came back in 1935 being called by plebiscite after a royalist coup d'etat. The dictatorship was then in power and when Greece was invaded by the Germans he entered exile. The freeing of Greece from the retreating Germans led in the course of time to his recall by plebiscite after the war. He returned six months ago.

He lived in the troublous days of his country and few monarchs have had a reign so broken as his has been, few have been so unstable and insecure as that of King George Second.

Prince Paul, brother of the late king, has been proclaimed King of the Hellenes. He is the heir to problems which have encompassed Greece. He is the heir of many a problem which is facing Greece in her associations with other nations.

Cream

Lifting restrictions on many lines has proceeded quite steadily during the past month or two. With the coming of April, butter fat restrictions are off and whipped cream on apple pie is not a vision now, but an actual fact. From the National Dairy Council comes word that the dairy industry after years of rigid controls, is once again able to allow Canadians all the ice cream, whipping fluid cream and processed cheese that they require or desire.

While Canadians, living in a land which may be spoken of as a "land of milk and honey," have not undergone hardships through the controls of food products for the people have lived "well" since before the late war, during the war and since the war's end, nevertheless the release of the restrictions mentioned is welcome. The people know well that rationing is dwindled down to sugar and butter and that restrictions are much lighter than they were. Every purchaser of foods can see for himself or herself the steady accession of foods, scarce during wartime, to the shelves of the food stores.

War on Cancer

In the Canadian Cancer Society campaign now being carried on with the objective of having a member of the society in every home, no effort is being spared by the volunteer committee to spread as much information about this disease — its symptoms and treatment — as possible.

Statistics now available show that in the war years there were roughly speaking 40,000 Canadian war fatilities while cancer killed 80,000 people in Canada during the same period. World War II is over but approximately 14,000 Canadians die and will continue to die annually from cancer unless something is done about it.

An event of great importance to Ontario is the opening of the new cancer clinic at the Kinstgon General Hospital which will provide at one centre, medical, surgical and X-ray treatment of 30 patients a day and by radium of five or six patients a day while re-checks of 30 to 40 individuals can be made daily. As well as treating cancer patients research work to improve present treatment methods will be carried out at this clinic.

Medical records compiled by the U. S. Army point to extrmees of climatic temperatures as a possible cancer factor.

An interesting search for a clue to cancer prevention is told in the latest News Letter of the Canadian Cancer Society. It says, "Arthur J. Burks whose wife's book 'I Die Daily,' was published recently, following her death from cancer, has been seeking the clue to cancer prevention among the Mundurucu tribe in the Brazilian jungle. The Munducurus are free from cancer and Burks believes that they know a preventive, or unknowingly, may be doing something which prevents the disease. One visit has been made already, and though unsuccessful, he is planning to return in July to look for medicinal plants, known only to the Indians. All royalties on his wife's book and on 'Amazon Doctor,' which he himself is now writing, are to be donated to cancer research."

The cause for which this society carries on is the cause of the burden of a great share of humanity. Everyone is interested in it because of ravages of cancer. And while the great search goes on for the secret of the disease, there is the very important fact that one out of every three persons with cancer can be saved — provided they see their doctor in time. The society's work is to make people conscious that this malady needs immediate attention. Every donation and membership will help this cause.

Crossing Over Snow

The exposed plumbing of the typical English house is generally excused on the ground that ours is a temperature climate and severe frost an unreasonable expectation, says The Manchester Guardian. If we have no reliable method of reaching an isolated village through thick snow the parallel answer is probably that localized drifts are our more customary snow problem (though, for that matter, we are singularly lacking in an answer to the drifts.)

Perhaps before the next time we have to get food convoys through to a starving hamlet, America's Antarctic explorers may have given us a few more tips for crossing heavy snow. The United States Navy, realizing that the day of the dog-sleigh is over and that mechanized exploration and research are due in the polar regions, has sent out a great deal of new gear with its present expedition to test a variety of methods of getting over the snow when heavily laden, instead of through it. Several types of slat snow roller, an adaptation of the standard sheepsfoot roller, and the versatile pontoon are all to be tried at the job of "compacting" snow and, off the compacted track, caterpillar tractors are to be used with lateral extensions to the tracks to spread the weight in the manner of a snowshoe.

For airdromes, where successive snow-showers would reduce the snow-sweeping method to futility, the snow itself is again to be used as a surface, but only after being turned into ice. Snow surface heaters have been designed for the purpose and it is hoped that firm airstrips may be prepared at short notice. Many of the experiments are intended to test methods which may be useful nearer home.

Happy Days Are Here!

Every manual of English composition warns the student to avoid the obvious. There is danger, therefore in a news story such as the one that explorer Attilio Gatti will search for a reported superape when he takes the Gatti-Hallicrafters Expedition to Africa this summer, says Chicago Daily News.

If Mr. Gatti won't be offended, we had best discuss it as a heartening sign of return normality. Hitler is dead but we must have our monsters. Loch Ness will be in the headlines soon, along with a "sensible" summer costume for men, a rocket expedition to the moon, synthetic soup, plastic automobiles and the other peacetime playthings.

A girl who speaks a strange "birdlike" language has already turned up in Germany. Seems like old times.

JUST FOLKS

THE WAY OF ANIMALS

Some counsel: "Grab it while you can.
"Get while the getting's good," they say.
"Possession proves the better man."
Yet, wolves and wildcats live that way.

But wolves and wildcats need no more
Than strength and speed to strike and kill.
They've only food to battle for
Their stomachs day by day to fill.

Beyond themselves they've thought for none,
No wish to better what they find
Or for the ones who follow on Glad memories to leave behind.

To wolves and wildcats are denied
The hopes and dreams allowed to man,
The joys of pity and of pride,
And living to a nobler plan.

OFF THE RECORD

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

April 2nd., 1927.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Brown have returned to their home in Virginia City, Minn., after visiting friends and relatives in the city.

Mr. Robert M. Chapman, who has been superintendent for the Jamieson Bone Construction Company in this city for the past two years, will leave May 1st. for the Province of Quebec where he will engage in prospecting.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Macaulay went to Toronto today.

Large quantities of maple syrup were offered for sale on the market today. The price asked was 50 cents per quart and dropped to 45 cents per quart towards the close of the market.

Belleville market prices: Butter 40 cents per pound or 75 cents for a two pound roll; eggs were plentiful at 25 cents per dozen.

30 YEARS AGO

April 2nd., 1917.

The 8th annual meeting of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club was held in the parlors at the Y.M.C.A. A successful season for 1916 was reported by the secretary, J. C. Campion, who received a vote of thanks for his excellent services during the year. The following officers were elected for this year: Hon. Presidents, Col. S. S. Lazier and Thomas Ritchie; President, Rev. C. G. Smith; Vice Presidents, Charles N. Sulman and Rev. A. S. Kerr; Secretary Treasurer, J. A. Campion; Chaplain, Rev. Dr. Scott; Executive Committee, Col. Lazier, Chairman; A. W. Anderson, J. J. B. Flint, W. B. Riggs, Charles N. Sulman, J. A. Borbridge, Dr. O'Callaghan; Grounds Committee, W. B. Riggs, Chairman, J. M. Farley and H. W. Ackerman; Auditors, H. Sneyd and C. M. Stork.

During the first three months of this year the building permits amounted to about $11,000.

40 YEARS AGO

April 2nd., 1907.

Milk has been reduced in this city to five cents per quart.

Cheer up! — the trees are budding.

What about a little sport here this summer? Who is going to take up the good work and help to organize baseball and lacrosse teams? The material for both are here; all that is needed is for some one to get things going.

Mr. Norman E. Dafoe has purchased the grocery business at the corner of St. Charles and Evans Streets, College Hill, formerly owned by Mrs. Snider.

Mrs. C. Snider and family will leave shortly for Detroit, Mich., where they will in future reside.

Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Gibson of Toronto are visiting Mr. and Mrs. S. Gilbert, 2nd. concession of Sidney township.

50 YEARS AGO

April 2nd., 1897.

Mr. Cameron Brown of the Belleville Daily Sun, went to Toronto today.

Mr. S. W. Vermilyea has returned home from Montreal and Quebec where he spent some time buying boots and shoes.

The following interesting item appeared in this paper ten years ago at this time: "The proprietors of the Belleville Electric Light Company have made arrangements for lighting Front Street by electricity. As soon as the poles can be erected the street from the Grand Trunk Station to the wharf will be illuminated. It is expected that the erecting of the poles will commence next week."

Ten years ago at this time liquor licenses were about to be granted for the year and there were twenty-nine applications for bar room licenses.

Mr. Walter Moy has purchased the Potter vineyard in Ameliasburg.

PREMIER DREW'S

"Statements by Justice Minister Ilsley two weeks ago," said Premier Drew, "show quite clearly that the Dominion government regards no feature of the British North America Act as binding, and they claim the right to change all or any part of it by a majority decision of the Canadian parliament without consultation with any province."

Denies Allegation

"The Liberal House Leader, Farquhar Oliver, said that similar agreements were in effect during the war years without affects on the financial status of the province or its autonomy. "Our provincial rights are still intact."

Two other provinces which had not reached agreement with Ottawa were Nova Scotia and Quebec. He did not think that a great part of the people of Quebec were worried about losing their autonomy, and he thought that the demands made by Nova Scotia were well answered by the Dominion. In Nova Scotia, the subsidy from Ottawa was $10,000,000, and the maximum obtainable from taxes in the province was $7,000,000.

Mr. Oliver said he did not approve of the Dominion entering minor tax fields, but he was sure this could be straightened out. There was no sensibility in calling another conference at this time since six provinces had already signed agreements and it would be a waste of time for them to come to another conference.

W. J. Grummett (CCF-Cochrane South) said his main objection was that the entire question had been brought down to the level of a "partisan dispute". The premier had taken every opportunity to hurl challenges at the Federal government, and the Federal government had not been entirely blameless.

Argument One Of Money

Aurele Belanger (L-Prescott), said the entire argument was one of money. Trust must be put in the House of Commons. "They come from the provinces and they can hardly be suspected of wishing ill of those provinces of which they are members."

Mr. Belanger thought Mr. Drew's attitude was a "bugaboo" with the idea of scaring the people of Ontario and then coming to them "and telling them we are the champions of your rights".

A. A. MacLeod, leader of the two-man Labor-Progressive membership, said Premier Drew's speech was "the boldest bid yet for the frayed mantle of the Hon. John Bracken."

That provincial rights needed safe-guarding from the Dominion was "pure and unadulterated nonsense," said Mr. MacLeod.

Many Speakers

Other speakers included J. A. Habel (L-Cochrane North) who accused the government of "personal and political stubborness" in refusing the proposals of the Federal government.

Joseph Meinzinger (Lib.-Lab. Waterloo North) barely escaped the wrath of Mr. Speaker when he criticized Premier Drew for reading his speech. Premier Drew denied that anyone else had written his speech.

Mr. Meinzinger continued that "the Prime Minister went to the Ottawa conference last year with a chip on his shoulder and tried to make a martyr of himself."

Mr. Drew said the remarks were "utterly unworthy of attention."

AUTO, FUEL

Plenty Saved by Controls

Mr. Abbott made the announcement after Justice Minister Ilsley opened debate on second reading of the control bill with a statement estimating that the price control policy had saved the Canadian consumers approximately $2,500,000,000 a year during the five years from 1942 to 1946 and placing the cost of administration of the policy at less than $200,000,000 yearly during that period.

Mr. Ilsley, sponsoring the control bill, was followed by Donald Fleming (PC — Toronto Eglinton) who criticized the measure and moved an amendment urging the House to pronounce itself 'unalterably opposed' to the passage of a measure to continue "indiscriminately the sweeping powers of the presently - Wartime Prices and Trade Boards outside the control of parliament."

House Supports Ruling

At the House opening, the House divided 120 to 42 in support of Speaker Gaspard Fauteux in a ruling which arose from the fact documents appended to the control bill were printed only in English. Frederic Dorion (Ind—Charlevoix - Saguenay) argued that they also should have been printed in French.

In his announcement, Mr. Abbott said many of the basic necessities of life in food, clothing and shelter still remained under control.

Pointing out that agricultural machinery and implements still were under control, he said it was the government's "general view" that price control in this field should remain "until most of the products of the farm are released."

Apart from this special class, however, the plan was to remove "end products or fabricated commodities" from the ceiling as their production reached the point where a major shortage did not exist. To ensure stability, many of the basic materials would continue under control.

While all footwear was released from controls today, leather itself, as well as hides, remained under ceilings.

Angus MacInnis (CCF-Vancouver East) said the C.C.F. party did not believe that the state of national emergency which had forced the imposition of controls was at an end. Controls should be continued.

MACLEAN GIVEN

on the indictment—of being an accessory. And Mr. Rigney returned to the Supreme Court jury.

"I have no more evidence to present in the murder trial," Mr. Rigney said. "The grand jury has presented another indictment in the case and I ask that the accused be arraigned on it."

Mr. Justice Lebel told the murder trial jury: "I must direct you that there is no evidence to support a verdict of guilty in the crime charged. I therefore direct you to bring in a verdict of not guilty."

The jury foreman stood up and pronounced the words "not guilty".

MacLean stood silently, awaiting the next move. When the court registrar read the charge of being an accessory in the Dick slaying, MacLean remained with tightly-pressed lips for a few moments. Then he said. "Guilty".

Bordering on Senility.

Dr. W. A. Finlayson, Hamilton psychiatrist who last week testified that Evelyn MacLean had the mentality of a 13-year-old, was called by the defence on the accessory charge.

"Donald MacLean," he said, "is berdering on a condition we call senility. The man is in his 70th year. He has a heart condition, a swelling of the ankles, and shows a general physical decline."

Mr. Tuchtie then told the jury that there was no evidence MacLean had anything to do with John Dick's murder or with the disposal of Dick's torso. "There is evidence that MacLean broke into the trunk at 32 Carrick Ave. (Mrs. Dick's home) and removed something in a bag, and that the deceased man's shoes were subsequently found in MacLean's home. But that is the only matter that involves him."

Defence indicated why MacLean had pleaded guilty to being an accessory: "I appreciate that this makes him guilty of accessory after the fact, and that is the reason why he has pleaded to the charge this afternoon. He is a man of 70. He has spent a year in jail. He has been under great mental anguish, so much so that he is on the border of sinility. He is a man who in his old age has had to bear a terrible burden. The only reason he is here today is because he wanted to help his own kith and kin after they were in trouble."

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

Address Dr. William Brady, care of this Newspaper.)

IT IS A WONDERFUL FEELING

Warning! Old fogies, do not read this. It will only irritate you—and heaven knows I find it hard enough to carry on here under the constant criticism of people who think they know better than I do about fundamental questions of "hygiene, without stirring up violent protests about my impertinence.

Here is a note from a reader:

Dear Mr. Brady:

It has been in the back of my mind for a long time to tell you how much enjoyment and information I have received from your column. I am a convert to your teachings on CRI. By keeping our children scrupulously away from anyone with the telltale symptoms of an alleged "cold" we have so far avoided scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough—all of which have been epidemic here—as well as the one or two or three day illnesses called "common cold" that keep children from school one or more times in the winter. Our children go out in all kinds of weather, dressed or undressed just as they please. It is a wonderful feeling to be rid of the fear of drafts, inclement weather, sudden changes, etc. etc. We owe this great comfort to you alone, Dr. Brady.

(Signed . . . .)

I can't understand it. It may be that I caught these parents when they were still young enough to be teachable. After thirty-five most of them are stuck with whatever notions they absorbed from the almanacs, nostrum ads, radio spiels, health department handouts or insurance corporation "institutional advertising" in their impressionable years. After forty or forty-five at the latest, you may as well save your breath—you can't tell 'em a thing about the subject of exposure—or what mollycoddles usually regard as exposure.

But I hope old fogies who do read this screed will remember what this reader says:

"It is a wonderful feeling to be rid of fear" . . .

Incidentally scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough are not the only preventible and dangerous diseases the mother avoids by the protection of her children as she describes. She protects the malso against the occasional risk of contracting diphtheria, epidemic (cerebrospinal) meningitis, poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis), influenza and a few other communicable diseases improperly described as "children's diseases" but correctly described as respiratory infections.

And that, my dear parents, teachers, nurses, doctors and health officers, is the point of this lesson: In the earliest stage, the onset, of these respiratory infections, nobody can tell with any degree of certainty whether the symptoms indicate a simple coryza (or head cold, to you, stupid) or the beginning of a serious illness.

It is for this reason that we have a constant prevalence of these preventible disease here in Yankeeland where any damned fool knows (he or she would have you think, in the early stage—the stage when the disease is most likely to spread) that the trouble is "just a slight cold."

My advice, young 'uns, is this: Give all such scoundrels a wide berth — never forget that they pepper you, and good, via conversational spray.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Warts

Is it possible in an inexpensive way to have warts removed from the hands?

(Miss H. A.)

Answer—Paint each wart only (not the skin around it) with the familiar corn remedy — thirty grains of salicylic acid in one-half ounce flexible collodion — once daily for ten days. If corn not going or gone, stop it, and try painting corns and skin around them once each alternate day for six times, with Mild Tincture of Iodine. If corns not going or gone in twelve days, then let your physician remove them.

Britannica

Your allusions to bowling on the green seem to imply that even a person with a bad heart can play.

(K. C. B.)

Answer — Encyclopaedia Britannica contains a good description of the game. Persons with heart trouble not only can but generally should play the game, just the regular friendly game purely for fun, not in tournaments, prize contests or to win a bet. Next to vitamin B complex it is the best heart tonic I know.

German Cities Plan for Revival Of Thriving Prewar Tourist Trade

By GUY BETTANY

Frankfurt, Germany, April 2 (Reuters)—Although still staggering under the aftermath of the Hitler collapse, Germany is starting here and there to think and plan for the revival of her thriving prewar tourist trade.

Before the war, Germany's foreign trade balance was aided greatly by the large number of foreign tourists and the main foreign business men who came to the country to place orders.

It is recognized that the revival of this traffic is essential, not only for increasing Germany's supplies of foreign currency, but also for the promotion of foreign trade.

But as a result of the air war, hardly a German town is able to house more than a fraction of the former number of tourist and business visitors.

Rooms Will Be Scarce

Cities and towns in southern and western Germany always had a proportionately much larger share of the foreign visitors than Berlin or the north, owing to the great development of the industry there in the last 40 years and the beauties of famous old cities such as Cologne, Munich, Frankfurt and Augsburg.

Before the war Munich had 12,000 rooms available for visitors, but when the war ended this number had been reduced to a bare 300. Today as the result of repairs to hotels there are 2,600 rooms available.

Wiesbaden, famous spring and autumn resort, had 74 hotels and boarding houses with about 5,000 rooms. Fifty of these survived the war and now are able to offer 700 rooms.

In spite of the shortage of materials and skilled workers the German towns are planning to increase the amount of hotel space.

Gutted Dresden, historica capital of Saxony, which had many tourists before the war, has opened a competition for architects to design a large hotel to be erected opposite the Augustusbridge. In Frankfurt the building of hotels is proposed together with the construction of hospital schools and university buildings.

Hotel Block Planned

German architects of a communal hotel block in which the hotel proper would be surrounded by other buildings containing a library reading rooms, an art gallery, a concert room, a theatre, a movie theatre swimming baths and the like.

If the town authorities are unwilling to finance the whole project it is suggested that private capital put up the hotel and the municipalities build the museums, swimming pools and other establishments.

It is proposed that these communal hotels contain up to 1,000 beds and be about 10 storeys high. To save space the furniture would be built into the walls as much as possible and to keep down the costs of double rooms it is planned that one bed be built over the other—like army bunks.

As the communal hotels are not likely to have many bedrooms for reasons of space and expense, guests will be able to use baths in a near-by building provided by the municipality.

In Wiesbaden the authorities propose to utilize the hot springs with a temperature of about 150 degrees Fahrenheit to heat hotels and public buildings.

In the smaller towns and mountain resorts notably in Bavaria, the necessity of rebuilding the hotels does not arise, as these places were almost spared in the air war.

More Twins Born In North Europe

Edinburgh —(Reuters)— Polytocy — incidences of multiple birth — is more common among women of northwest Europe than those in the southwest, says Dr. F. E. A. Crew, professor of public health and social medicine at the University of Edinburgh.

In Belgium, Finland and Denmark the percentage of twins exceeds 1.5 but is only about one in Bulgaria, Hungary and Italy and less than one per cent in Greece, he wrote in an article in the medical journal, The Practitioner.

"Nothing would be easier than to conclude that this difference is to be explained by reference to ethnic or climatic conditions," wrote the professor, "but the position of Scotland — where the percentage of twins is lower than in Bulgaria—makes such reasoning hazardous."

By DIMITRI TRAVLOS

Athens, April 2 —(AP)— King Paul, the new monarch of Greece, today designated Premier Demetrois Maximos and a seven-party coalition cabinet to carry on as the government of this strife-torn land as one of his first acts after ascending a throne vacated by the death of his brother.

Maximos, appointed to head the cabinet by the late King George II last Jan. 24, submitted his resignation immediately after Paul took the oath of office last night, but the new King refused to accept it and requested Maximos to continue in office.

Meanwhile, it was announced that funeral services for King George, who died unexpectedly of a heart ailment yesterday at the age of 56, would be held Sunday.

The body is to be removed to the Athens Cathedral Thursday to lie in state until the funeral.

The country was in official mourning for King George, who, although he had borne the title for 25 years, had spent only seven years in Athens, having been twice exiled. Flags were at half staff, funeral dirges were broadcast over the Athens radio, entertainment centres were closed and crowds assembled outside the royal palace.

(In London, the court went into a week of mourning in memory of the late King for the first time since the death of President Franklin D. Roosevelt two years ago. Official sources said the British Royal Family's current tour of South Africa would not be affected.)

Britain Plans Police College

Londan — (CP) — Establishment in London of a national police college through which police officers will have to pass before they can be promoted to inspectors is announced in a Home Office white paper on higher education for the police force.

There will be a junior course of six months to prepare sergeants for inspectorships and a three months' senior course for inspectors.

It is estimated that initial cost of the college will be at least £20,000 ($80,000) and the annual cost about £50,000 ($200,000).

The white paper adds that while advantages of a university training are appreciated "we do not recommend it as a solution to the police problem . . . our course must avoid any tincture of bookishness."

NEW CONSTABLE NAMED

Thorold, April 2 (CP)—Town council last night appointed Constable George Minty as chief of police to succeed the late Daniel T. Boyd. Constable Minty, acting chief since the death of Chief Boyd has been on the force for 10 years.

British Industry Doesn't Take Its Troubles Lightly

By STUART UNDERHILL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Coventry, Eng., April 2—(CP)—Exhausted knocked about by the war, hampered by tradition and obsolete equipment, British industry still is kept moving along by men who have imagination and the courage to experiment.

Many British firms have developed production methods as up-to-date as any in the world. Many more would employ them if they could overcome labor's inherent suspicion of innovation and modernization, based on the old dread that the result will be less work with consequent unemployment.

Nevertheless, examples of initiative and vision are found throughout the country, in big plants and little ones, in tiny back-street shops and ancient factories.

In bomb-smashed Coventry, still painfully tidying up the widespread wreckage of the blitz, it throbs through the old textile firm of William Franklin and Sons, whose history goes back to 1835.

Coventry is chiefly noted now as a 'motor car' city, with sprawling factories on its outskirts turning out automobiles and engines. But in its ancient days it was the centre of a thriving silk and textile industry.

One of its skills was "jacquard" work — exquisitely woven floral patterns. Its practice died out in Coventry 50 years ago and became a virtual monopoly of the French — until Franklins decided to revive it after this war.

The looms were humming busily when the February fuel crisis arose. Power was cut off, paralyzing the little factory on Much Park Street, throwing its 120 operatives — mostly women — out of work.

But not for long. Franklins advertised for diesel engines on a Wednesday afternoon, and got 3 next morning. They were installed by evening. With power generated by these and a gasoline engine, they operated the looms.

Storm Blocked Roads Hamper Farm Tasks

Toronto, April 2 —(CP)—Stormblocked roads and cold, cloudy weather have hampered farm tasks the last few days in many parts of Ontario, the Provincial Agriculture Department said today in its weekly crop report.

The last half of March did not bring the wasm sunny days and frosty night necessary for a good run of maple sap. Syrup making proceeded slowly in Southern and Eastern Ontario. Highest syrup price reported was $10 a gallon in Middlesex.

Pruning of fruit trees started in the Niagara Peninsula but weather conditions kept orchard men from spraying trees to protect them against peach leaf curl or pear psylla.

Seed cleaning plants went into operation in the northern districts of Algoma, Nipissing and Sudbury.

A SNAPPY ANSWER

Nebraska City, Neb., April 2—(AP) — "Anything smaller?" asked Bert Hershey, toll collector on the Missouri River bridge, after a motorist handed him a $10 bill.

"Don't you know," the motorist replied, "that farmers don't have anything smaller than $10 bills these days?"

The collector took the bill and gave the farmer his change.

Modern Chinese Navy Quietly Taking Shape

By THOMAS ALDEGUER

Tsingtao, China, April 2 —(Reuters)— Quietly and without publicity, a new modern Chinese navy is taking shape in the harbors and open spaces of Tsingtao —built by the Germans before the First World War when they occupied the port.

Under direction of American and Chinese naval instructors, all trained either in the United States or Britain, several thousand Chinese youths from some 20 provinces of China are being taught every phase of navigation and naval warfare.

They are all students of the Central Navy Training Centre, best equipped institution of its kind in China with an extensive assortment of the latest naval training aid equipment from the United States and Britain.

The commander of the training centre is British-trained Captain Lin Sian Kwan, whose exploits during the war earned him a place in the book "Heroes" by the American author George Creel.

Although without a ship, he is credited with the destruction "by sheer ingenuity and courage" of more than 10 Japanese warships along the Yangtse River during the war against Japan.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. E. Baragar, Octavia Street, wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Mary Elizabeth, (Betty), to Ross Raymond Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Robinson, Deseronto. The marriage to take place April 16th., at the Alliance Tabernacle, Belleville.

Miss T. Hurley, of Kingston, was a recent guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. O'Sullivan.

Miss Lillian Cournyea has returned to this city after spending a few days with her cousin, Mr. C. Lebarge in Ottawa.

Mrs. Albert Elliott and Miss Myrtle Morrison, Foster Ave., spent Tuesday in Kingston, visiting Mr. Elliott, who is a patient in Kingston General Hospital.

Mrs. A. Snider has returned to her home on Herchimer Ave., after spending the Winter with her daughter, Mrs. A. Greatrix, of Thurlow.

Mr. Justin O'Sullivan, of Kingston, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank O'Sullivan.

Mr. and Mrs. David Joss are spending Easter in Detroit with their son, Mr. Nelson Joss.

Master Davey Branscombe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Branscombe, has returned to his home on No. 2 Highway West, after undergoing an operation for appendicitis in the Belleville hospital.

Mrs. John D. O'Flynn and daughter, Carol, have returned home after spending a few days in Ottawa, as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Elmer. They also attended the North American Figure Skating Championship, where Barbara Ann Scott was awarded the Singles' Crown.

The Preso Music Club of this city will be in Toronto tonight to attend the St. Matthew Passion presented in Convocation Hall by the Mendelssohn Choir, under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan.

Mrs. J. R. McCullough, president of King George Home and School Association, entertained twelve members of the executive at her home, Purdy Street, on Tuesday evening, with games of bridge and euchre providing agreeable enjoyment. Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. J. Mather, (high) and Mrs. Meldrum (low), and euchre prizes were won by Mrs. P. A. Young, (high) and Mrs. E. W. Boulton, (low). Refreshments were served informally by the hostess, and a social time enjoyed by the guests.

GARDENS FOR DEAD

Women's Activities

PLAINFIELD MISSION CIRCLE

Twelve members of the Plainfield Mission Circle held their March meeting at the home of Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr., on the evening of March 25th. The President, Hazel Prindle, opened the meeting. The devotional period was in charge of Joan Rollins, choosing as her topic "Dorcas" who was a social worker serving and working for others. The Scripture was read by Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr., with meditations by Joan Rollins.

Two timely poems, "Sympathy" and "Not Lost" were read by Mary and Jean Reid respectively.

The Study Book, "Our Country is India" was in charge of Joan Cronkright, and "A Woman Trustee" was given by Mrs. Norman Hall, Sr. A questionnaire on previous chapters was conducted by Jean Reid, followed by a solo contributed by Barbara Hall.

Mrs. McCreary closed the meeting, and led in a recreation period. Refreshments were served, and a pleasant social time enjoyed.

HOLLOWAY W.M.S.

The April meeting of Holloway Street W.M.S. was held in the church parlor, with 48 members present. The President, Mrs. Kilbank was in charge with Mrs. Downey at the piano.

In keeping with Passion Week, Easter hymns and readings were used.

Favorable reports were received from secretaries of different departments. The reports from the recent Presbyterial were presented by Mrs. L. Reid and Mrs. C. Holmes. These proved very interesting and inspiring, and appreciation was expressed for the efforts of these ladies to make their reports so comprehensive and all inclusive. Appreciation was also expressed to Mr. C. Holmes for his efforts to provide transportation for the delegates, when the storm and road conditions made it impossible for many others to attend. Following the delegates' reports devotional period was conducted by Mrs. E. C. Moynes. Mrs. J. White read the Easter message and Mrs. Jeffrey contributed a solo, which all enjoyed.

The Easter lesson from the 16th chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel was read by Mrs. Moynes. The significance of this story was forcibly brought to mind when Mrs. Frederick and Mrs. Burke, as Cleopas and Rachael in Eastern costumes, presented the short drama, "The Emmaus Walk".

Mrs. Allen and Mrs. Elgie accepted the offering, and after the closing prayer, the group in charge served light refreshments.

The distance between a man's eyes is about the width of an eye.

Holloway St. Y.P.U. Entertains Frankford Club

An evening of fine fellowship was enjoyed by approximately sixty young people on Monday night, when the Y.P.U. of Holloway Street United Church had the Frankford Y.P.U. as guests, with a well planned program in charge of the Christian Missions group, under the convenership of Misses Jeanne Marshall and Ruth Playne.

The evening opened with a potluck supper, the tables tastefully decorated in Easter colors. Following the meal the group adjourned to the auditorium of the church where a sing song was led by Miss Shirley Hitchon, with Miss Margaret Hillis at the piano.

Miss Maude Burke, the president, conducted the business period, welcoming the guests and two new members to the local union. Forty-five members responded to the roll.

For the impressive Easter Devotional service, a worship centre featured a white cross banked with Easter lilies, and an open Bible flanked by tall white tapers. Quiet Easter music played by Miss Marion Allen was followed with silent prayer, concluded with "The Lord's Prayer" sung by Miss Norma Arkles, with Miss Dorothy Mitts as accompanist. The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Dorothy Seale. The offering was received; and dedicated by Miss Betty Keeble while Miss Olive Hall played a piano solo.

Rev. C. A. Perkins brought a timely and challenging message basing his remarks on the words, "And go quickly and tell." Reviewing the events of the week prior to Jesus' death and resurrection, Mr. Perkins said that the two days which mean most to Christians are Good Friday and Easter Sunday. "The Easter message is a message of triumph," continued Mr. Perkins." It brings deliverance from the fear of death, whose cure is a fuller and more confident trust in God, and in the doctrine of immortality."

"Our responsibility is to take this message to foreign lands, that other peoples may surrender their lives to Him, and that they, too, may 'go quickly and tell'," challenged the speaker.

An enjoyable recreational period was led by Miss Betty Keeble.

Appreciation of the Frankford group was expressed by Mr. Raymond Scott, and the evening concluded with the Friendship Circle, and the theme song, "We're On the Upward Trail."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Never Chase a Boy, "Shortie"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 years old, and have been going with a boy for about three months. I really thought he was very nice. He gave me a lovely present, which looked as thought he might have thought something of me.

The last time he came to see me, he told me he would be back a certain night, but he hasn't showed up since.

I gave him a large snapshot of myself and I have one of him. Do you think I should write him for my picture and see what actually is the trouble, or would you forget the whole matter?

"Shortie"

You have the right idea, "Shortie," when you talk about forgetting the whole matter. It would be very silly of you to run after a boy who shows unmistakable signs of having lost interest in you. No girl ever gets anywhere by chasing a boy. All she usually gets out of it is to chase him away, instead of catching up with him. Nothing scares a boy off faster than to feel that he is being pursued.

And what's a snapshot anyhow? It's not as though you'd given him something with any real value. What would be the point of trying to get it back from him except to give you an excuse to get in touch with him?

If you're a smart girl, you'll let him alone. If he's ever going to look you up again, he'll do it to see what you're up to, because he hasn't heard from you, not because you try to lure or force him into it.

She's "In Love" With Her Cousin

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 15 years of age and very much in love with a fellow 20, who also happens to be my cousin. I don't mind this, because my father and mother are cousins and are very happy.

This cousin of mine has taken me out a few times, but always with other couples. My father does not like me to go out just yet, and anyway not with a relative.

What I would like to know is if he really loves me or not. He has never kissed me or told me he loved me. He is very sensible. Please tell me how I can find out if he loves me, and if he does, why doesn't he show it? He's held my hand in the movies, and when we are walking along together, but that's about all. I'm only human, and I'd like to enjoy all the things of a girl my age.

"Heartbroken"

There is a great deal of difference between loving a person and being "in love" with him or her. Many a teen-age girl has an older boy cousin who is a hero to her and about whom she weaves romantic dreams. That's perfectly normal. And the average older boy enjoys this hero-worship from a younger relative and likes to keep it alive by paying her a little attention now and then, unless she makes a pest of herself by getting over-emotional about him, as you seem to be doing.

So if you want to keep on enjoying this boy's company occasionally, I'd advise you to stop wondering about whether he's "in love" with you or not. I doubt very much that he is. And stop expecting him to pet you when he takes you out. It would be far better if the girls your age got a lot less petting when they went out with boys. If you try to be as sensible as you say he is, he'll like you much more than if you insist on trying to turn a pleasant relationship into something sentimental.

No Magic Formula For Changing A Man's Character

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married 12 years, and am 31 years old. I have a little one 2 1-2 years old who has been sick quite a bit, and on such occasions it seems I neglect my home, as I just can't seem to be on the go all day and all night, too.

At such times, my husband always tells me he is fed up and doesn't intend to take much more of it. He's the type who thinks it's your responsibility when the baby is sick and won't give a helping hand, but just sits and criticizes. He has an urge to run around with girls every now and then, and this sort of thing is always a starting point for him.

He isn't tied down, but has his night off with the boys every week and also goes to the show on a Saturday or Sunday. When he's home, he either argues with me, or just goes to sleep. He likes to argue about money, and claims I'm spending it all the time, but he only gives me $25 a week to take care of everything except the rent. On the other hand, he takes whatever he wants.

I wish you could tell me what makes a man act like that.

'A Discouraged and Worried Wife'

Usually, a man "acts like that" because deep inside himself he is a tangle of dissatisfactions and doesn't know it, and wouldn't know what to do about it if he did know it. So, because these internal difficulties harry him, he is in a state of constant irritation that he blames on the things and people around him.

This sounds very complicated, I know, but it is complicated, and unfortunately there is nothing you can do about it, unless in some way your husband could realize that his real trouble is with himself. It is very hard for a wife to be told that all she can do about a bad situation is just to make the best of it. But no words of yours are going to help matters, and unless you are prepared to take some such decisive action as separating from him for a while, in the hope that that might wake him up, I do not see how you can make him mend his ways. There is no magic formula for changing a man's character.

"Musketeers"

By ANGELA CRAIN

Typically British is this sportswear creation titled 'Musketeers'. It is a lovely shade of blue with white pipings, white belt and shirt to match. Jean Simmons, one of the J. Arthur Rank stable of future stars, models the outfit.

Fashion Flashes

A SENSIBLE APPROACH to the April showers problem is that adopted by the milliner who uses waterproofed ribbons. Nice for an off-the-face roller of pale blue felt trimmed with rosettes and long follow-me streamers of rose, turquoise and shocking blue ribbon.

MAYBE it's a trend or something, but we do hear tell that many teen-agers are using shoulder pads as hip pads, to give a hippy look, which, of course, means a minimized waistline!

DOING NICELY is the dress-up sweater for informal evening wear. Black chenille makes a sleeveless sweater with broad shoulders. An off-center trimming is a coat of arms design in gold sequins and multi-colored beads. Teamed up with a black skirt and a wide belt of gold kidskin, it makes a nice evening rig.

NOT SO MANY forward-tilted hats this year, but those that do appear are really handsome. Bright green Milan straw makes a forward-posed homburg veiled in matching green. Veiling ties in back with a big crisp bow. Height is gained in front by a cluster of pink roses and white satin wheat sprays.

WE DON'T KNOW just how the cleaners are going to like it, but the rash of pleated clothes that is appearing is really something. Finely pleated from neck to hem is a dress of lightweight woolen in navy blue, held by a belt of lighter-than-navy alligator. White pique for the rounded neckline and elbow-length-sleeve edging.

IN BETWEEN season clothes are handsome this year. Deep cream woolen, flecked with tiny bits of vanilla brown, is used for a topper trimmed with collar and notched revers of nutria. Fur edging for crescent-shaped slit pockets.

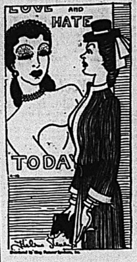
BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON



One wonders if she wears her mask in the family circle.

Cold Beauty! Unfreeze your face!

Though she is out of the modern picture, she doesn't know it, the woman with the cold, vapid, expressionless map. Her ambition is to appear sophisticated, if not downright bored. Eyebrows tweezed to a mere shadow, lips highly colored, cheeks pale, shoulders lifted, she gives the onlooker the impression that she finds it a bother to keep on living. She's done everything, seen everything, what now is left for her? One wonders if she wears her mask in the family circle. Not likely. You can't imagine any man whispering sweet nothings in her ear.

The woman who qualifies for charm, who creates friends and keeps them, is the one who has an eloquent face. The eloquence of her face shows that she possesses endearing human qualities. She has an interesting emotional set-up. She is gay, she is sympathetic, she has understanding. At moments her countenance will express warmth and vital animation. Though her features may be plain as plain, she is compelling and attractive. To watch her varying facial expressions is like watching a play on the stage. You are fascinated. She is full of surprises. Her smile and her laugh are to be remembered.

You know women like that. You love to meet them. They are never tiresome, because they never pose, have no affections.

They'll never let their eyes focus off into space when you are talking to them, as will the refrigerated femme who thinks only of herself and her own interests. The muscles of their faces are never set or tense.

Miss Frozen Face should train her facial fibers. If she doesn't, that bored look will be patterned by fine lines and furrows. She will age before her time. While the sophisticated expression may seem arty and smart in the early twenties, it will be regarded as a sour mug in middle and advanced age. What does it get her? Nobody wants to give her a second glance. Her appearance is depressing. We all enjoy looking at pleasant faces; there is a sort of spiritual uplift about them. They are nice to remember.

Some facial muscles express pleasure, others express displeasure. Keep your happy one on the job, even when you are alone. Never, at any time, let your portrait take on the lines of a graven image. Everytime you are doing that you are losing out just a little bit in the life-long battle for beauty and the preservation of youthful appearance.

Keep an upward curve to the lips. With the lip ends lifted the cheeks form pleasing curves. Let your countenance reflect affability and good nature, no matter how you feel inside.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Ways of Friendship"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Last Christmas my sister and I decided that we would give each other the Christmas gift we each most wanted. I chose a supply of Informals, and she let me choose the kind and size I preferred. I chose the largest size I could find (thought this would be most suitable for my large handwriting); plain (I don't like the ones with a "panel"). I chose Shaded Antique Roman style of engraving (I thought that the most graceful), had my formal name engraved in the centre of the first page, and my address in letters smaller than those in my name engraved in the lower right corner. I like them very much and have enjoyed using them the few times I have used them, but I would so much like to know what you think about the style I chose (you've answered quite a few questions for me in your column, and I've followed your suggestions.)

2. Now I'd also like to follow your advice about writing frequent notes, to "keep friendships in repair," and I want to use my Informals for these notes, for invitations, and for as many uses as you will suggest to me.

Christine.

1. Your choice of Informals is perfect: large ones are much more convenient than smaller ones; I think, look smarter too; and, as you wisely decided, are more suitable for larger handwriting, for the notes to be written on the inside pages. I too prefer plain cards to the paneled ones, just as I prefer plain wedding paper to paneled paper. Shaded Antique Roman would be my choice too for the style of engraving: slender, graceful letters, with a light-hearted air. Your formal name correctly in the centre of the first page, and, for greater convenience, your address in the lower right corner.

2. Congratulations on having acquired these new treasures. They are a "modern convenience," and are deservedly called "the cards of a hundred uses!" You'll find your Informals a gracious and beckoning way to "keep friendships in repair," to keep in pen-step with the ways and doings of friendship.

They are an appropriate way too of sending invitations for all kinds of informal parties: a tea (tea-for-a-few guests or a tea for many guests); Open House; a cocktail party; a bridge (or any other games-party); a house-warming; a buffet party of any kind and for any time of day; Sunday morning breakfast or the so-called "brunch;" dessert-and-coffee party; a small, informal dance; a musicale; a shower.

Also, if you are invited to any of these parties, and a reply is requested (or even if it isn't, if you are punctilious about acknowledging all invitations), you may properly use your Informals for your acceptance or regret.

A particularly nice thing about having a supply of Informals is that you'll find them an inspiration to write the many messages that add a charming grace to life. A message of congratulation to a friend about a promotion or a new position or a speech or a graduation or any other event important in his or her life. A few words of felicitation to the parents when their baby is born. A little message of well-wishing sent to, or left at the home of, a friends who is ill. A message of sympathy sent to an acquaintance (you should write a note on note-paper to a friend), in whose family there has been a death. And for those gracious words of appreciation to be written to your hostess the day after her party.

These folded-over cards are used too to notify friends of a new address, or a temporary address, or a new telephone number. They are also sent as "reminder cards," a follow-up to a telephoned invitation repeating the date, place, hour.

Many people also use these cards to write their greetings for various holidays, and for birthday-felicitation notes. And with a message written on the inside pages, they may be enclosed with flowers, a book, candy, or other gifts.

Happy writing to you!

Quebec and Ontario Take Identical Steps to Raise Needed Revenue for Provinces

Both Forecast Surplus for the 1947-48 Fiscal Year

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 2 (CP)—Quebec and Ontario, in the absence of new taxation agreements with the Dominion, have taken identical steps to raise the revenue needed for the administration of matters under Provincial jurisdiction and both have forecast a surplus for the 1947-48 fiscal year.

Meantime Nova Scotia, the third province which has been unable to come to agreement with the Dominion, is still carrying on negotiations. Premier Macdonald disclosed last week that in an effort to bring about agreement he had made a new request to the Dominion to move out of the minor tax fields and to undertake to hold annual Dominion-Provincial conference during the five-year term of the taxation agreement.

Later, he said he had received a reply to his proposals but did not divulge the contents.

Finance Minister Abbott likewise remained silent on Mr. Macdonald's proposals, but during a recent debate in the Commons he said he could see "no purpose" in calling a new Dominion-Provincial conference until other provinces indicated their willingness to enter into new financial agreements with the Dominion.

Responsibility With Provinces

He said the responsibility for the failure of the government to initiate social security and public investment programs rested with those provinces which had "not seen fit" to enter new agreements.

The Quebec budget made public March 25 and the Ontario budget brought down March 11 showed that the two provinces, at least for the 1947-48 fiscal year, will not re-enter the personal income tax field which they occupied jointly with the Dominion until 1941.

Both provinces, however, will re-enter the corporation tax field and collect seven per cent levy on corporation profits for 1947. They will also increase their gasoline taxes from eight to 11 cents a gallon as from March 31 when the Dominion gives up the three-cent-a-gallon tax it imposed on gasoline in wartime.

These changes were the main one contained in the budgets, brought down after two provinces found they were unable to conclude satisfactory new taxation agreements with the Dominion to replace the expiring wartime agreements of 1942.

Hon. Onesime Gagnon, Quebec's provincial treasurer, estimated a surplus of $8,590,364 for the 1947-48 fiscal year, with revenues forecast at $147,434,000 and expenditures at $137,843,638. Surplus for the 1946-47 year was estimated at $1,131,000.

Hon. Leslie Frost, provincial treasurer for Ontario, forecast a surplus of $367,143, with revenues set at $168,936,451 and expenditures at $168,569,308. Surplus for 1946-47 was estimated at $54,000.

Six Provinces Agree

The other six provinces—British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island all have new agreements awaiting ratification.

Under the 1942 agreements all the provinces gave up the income and corporation tax fields to the Dominion and received as compensation amounts equivalent to what each of them collected from the taxes in 1941. The agreements began expiring last October and and the last of them expire March 31.

From August, 1945, down to the end of January efforts were made to negotiate new agreements. On January 25, in what Finance Minister Abbott described as a final offer, the Dominion put forward to the provinces two new options.

In return for exclusive use of the personal income, corporation and inheritance tax fields for the next five years, the Dominion offered to pay $12.75 per capita of the 1942 population, plus 50 per cent of the provincial tax receipts from income and corporation taxes in 1940 and plus the subsidies already provided for by statute. As an alternative the provinces could take $15 per capita plus the statutory subsidies.

Not Asking For Handout

In presenting the Ontario budget, Mr. Frost said that acceptance of the Dominion's tax proposals would have been a "betrayal of the interests of the province."

"We are not asking any huge handout from the Dominion government," he said. "Our taxpayers contribute nearly one-half of the direct Dominion taxes. One-half of such handouts will therefore come from our own people and we recognize how unfair would be the burden which they would bear."

Only with a tax productivity of about $163 per capita was being offered a subsidy of $17 per capita. On the other hand, Prince Edward Island with a productivity of $32.80 was being offered a maximum subsidy of $23.33.

Premier Drew of Ontario said that if his province had accepted the Dominion proposals the Ontario taxpayers would have had to pay $74,000,000—the amount of the proposed Dominion subsidy to Ontario—in the income, corporation and inheritance tax fields.

Instead of having to pay that $74,000,000 the taxpayers through the changes in the gasoline and corporation tax rates, would provide $53,000,000 to their own government. This, he said, represented a "direct and positive saving to the taxpayers of Ontario of $21,000,000."

Coal Shortage Ends Famous Express Run

Bristol, England—(CP)—Railwaymen in Britain and abroad regret the passing of the Cornish Riviera express, the Great Western Railway's principal train, suspended as a result of the coal crisis.

The Riviera made its first run in July, 1904, became the father of long "non-stop" runs throughout the world and for 25 years held the long-distance record.

In pre-war time people set their watches by it.

BEWARE DAMPNESS

Dampness invites disease of the rheumatic type, particularly in undernourished children, therefore parents are advised to change children's damp shoes, stockings and other garments as soon as they come indoors.

Blackwell Charges Newspaper With Distortion

Toronto, April 1. (CP)—Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell yesterday charged the Toronto Star with distortion in reporting the introduction he made to an amendment to the Police Act. The amendment in question concerned the section which prohibits members of police forces from joining trade unions.

Rising before the orders of the day in the legislature, Mr. Blackwell quoted the Star as saying that he said police must be protected from "evil influences", with the direct inference that these influences were trade unions.

Mr. Blackwell re-read his remarks from Hansard to prove that at no time did he use the word "evil".

The Attorney-General said he was sure that the Star reporters in the Press Gallery had given an accurate account of the explanation but added that his complaint concerned what happened to a story after it reached the Star office. He said it was not in the interest of the public that he Attorney-General should be exposed to a "continuous campaign of misrepresentation."

This was "deliberate, dishonest journalism."

"The Daily Star should confine itself to facts and honest opinions when publishing discussion both in the legislature and in public."

To Increase Output Of Spitsbergen Coal

Oslo —(CP)— Norwegian coal mines in Spitsbergen will begin annual production of 500,000 tons this year, it was stated at the annual meeting of the Store Norske Spitsbergen Coal Company.

Last year's production was 43,000 tons. Labor forces at the mines had increased from 344 to 859 men.

FRANCO APPEARS ON BALCONY FOUR TIMES

Madrid, April 2 —(AP)—Francisco Franco made four balcony appearances yesterday, acknowledging parading demonstrators who shouted "Franco, Franco, Franco."

"With firmness and patriotism, we shall make Spain steadfast," he told the crowd which appeared far smaller than that of last year.

Henry A. Wallace Criticizes Govt.

New York, April 1. (AP)—Henry A. Wallace, former vice-president of the United States, told a cheering audience last night that "sooner or later Truman's program of unconditional aid to anti-Soviet governments will unite the world against America and divide America against herself."

Declaring that "the President and his Republican backers are less concerned with the need of the Greek people for food than the need of the American Navy for oil," Wallace said that "the plan to contain communism is really secondary to that push for oil."

The Madison Square Garden rally, called a "crisis meeting" by the sponsors, the Progressive Citizens of America, drew a crowd estimated at more than 19,000.

The former Commerce secretary reiterated his argument that "the Greek problem is a world problem and must be settled by the United Nations."

Elliott Roosevelt, son of the late President, was another speaker. He called for "revitalizing the Democratic Party before the 1948 election" as "the voice of the fighting Progressives".

Ahearn Provides Gouzenko Annuity Gazette Reveals

Montreal, April 2. (CP)—T. F. Ahearn of Ottawa, president of the Ottawa Electric Railway company and former Liberal member of parliament for Ottawa from 1930 to 1940, was identified by the Gazette today as the man who personally provided Igor Gouzenko an annuity of $100 a month.

The newspaper, describing Mr. Ahearn as a "public-spirited Canadian citizen," said Mr. Ahearn had released a statement in which he said he had intended remaining anonymous "but that has not proved possible."

Mr. Ahearn's statement said in part:

"I presented annuities because of the great and important services that Igor Gouzenko has rendered to Canada, to the United States and the other real democracies. His action has awakened all Canadians of undivided loyalty to a very graceful threat to our national security. One result is that we can now recognize the objects aimed at by the smoke screen and smear campaigns of the communists and the fellow travellers. Through Igor Gouzenko's unshaken evidence treason has been punished and the authorities have been put on the track of many others. . . "

The newspaper said it "is understood that Mr. Ahearn has completed the transaction in regard to the annuity. The arrangement is that $50 a month will be paid for life to Gouzenko and the same to his wife, and should either of them die the same sum will be paid to the heirs for a period of 20 years."

PRINCESS LOUISE BURIED IN BRUSSELS

Brussels, April 1 (AP)—Princess Louise of Saxony, whose adventures caused a stir in European courts 40 years ago, was buried quietly in Brussels last week, where she had lived in retirement and relative poverty for 30 years.

A daughter of Ferdinand IV of Tuscany, and herself an Archduchess of Austria, she had been married at the age of 21 to Prince Frederic of Saxony, heir to the former kingdom of Saxony.

New Nomination If Candidate Dies Before Election

Toronto, April 2. (CP)—Should a candidate for election to any municipal office die before the election is held, a new nomination date will be set. This procedure is set out in an amendment to the Municipal Act which was approved by the Municipal Law Committee of the Ontario Legislature Tuesday.

Under the existing legislation, municipal Affairs Department officials said, if there was a two-man contest for any one office, one of the candidates would be automatically elected if the other died before voting day. To guard against such situations, this amendment was introduced.

Another section of the amendment requires a proposed candidate, who is absent from a nomination meeting, to inform the returning officer in writing of his acceptance of the nomination. Otherwise the nomination will be void.

When one person is nominated for more than one office, the new law will require him to announce prior to 9 p.m. on nomination day which office he intends to contest. Failing to do this, the returning officer will consider him eligible only for the first office to which he was nominated.

Negro and Wife Taken From Home And Flogged

Lithonia, Ga., April 2—(AP)—Police Chief Edward L. Foster said Tuesday that a Negro and his wife were taken from their home by four unmasked white men last night and flogged severely. The woman was shot in the foot.

The chief said that neither the man, Aggie Herndon, 46, nor his wife, Lottie, 40, could give any reason for the flogging, except that one of the band accused them of stealing.

The four men, dressed in overalls, came to his home and demanded that he open the door.

"This is the law," he quoted one of them as saying.

When Herndon opened the door, he said he asked the white men: "What's the trouble?"

"Them things you stole," he quoted one of them as saying.

"If you're the law, search the house," Herndon said he invited them. "I've got receipts for everything here."

Herndon said one of the men then picked up his shotgun and told him and his wife to get into the car.

Then, Herndon said, they drove to a wooded area where the men ordered him and his wife out of the car. His wife was shot and one of the assailants placed his foot on her neck and beat her.

Herndon said he was beaten with a pistol, flashlight and blackjack, but broke away from his captors and fled to a friend's home where he telephoned police. The woman wandered through the woods after the men left her and was found by police Tuesday morning at a country store near here. Police took her to hospital.

Helicopter Use Against Fires In Bush Foreseen

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 2—(CP)—Air service director G. E. Ponsford said today helicopters "would be extremely valuable in fighting bush fires in Northern Ontario in areas that are inaccessible to conventional type aircraft."

Mr. Ponsford was commenting on an announcement yesterday by Premier George A. Drew that Ontario would be the first province in Canada to experiment with the helicopter in forest fire fighting.

"Use of the helicopter would enable us to set up some sort of shuttle-service, to place a few men and some equipment on the spot of a fire no matter how inaccessible and to reinforce them with much greater speed," he said.

New Meeting May be Called To Discuss Strike

By JOHN TRACY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Glace Bay, N.S., April 2. (CP)—The announcement of a new meeting between Union and operators to discuss the six-weeks old Maritime coal walkout left an air of expectancy in the strike-bound Cape Breton colliery towns today but drew little comment from leaders of the striking United Mine Workers (C.C.L.)

Freeman Jenkins, U.M.W. District 26 President, greeted the announcement with the statement that the company-union conference was discussed during his visit to Washington last week when he talked with the Union's International President, John L. Lewis.

Only details of the proposed conference so far made public were contained in a statement in the provincial legislature at Halifax yesterday by Labor Minister L. D. Currie.

He said the meeting had been arranged to take place in Montreal Sunday between John Owens, U.M.W. international board member, and Arthur Cross, president of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, largest Maritime coal operator.

This was later confirmed at Ottawa by Arthur MacNamara, Federal Deputy Labor minister, who said the meeting had been arranged through the Federal government.

The conference will mark the first time that Union and company representatives have been brought together since a tripartite parley with Federal government officials at Ottawa failed to head off the strike Feb. 15.

Only other development yesterday was Mr. Jenkins' statement that the Union "will take any action that may be necessary no matter how drastic" to keep American coal from reaching the Dosco Steel Mills in Sydney.

Seeks to Learn Whereabouts of Wife

Napanee, April 2. (CP)—Robert Tugwood has tramped the street of Napanee, Toronto, Belleville and Kingston and wired the R.C.M.P. in Halifax, trying to find his young wife, Violet.

Unless she turns up before next Thursday, the Tugwoods' present chances of getting a home of their own will "go by the Board."

Their application for a loan with which to build a home under the Small Holdings Act is to be heard Thursday. Violet has to be on hand, too, when the application is heard.

BETTER ROADS SOUGHT

Ottawa, April 2 — (CP)—Better roads in Eastern Ontario will be sought by Ottawa representatives to the divisional meeting of Boards of Trade at Winchester, Ont., April 16.

L. L. Hodgson, chairman of the Ottawa Trade Board's Good Roads Committee, told a Board council meeting today Eastern Ontario had been neglected in this regard.

Night Flare-Up Calls Out Troops In Cawnpore

Cawnpore, India, April 2 — (Reuters) — Troops were called out today in this big industrial city of the united provinces after an overnight flare-up of communal rioting had broken a 36-hour lull.

It was officially stated that the situation was "well in hand."

Police opened fire to disperse Hindus and Moslems hurling brickbats at one another and later arrested 66 of the rioters.

Elsewhere in the city police seized firearms from houses after rioters had fired and wounded six policemen.

Troops and police today patrolled the city of Kohat, 30 miles south of Peshawar, northwest frontier province where political prisoners earlier rioted in the city jail. A week's curfew has been imposed.

Indian political prisoners in the Peshawar central jail were also reported to have rioted today, beating up their guards and setting fire to tents in the jail compound before order was restored.

As far as can be ascertained there has been little loss of life and the police and military are active in the area," the communique added.

Must Show Cause Why Gruner Should Hang

Jerusalem, April, 2 —(AP)—The Palestine Supreme Court granted today a plea by the city of Tel Aviv that military authorities, the military court and prison officials be required to show cause why Dov Bela Gruner should be hanged for anti-British violence.

The Jewish community, in a petition signed by its president, Mayor Israel Rokack demanded that the officials give reasons for the execution of Gruner's death sentence, claiming that the sentence and conviction violated terms of the British mandate over Palestine.

Hearing was set for Thursday in Jerusalem court.

The privy council previously had refused to consider a plea on Gruner's behalf made by Gruner's uncle.

Gruner himself has refused to take any action in his own case, maintaining that he is a prisoner of war and should be treated as one.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canada's first major bilingual feature film, "Whispering City," will be released through the J. Arthur Rank organization as part of its policy of encouraging movie production in Empire countries.

The story of a girl reporter who stumbles by accident on the secret of a murder concealed for 20 years, the English version stars Mary Anderson, Helmut Dantine and Paul Lukas, while the French version has Paul Dupuis, Nicole Germain and Jacques Auger.

You Figure It Out.

One of those business deals which make Hollywood such a wonderful place has been transacted over the film version of the Broadway hit play, "State of the Union," which will star Spencer Tracy. The picture will be directed by Frank Capra, one of the partners in Liberty Films, which will produce it.

But first Liberty Films had to get a clearance from R.K.O., which has their distribution contract and Capra had to agree to direct a picture for M-G-M in return for Tracy's services. In addition Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, authors of the play, will receive 50 per cent of the profits besides a flat payment of $300,000.

What the Stars Are Doing.

Gregory Peck is still the most sought-after leading man in the business with the announcement that he will play "Captain Horatio Hornblower." . . . Cary Grant will star in "Weep No More," with Alfred Hitchcock directing. . . . Orsen Welles will produce direct and star in a screen version of "MacBeth."

Queen Forced To Repulse Native With Umbrella

Johannesburg, South Africa, April 2 (Reuters)—The Queen had to repulse a native with her umbrella when he jumped on the running board as the Royal Family's automobile was approaching the East Rand gold mining town of Benoni during today's tour.

The native was wearing a sack cloth as clothing and as the car moved slowly along the route he ran up to it shouting "I want my King."

Police immediately surrounded the native and detained him for questioning and the Royal party then proceeded.

BRANDON ELKS DEFEAT CANUCKS TO LEAD SERIES

Winnipeg April 2 (CP)—Brandon Elks stood today on the threshhold of their first Western Canada Junior Hockey championship although their best-of-seven series with Moose Jaw Canucks for the crown has gone only three games, one of them a tie.

Elks lead the series 2-0 and need only a win and a tie in the remaining games to take a berth in the Memorial Cup final.

Routed Canucks 9-1 in the third game here last night before 5,000 gasping fans.

Almost from the first minute, Elks, flashing power and smoothness which ranked them with the best junior teams the west has produced, out-sped and out-classed the Saskatchewan club. It took them less than three minutes to mark up their first goal. They added another before the period ended, raised the margin to 5-1 in the second and then rapped in four more in the final.

Ray Manson slammed in two goals and added two assists to lead the point getters. Wally Hergesheimer was just behind with two goals and one assist. The others went off to Jeff Burman, Bud Evans, Gord Watters, Bill Johnson and Carl Kaiser.

OMAHA KNIGHTS HOLD HOCKEY LEAGUE TITLE

Still Have to Play for Championship of Two Divisions

(By The Associated Press)

Omaha Knights held the United States Hockey League championship today, but the Kansas City Pla-Mors, league and playoff champions last year are still in the running to repeat as playoff titlists.

The Knights won the league title last night in Omaha, downing Dallas 5-4, to win the best-of-seven playoffs four games to two.

At the same time at Kansas City the Pla-Mors winners of the northern division playoffs, shellacked Fort Worth 6-0 in the first game between the winners of the northern and southern division playoffs.

The Kansas City-Fort Worth best-of-five series winner will be the opponent for Omaha in the playoff championship.

Winkie Smith put Omaha into a 3-2 lead in the second period and Max McNab and Don Morrison fired two more in during the last stanza to match a Dallas rally good for two points. Morrison's last period goal was his second of the game.

Ken MacKenzie scored two goals for Dallas.

Larry Silvestri scored twice and had an assist for Kansas City. Johnny Harms had a goal and three assists while Rap Powell counted once and was credited with four assists.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York April 2 —(CP)— Not all the comments you hear are flattering, but Brooklyn Dodgers still provide the most uninhibited copy of any team in baseball....first it was a divorce for Laraine (Mrs. Leo Durocher) Day, and then a separation for outfielder Pete Reiser..a shoulder separation, to be precise, that may reduce the star base runner's effectiveness.... not content with that, Branch Rickey publicity admits that manager Durocher is "behaving like a schoolboy" in dodging exhibition games to be with "Rainey," as Durocher calls his screen star wife.

The Dodgers some of them anyway are as ebullient as ever ....a reporter asked star pitcher Kirby Higbe whether he thought he'd win 20 games this season ....Kirby reared back: "Only 20? What do you want me to do, go home after the fourth of July and start fishing?"

Big And Little

They're calling Hank Greenberg and Ralpy Kiner of the Pittsburgh Pirates "Big Boom" and "Little Boom" nicknames reminiscent of the days when Paul and Lloyd Waner paced the Pirates as "Big Poison" and "Little Poison" respectively.

Wait Till Next Year

About the most charitable thing said of Philadelphia Athletics is that they may finish last with a stronger team than in 1946 .... the As, incidentally, appear to have a yen for Canadian players.... Toronto's Dick Fowler and Phil Marchildon of Penetanguishene, Ont., were two of the main pitching props last season and now Connie Mack says Hank Biasatti, 22-year-old first baseman from Windsor Ont., is a cog in Philadelphia's 1948 plans.... "He'll be a great player" says Mack.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Shades of Woolwich Arsenal; Patrick Thistle and the Spurs! There is a very strong possibility that ye goode olde game of soccer fitba' may be revived here—but shortly. Seems as there's a lot of blokes, Scotties, and Paddies, who have been getting the itch in their number nines to boot the ba' all over the field again, and a meeting will be held come Thursday night in the Y.M.C.A. to discuss ways and means.

• • •

Soccer was extinct in this hamlet long before we were industed into the sports tribe that inhabits the banks of the Moira, but we are told that some years ago, Belleville boasted a team that, while not of cup quality, took dust from no squad in the surrounding district.

However, there is a movement afoot, no pun intended, to revive the sport and in all likelihood a large gathering will turn out on Thursday night at the Y to discuss organization and other questions which will come up. It is understood that there are soccer teams in Peterborough and Oshawa, not to mention Trenton Air Station and a grouping might be arranged—or at least some exhibition tilts during the season. In any event every one interested in the game is urgently requested to attend the meeting. It's tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the "Y." Be there, if you are a soccer player or a fan. Let's get the thing started in good time.

The Cobourg Galloping Ghosts, Intermediate football champions of last year, heard lots of nice pleasantries about themselves at a banquet tendered them in the home town, or at least Cobourg, where they were presented with windbreakers — and the eulgies of a proud townspeople. The Ghosts (circ. 1946) were a smart well-balanced squad, with plenty of power in the line and speed in the back field. They were worthy champions.

• • •

But that's not all. After the beans and the banquet, the wishes and the windbreakers, the boys and the brains got together for a round-table discussion, and out of the miasma of tete-a-tete conference there emerged a tentative Ontario Rugby Football Union grouping, possibly, 'tis rumored, of Senior "B" rating. Teams from Cobourg, Oshawa, Peterborough, Trenton Fliers, Queen's, Orillia, were mentioned, pretty much wishful thinking, it appears, but it sounded good, at least.

• • •

Peterborough, Oshawa, Cobourg and Orillia, will likely complete the grouping, as football prospects around Trenton Air Station are rather slim, at the present. There is talk in this man's town of getting the pigskinners together in the near future and haranging over the possibility of an Intermediate entry. There is plenty of material available, so the lads in the know inform us, and all that is needed is some sort of organization with a view to getting a sponsor interested. It is likely the Cobourg, Oshawa, Petes, Orillia, Big Four would welcome the bashful Belleville in their grouping — so how about it, fellas?

To the memory of the little man who isn't there, any more. E. J. (Jim) Healy, dean of harness racehorsemmen passed under the Last Great Wire the other day. We knew the late Jim when in and around Picton years ago, and we counted him as a friend, as did thousands of others. In fact, you couldn't call Jim by any other name. Quiet, small of stature, his keen brain was alert to everything that went on about him. His low voice carried with it a friendly inflection. You liked Jim immediately. He rarely laughed but his face crinkled in a warming smile when he was amused. He had that rare quality of putting you at your ease after the first few words were spoken. And he never forgot those he knew. His big heart, that went out to his horses, stretched itself to include a host of human friends.

Jim's name was synonymous with harness horses. He loved them, lived them, and they were part and parcel of his being. He was a grand citizen, one whom any community would be proud to call their own, Picton especially, and the country in general, have suffered a keen loss. It is people like the late Jim Healy, that nations can ill afford to lose.

• • •

The almost defunct Ontario Athletic Commission is now, or soon will be one hundred per cent hors de combat, relegated to the limbo of things that were — but will shortly pop up again dressed up in new Spring garb—conservative models, according to an act introduced in the Ontario Legislature yesterday.

• • •

The new legislation is known as the Athletic Control Act, and its effect is to place the function of this commission under the Department of Education. But the other boys at Queen's Park will have something to say and do about the matter. Professional boxing and wrestling, will come under the Treasury Department to facilitate the collection of taxes. Law enforcement will be in the care of the Attorney General's Department.

• • •

Physical instruction and fitness side of the Commission will be looked after by the physical health branch of the Education Department. Provision is made for appointment of an athletic commissioner for the approval of contracts and other duties previously carried on by the former commission.

• • •

Taxes taken from sports activities will be available for the advancement of sport. — (Teams needing sponsors will please line up on the right.) These taxes will not go into the consolidated revenue fund but will be placed in a separate fund called the Physical Fitness and Recreation Fund.

• • •

Picton apparently is going after harness racing in a big way this summer. The lads in "sunny" or is it snowy, 'Spain' have formed a new Prince Edward Driving Association and will hold its first harness meet on July 12. Efforts will be made to have Arthur Blade, well-known Ottawa starter, present for the occasion. Three races will be held and outstanding horses from Ontario and Quebec are expected to be present. If the July meet is successful others will follow.

Eddie Shore Given Scroll For Hall of Fame

(By The Canadian Press)

One of the most famous professional hockey jerseys of all time — the No. 2 jersey worn by Boston's famed Eddie Shore — is now a part of hockey tradition in Canada.

Before the start of Tuesday night's Boston-Canadian playoff tussle, Eddie Shore, Mr. Hockey himself, was presented with his scroll of membership in the International Hockey Hall of Fame, Kingston, Ont., and thousands of his admirers cheered as the jersey, whose wearer was watched by so many in his long career, was presented to the Hall of Fame.

Carrying politeness to the ultimate degree, W.E. (Tiny) Strange, manager of the Brandon Elks on hearing that a scout from Toronto representing St. Michael's College, was unable to obtain a ticket to watch the Elks in play rustled up a ticket himself. Thus the "enemy spy" was invited to watch his opponents — at their expense. Elks and St. Mikes are possible opponents for the east-west junior hockey championship.

President of the Eastern U. S. Amateur Hockey League Tommy Lockhart, about a month ago told Boston Olympics, holders of the Walker Cup, to return the trophy emblematic of league supremacy. They couldn't do it — they had not seen the mug. Rummaging through his office, Tommy found it himself — on April Fool's Day.

The Royal Canadian Golf Association today announced at Toronto that invitations to the Canadian Open golf championship at Toronto Scarboro Club July 16-19 have been sent to Bobby Locke, South African champion, and all those playing in the Masters' Invitation Tourney this week at Augusta, Ga.

The Toronto Rugby Union is toying with a motion that would give bantams and 110-pounders unlimited downfield blocking "just to see how it works out." If it goes through the move would follow Western Canada football ideas, where gridiron enthusiasts have long advocated a more open style for Canadian football.

Boston Red Sox Again Favored To Win in American

By GAYLE TALBOT

Tampa, Fla., April 2 — (AP)— Barring a terrific upset, Boston Red Sox will be right back in the World Series next fall, seeking revenge for the humiliating job done on them by the Cardinals in the '46 playoff.

For a time this spring many observers were "high" on Detroit Tigers. More recently, though, the wonder has grown as to what Tiger, or Tigers, might knock across the 127 runs that Hank Greenberg's bat produced last year.

The feeling has become widespread that the Tiger bosses made a big mistake when they peddled Hank to Pittsburgh. Several Detroit pitchers are said to be unhappy about the deal.

The American League finish should look about like this: 1, Boston; 2, Detroit; 3, New York; 4, Washington; 5, Cleveland; 6, Chicago; 7, St. Louis; and 8, Philadelphia.

Reay Produces Four Goals As Canadiens Defeat Bruins To Take Stranglehold on Series

Ken Mosdell Sustains Fractured Forearm and Don Gallinger Twisted Knee

Boston, April 2. (CP)—Montreal Canadiens were pounding the homeward trail today, confident they would finish, their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series with Boston Bruins in Montreal Thursday after outclassing the hub team 5-1 last night to take a commanding 3-1 lead in games.

A sparkling four-goal performance by centre Billy Reay was too much for the Bruins who showed little of the drive that marked their last game when they battled from behind to edge the flying Frenchman last Saturday here in a rough and tumble match.

Reay's four markers were only one short of the playoff record of five goals set by his more illustrous teammate Maurice (Rocket) Richard.

Johnny Quilty recruit from Springfield of the American League, fired the other Montreal counter while little Kenny Smith got the only shot past reliable Bill Durnan in the Canadiens' cage.

Both teams had another player to add to their already lengthy casualty lists. Ken Mosdell of the Habs suffered a possible fractured left forearm when he tripped over Durnan's stick and Don Gallinger of the Bruins was sidelined earlier with a severely bruised knee.

After battling through a scoreless first period in which the Bruins outshot Montreal 7-2, Reay sent Canucks in front at 5.04 of the second when he rammed home his own rebound after taking a relay from Richard. About a minute later, Quilty steered a blueline drive by defenceman Roger Leger past goalie Frankie Brimsek.

Reay notched his second goal to make it 3-0 at 10.38 when he blasted Leger's rebound past Brimsek during a Montreal power play.

Reay's third and fourth goals made victory certain in the final session.

Lineups

HERSHEY BEARS DEFEAT HORNETS BY 4-0 COUNT

Red Henry, Goalie for Winners, Tallies Third Shutout in Playoff Competition

(By The Canadian Press)

A rookie goalie up from the amateurs, and a band of rejuvenated former big league stars, today were the reasons why the powerful Hershey Bears enjoyed a one-game advantage in their best- of- seven battle with Pittsburgh Hornets for the Calder cup awarded to the winners in the American Hockey League playoff finals.

Last night in Hershey Pa., a standing-room-only crowd of 7,940 saw Gordon (Red) Henry, 20-year-old netminder up from Boston Olympics of the eastern Amateur Hockey League turn in a brilliant 4-0 shutout over Pittsburgh in the first game of the finals.

For Henry it was his third shutout of the playoffs and brought him within one blanking of tying the league mark set by Earl Robertson for Cleveland and in the 1937 playoffs. Against Cleveland, which Hershey eliminated in the semi-finals in four straight games, Henry allowed only three goals and after last night's affair he boosted a string of 150 minutes of scoreless hockey.

Ex-Boston Bruin Herb Cain, the leading goal-getter in the playoffs, started Hershey on the road to victory when he rifled a long shot into the Pittsburgh net—his seventh of the playoffs. Defenceman Hymie Buller and Gordie Bruce followed with tallies, Bruce converting while both teams were short-handed because of a shap exchange of blows between Pete Slobodian and Wally Wilson.

Hershey's final score came while the Bears swarmed around Bastien and Armand Gaudreault took a short pass from Don (The Count) Grosso and whipped it home at 19:46.

The second game of the finals will be played in Hershey Thursday night.

Australia's Davis Cup Team Again Built Around Jack Bromwich

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sydney, Australia, April 2.—(CP)—The tennis team representing Australia against Canada in the first round of Davis Cup play this year will be built again around John Bromwich, veteran two-hander.

Dinny Pails, singles player on the team that lost to the United States in December, and Newcomers Geoff Brown and Colin Long complete the 1947 Davis Cup aggregation.

Selection of these four following the retirement of Adrian Quist, Bromwich's 34-year-old doubles partner, caused no surprise though the choice of C. Roy Cowling, acting secretary of Victoria State's Lawn Tennis Association, was unexpected.

Bromwish is expected to play singles, as well as doubles with Colin Long, while Pails and Brown both will be available for singles play.

Bromwich is expected to improve his 1946 form, alter his tactics and sharpen up his play to cope with attacking methods employed successfully against him at Melbourne when the 1946 United States team took the Davis Cup from Australia.

Toronto Downs Detroit Wings To Take Edge in N.H.L. Playoff Series; Free-for-All Staged

Captain Syl Apps Puts Game on Ice With Two Goals in Last Period

Detroit, April 2. (CP)— One game up in their National Hockey League playoff with Detroit Red Wings, Toronto Maple Leafs today prepared for the fourth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final relieved to find "it was just a bad game we had to get out of our system, after all."

Leafs rolled to a 4-1 triumph over the Wings before a crowd of 14,496 here last night and the sure-footed way they did it wiped the shame out of their 9-1 defeat in Toronto last Saturday.

The Leafs, who won the first game of the series, 3-2 in overtime, now will go into the fourth game of the best-of-seven series here Thursday night with a 2-1 edge in games and a chance to take a strangle-hold on victory before returning to Toronto for the next match Saturday night.

Brawl At End

The same team that let Detroit push them around like schoolboys bristled like Bantam cocks from the word go The rough action culminated in a brawl three minutes before the finish that involved nearly every player on both teams.

The action started when Toronto's Gus Mortson hit big Bill Quakenbush with a body check that necessitated the Detroit defenceman being carried off. Detroit's Gord Howe chased Mortson into the penalty box and when a policeman attempted to separate them, Mortson and the officer threw punches at each other.

Both Howe and Mortson drew 10-minute misconducts.

Rookie Jimmy Conacher tied the count for Detroit at 1-1 midway through the second period while Bill Ezinick was serving a high-sticking penalty, eight minutes later, Harry Watson shot Toronto out front again to stay while Howe was off for slashing.

Don Metz had given Toronto its first-period lead when he spanked home Gaye Stewart's rebound after 12 minutes of play.

Lineups

Toronto—Goal, Broda; defence, Thomson, Mortson; centre Kennedy; Wings, Meeker, Lynn; Subs, Stanowski, Watson, N. Metz, Apps, D. Metz, Ezinicki, Gaye Stewart, Klukay, Boesch, Barilko.

Detroit—Goal, Almas; defence, Quackenbush, J. Stewart; centre, McFadden wings, Howe, J. Conacher Subs, Reise, Taylor, Lundy, R. Conacher, Horeck, Abel, Lindsay, Bruneteau, McCaig, Gauthier.

Summary:

1st Period

1 Toronto, D. Metz, (G. Stewart) 12:41

Penalties—Reise, Ezinicki, Barilko 2.

2nd Period

2 Detroit, J. Conacher, R. Conacher, Bruneteau) 7:51
3 Toronto, Watson (Ezinicki) 16:46

Penalties—Ezinicki, Howe.

3rd Period

4 Toronto, Apps (Ezinicki) 2:39
5 Toronto, Apps (Watson) 16;20

PETES BEATEN IN LAST MINUTE BY GEORGETOWN

Hamilton, April 2 (CP)—A goal by Murray Ezeard with only 90 seconds of playing time left gave Georgetown a 4-3 victory over Peterborough here last night and round honors by 9-8, the teams having battled to a 5-5 draw in a previous engagement.

Twice the winners had to come from behind, facing a two goal deficit at one time, but they proved to have the staying power when Petes faded.

Don Crowe of football fame was star defenceman for the losers while Blewett and Kingdon stood out on attack. For the winners Ezeard and Jack Storey were always dangerous the latter getting two of the four goals, while Gibson showed a fine burst of speed.

Lil Arthur King TKO's Joey Dolan In Fifth Round

Toronto, April 2 (CP)—Lil Arthur King, 129 1-2, Toronto's classy little Negro, had too much of everything last night for dancing Joey Dolan, 124, of Spokane, Wash., as he outboxed the American boy for four rounds then let fly with an early fifth round onslaught that wound up with Dolan TKO'd.

Referee Billy Burke grabbed Dolan after the dusky Negro dropped him for the seven count in the fifth. It was all over at 2.45 of that round.

In the semi-final scrap, Teddy Swain, 126, of Toronto, carried the fight the whole way against Benny May, 123 of Montreal and wound up with the official nod.

In the preliminary bouts, Sammy Sauve, Sudbury, Ont., decisioned Pat Kelly, London, Ont. Oshawa's Joey McPhee got the nod over Al Sundberg, Montreal. In a heavyweight scrap that showed one of the best on the card, Wilf Sauve, Sudbury, punched out a four round decision over Don Mogart of Toronto.

Jimmy Marson, Toronto got a six-round stamp of approval against pinch-hitter Andy Best, Montreal. Best climbed the ropes in place of Jasper O'Henley.

Had the Evidence

Teddington, Middlesex, England—(CP)—A tuft of hair which a landlady claimed had been pulled from her head by a tenant was handed to local magistrates when the tenant was summoned for assault. The tenant was bound over to keep the peace for 12 months.

CAUGHOO HELD UP AT BORDER

Holyhead Anglesey, Wales, April 2 (Reuters) —Caugho, the little Irish horse who defied all barriers to romp to victory in last Saturday's Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, could not hurdle his Majesty's customs last night.

Instead of being ashore by two bands from the boat at Dublin today, Caugho was spending the night in a stable borrowed from a railroad company's cart horse because the groom had not yet received the necessary export licence. The Board of Trade said the licence was mailed Monday.

Today if their are no further snags, the crack steeplechaser of 1947 will get his welcome in Dublin and will be triumphantly led along O'Connel Street to owner J. J. McDowell's jewelry shop.

Brown Derby Prices No Good for Weyburn

Weyburn, Sask. —(CP)— Two farmers walked out of a cafe here in a huff after taking a glance at the menu. When the proprietor chased after them to ask the trouble, they said they didn't feel like paying $1.75 for two poached eggs, no matter who poached them.

The proprietor explained that the menu they had seen — on the counter by accident — was from Hollywood's Brown Derby night club.

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 6

"Yours is a much more cosmopolitan society, I'm afraid. However, I'm sure that Clinton is big enough for you and Bill—and—and Carol."

Evelyn looked a little blank before she said, "At any rate, I shall do my best to be liked. It hasn't occurred to Bill that it might be—a little difficult for me. He expects everyone to feel about me as he does. I seem to be talking a great deal about myself."

Not enough, Freda thought. Just keep it up and I'll have you all figured out. But she said, "You haven't at all. I could tell you all about myself in one short paragraph. Husband, son, home. Nothing really exciting has happened to me in years and yet I find each day pretty exciting somehow. Maybe that's because I'm happy. But I must be going now."

Evelyn said, "I'm so sorry to see you go. We must—"

"Yes", Freda said. "We must."

Stepping into the shadows of late afternoon, Freda walked briskly to her car, the heat of her temper warming her. If Ian knew he would say, "Now don't be prejudiced, Freda," and she would say, "I'm not. I don't have to see it written down in red ink to know that Bill had married a broken-down aristocrat. You wouldn't understand, darling. You're too innocent. But Bill had married a lazy, expensive girl who won't for a second let him forget that she went to school in Switzerland and he to a public school. I know the type. They're poisonous and they cling like leaches. What little common-sense they have goes into grabbing off the first reliable citizen who comes along and wants to marry them after they pass 21 and nothing better has come along. But I haven't figured her out yet. I don't know if she's stupid or clever."

But she couldn't tell Ian. She couldn't and wouldn't tell anyone that she had met Bill's new wife this afternoon.

Closing the door after Freda, Evelyn went back to the divan and lay down and cushioned her head with her long arms. She was not only vastly amused, but vastly pleased that she had had a caller. Not that this particular caller battered. They were probably all the same here from Mrs. Jones to Mrs. Smith to Mrs. Kelly. Small-town socialites aping the real thing, getting ideas from the movies on how to dress and decorate their homes. She relaxed, took a deep, delicious breath as she thought that she had half an hour in which to be lazy before she must dress for Bill.

She yawned, wishing that Charlotte, her older sister, were here to see how well she was doing. Good old Charlotte, tweedy, plain awkward, horse-loving Charlotte, wife of Dick Stoddard and mother of two pig-tailed little girls as awkward and as horse-loving as she.

For good old Charlotte had said in the bedroom of her big Long Island house, "Evelyn, for your own sake, try to be a good wife to Bill. It's bad enough to take him away from his wife, but it will be much worse if you make a mess of it. I'm not going to dwell on his wife. I don't know her. I'm glad I don't. But I'm sorry for her, terribly sorry for her. But Bill is in his right mind and he wants to marry you and he's the only worthwhile man you've ever been interested in. Thank God, you got over that orchestra leader. Bill may not know how to sit on a horse, but at least he isn't an orchestra leader! And if you aren't too lazy, you can make a very decent life for yourself in Clinton with Bill. Dick agrees with me. He thinks that the divorce is unfortunate, but that if you behave yourself, you can live it down. But, you know, Dick has been terribly disgusted with you, darling, lately."

Poor old Charoltte, so serious, so well-meaning.

Evelyn liked to think of her childhood as the spoiled, pretty child of popular parents. The school in Switzerland and the holidays at Cannes...They had had money then and it had been taken for granted that Evelyn would make an even more brilliant match than had Charlotte who had surprised everybody by marrying a rich, middle-aged man who thought everything Charlotte did was perfect. But her gay parents had died together in the little house in Cannes that had burned to the ground one night and when their tangled affairs had been straightened, it became known that they had lived far in excess of their income.

As a poor girl Evelyn's popularity had waned, and so she had come home to live with Charlotte only to find that her sister's life and friends were intolerably dull and that American millionaires under 40 were incredibly rare. And so she had drifted among various groups of people, giving nothing of herself because she had nothing to give, but was always welcome for decorative purposes. Charlotte and Dick did not approve of her friends, and Evelyn frequently stayed away for weeks, returning only when Dick's allowance was exhausted.

She had never been in love with anyone until she met Rand Andrews, the leader of a swing orchestra. She had never been in love with anyone because she had always been too much in love with her own comfort, though innumerable men, thinking her exotic, had, briefly been in love with her. She liked several men in love with her and it had not occurred to her until recently and then at Charlotte's insistence that she should be making up her mind to marry since the supply of new men could not last indefinitely, and also since only one man had ever asked her to marry him and she had turned him down.

Slowly, for her mind worked slowly, it occurred to her that it was one thing to have several men want to take you to dinner, but quite another thing to have them want to buy you three meals for the rest of your life.

She had loved Rand as deeply and as intensly as she was capable of loving anyone. She had loved him enough to stir herself from her usual lathargic state to follow him to Miami and there to spend two exciting weeks. Rand, handsome, popular, athletic, had actually made her swim, play tennis and walk around Miami and, in the evening, sit at a table alone and listen to the orchestra until he could join her. But he did not tell her that he loved her, and Evelyn, inarticulate in everything except small social talk, could not tell him.

When he had had to leave to keep an engagement in Chicago he had said, "It's been swell, Evelyn. Wonderful. You've been like a picture sitting at the table every night waiting for me. You've given me some wonderful moments a guy like me won't forget. You're...But you can't come to Chicago with me and—and that's that. It's tough, but that's the way it is. I don't kid myself. The going has been too tough for me. I'm a here-today and gone-tomorrow kind of guy. I'm making hay while sun shines and you're—you're something else. You're Dick Stoddard's sister-in-law and that counts me out, baby."

She had been stunned and hurt more than anything else she had wanted to marry Rand and follow his orchestra and have people admire her as she sat at a table alone and looked at him. She had not cried and the hurt had not lasted long. Back in the Long Island house she slid back into the comfortable niche until Bill, coming to New York to see Dick on business, had come out one evening to dinner.

From the first night he had not been able to keep his eyes from her and Evelyn had thought how unusually good-looking and good-humored he was if enormously unsophisticated and a bit stuffy and conventional. A self-made young man, honest and ambitious and apparently deeply impressed by Charlotte's beautiful home and social position, he had been a new type to Evelyn, though, after he left, she had thought no more about him. For one evening quickly forgotten it had been rather pleasant to have a man worship you from afar especially since their minds not to get married, and the field was narrowing alarmingly.

When Bill had come to New York again, he had called Evelyn, and she had had some difficulty in recalling him. However, she met him in New York for dinner and dancing, pleased again at his little-boy worship of her. As the time went on and each time he came she saw him, she began to feel more and more pleased at his attentions and almost touched his young ardor. She had told Charlotte,. "You'd think he'd never kissed a gir lbefore," and poor old Charlotte had looked quite disturbed. Then one night Bill had awkwardly told her he loved her and asked, if his wife would divorce him, would she marry him?

Never able to decide a serious issue for herself, Evelyn had taken the matter to Charlotte and Dick who had looked more disturbed than ever and had said finally that if that was what Bill wanted, there was nothing they could do about it. Then Dick had looked immensely relieved.

Of Carol, Evelyn had thought little. When she thought of her at all, she thought that Carol was doubtlessly a drab, mousy little thing Bill had married when he was a mere boy and who had failed miserably to keep apace with an aggressive, successful husband. It was too bad but. . .

So after a passionate courtship and after the divorce Evelyn and Bill had been married quietly in her sister Charlotte's house and had gone to Sea Island for their honeymoon. And Charlotte and Dick were relieved and happy that she had a substantial husband at last. Evelyn, was relieved and happy, that the high dramatics were over and she could be comfortable again.

The future concerned her little. She supposed that she and Bill would find a house and after the tiresome fuss of fixing it up was over, she would play bridge again and give dinner parties and go on pleasant weekend with Bill. The child problem could be postponed even though Charlotte had said that if she were smart, she would have a child at once. Charlotte had also said, "If Bill and his wife had had a child, you wouldn't be marrying him. And remember, darling, you haven't been married before."

It was five o'clock. Time to dress, she thought, and to have the tea things taken away and have the maid come up and fix the bed in the adjoining room. Evelyn had complained to Bill that the maid disturbed her too early in the morning. It was provincial, the maid's almost knocking down the door at ten in the morning.

When Bill came, he found her sitting on the divan. She was wearing a black chiffon dinner frock with a voluminous skirt. His heart seemed to turn over. . Tall, his shoulders broad in the brown business suit, his face and lean jaw tanned by the Georgia sun, his eyes very blue, his dark hair slightly disheveled, Bill contemplated his second wife. He loved her so that his love made him ache when he looked at her. She was so perfect, sitting there quietly in the dimly lighted room waiting for him—the luckiest man in the world. How had he managed it? How could she love anyone as insignificant as he? And she was his. .. All that perfection and poise and grace were for him. It did not occur to him that Carol had always waited, too, her heart in her eyes and that when she lifted her arms to him, she was also a thing of beauty.

He had thought little of Carol until he had returned home. But the familar surroundings had caused her to blow like an unwelcome draft through his mind, lingering only long enough for him to make excuses for himself and occasionally to fight off his shame. It was unfortunate; it was hellish, what he had done to her, but wasn't she young and attractive? There would be someone else. . . They had married so young. Carold would be happy again. Sure. Carol would be all right. Divorces happened every day. It was life. . . Love was life.

Evelyn stretched forth her long fingers. Bill went to her, fearful lest his kiss and embrace had hurt her. Would he ever love her enough?

"Did you miss me, Bill?" Holding his hand, more pleased by his reverent devotion than in love with him she said, "I had a visitor today. Mrs. Kelly."

Freda!...Freda had called on Evelyn, Bill frowned. That was odd. Freda was Carol's friend. But a second later he thought, Freda is a swell person. She came because, even though, she is Carol's friend, she wanted to make Evelyn welcome.

"Freda," he said. "You liked her didn't you? Ian, her bushand, is swell, too." Then, "I missed you today. I—I wish it could go on the way it was at Sea Island." He shook his head and smiled. "Tough day. I don't want to think about it. I want to think about you, Evelyn, and look at you and talk to you. You're so wonderful.." He took her hand and kissed it." Would you like to go out to dinner tonight or have it sent up again? We could go to the club."

"Oh, Bill, I'd love that!"

"This is an awful hole for you to be in. You haven't been used to anything like this. I'll call a real estate man first thing tomorrow and have him take you around to look at houses."

"There's no hurry. We've lots of time." Finding a house and furnishing it entailed a lot of work.

"But it isn't fair to you. I want to give you everything."

"You're so sweet, Bill. But—but hadn't you better dress? I'll call for the cocktails."

"Great!" Leaning over, he kissed her again. "I love you..I love you, darling. I think if anything ever happened to us it would...it would kill me."

Carol had been home a week and everything had been done. Now there was nothing to do and no one for whom to wait. She thought of the long afternoon stretching ahead as she came out of the dining-room after luncheon and went into the living-room. It was so quiet in the apartment. Only the grandfather clock in the foyer spoke to her.

By LOUIS WULFF

Pretoria, April 1 (Reuters)—Wearing the khaki uniform of a Field Marshal for the first time in South Africa, King George yesterday presented colors to 12 regiments of the active citizen force—South African Territorials—and held an investiture at the first all-military ceremonies of the royal tour.

At the investiture, 135 men and women received decorations, including Lady Patrick Duncan, widow of the late Governor General of South Africa, to whom the King handed the distinguished Flying Cross awarded to her late son, Maj. Andrew Duncan.

About 45,000 people watched the King step forward with field Marshal Jan Smuts, the Union Prime Minister, and hand each color in turn to officers of the regiments.

The colors had previously been consecrated by two army chaplains.

Addressing the parade the King said the colors recalled feats of arms in South African history.

"The recent war is still fresh in experience," he said, "but memory is kind and we shall remember the comradeship in battle, the examples of courage and the devotion of duty when time has made the suffering and horrors less vivid.

"The champions of freedom fought a great fight. Victory was ours at the cost of grave sacrifices, yet further trials await us.

"The colors must to us perpetuate the heroism of our own generation. To young men they must be a constant inspiration to go forward with the high spirit of their fathers."

Curfew Lifted In Jerusalem's Jewish Quarter

Jerusalem, April 2—(AP) — British military authorities today lifted the dusk-to-dawn curfew imposed on Jerusalem's Jewish quarter three weeks ago "to afford the community every opportunity to take part in Easter religious services and ceremonies."

The announcement said that it was not planned to reimpose the curfew "unless further outrages make such action necessary."

Even while the announcement of the curfew lifting was being issued, police and troops continued to conduct spot checks throughout Jerusalem, but no suspects were detained.

There was widespread speculation over unofficial reports that the deportation ship Ocean Vigour had been blasted by saboteurs while riding at anchor in Cyprus. The extent of the damage was not known. Her sister ship, the Empire Rival, was damaged by saboteurs in Haifa harbor last August 23.

Most Elaborate Study of Eclipse Of Sun Planned

Washington, April 2 — (AP) —Thirteen scientists left for Brazil Monday to make one of the most elaborate studies of a solar eclipse ever attempted.

A camp to accommodate 80 persons and 10 tons of equipment has been set up in the wilds of Brazil, near Bocayuva, 400 miles north of Rio de Janeiro. The eclipse will occur May 20 but it will not be visible in Canada or the United States.

At a press conference preceding their takeoff the scientists said studies of a dozen major scientific problems, such as Einstein's theory of relativity and atomic fission, are related to the project.

Col. Millard Young of the United States Army Air Force's guided missile section said the expedition also may provide information about high altitude conditions that will be valuable in developing improved guided missiles.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

If you prove your partner is wrong, he may dislike you. If you let him prove you are wrong, he may lose confidence in you. So, look for a chance to prove you are both right. Could be.

There is a rule that says: When one suit is two cards longer, bid it twice before showing the other. This will show partner the exact length of your two suits. So, it has its good points.

If there has been no jump, a rebid in the same suit does not force partner to bid again. On the other hand, a takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. So, a new suit takeout has merit.

Suppose you are confronted with a choice between these rules. Would you rebid your longer suit to show the lengths? Or would you takeout to a new suit to make sure the bidding was kept alive?

The decision may depend on circumstances, opinion, instinct, psychology. My preference is for showing the suit lengths. Let me tell you why.

If partner cannot voluntarily bid again, there is not enough for a game in your pair. You are better off in your six card suit as trump. If partner bids, he gets a true picture of your suits.

♠A K 9 2
♦A Q 8 7 4 3
♣None

The reply from north was two clubs. Staring south in the face is one of those things. Shall he rebid diamonds first or takeout to his spade suit? Their destiny may depend on the right decision.

Many players prefer to show the spade suit before rebidding the diamonds. The force is more important to them. Their partners go in more for inferences and judgment than for strict rules.

In this, the bid by south was two diamonds; the most correct bid. But a player bidding two spades should be complimented.

Halifax Hospital Empire's Tallest

Halifax — (CP) — The new Victoria General Hospital here will be the tallest in the British Empire when it opens, possibly next fall, and will embrace practically every innovation in modern design and equipment.

Dr. C. M. Bethune, hospital superintendent, explained in detail the multiplicity of departments to be established in the 15-storey building on Central Tower Road.

There are to be 250 public beds in 12-bed wards, and the remainder of the 400-bed total will be divided between private and semi-private patients. Six elevators will ease the transportation problem within the building, besides a number of dumb-waiters and a pneumatic tube system linking the floors. In addition, all meals will be distributed on attractive trays by an automatic "trayveyor" to patients on all floors.

Dr. Bethune commented on the almost complete lack of windows, and explained how air conditioning and modern lighting technique had made space, formerly used for lighting, available for more practical purposes.

Wartime Veterans Lead Peace Fleet

Ottawa — (CP) — The eight operational ships of Canada's peacetime fleet are commanded by an imposing array of veteran officers of the Royal Canadian Navy.

Their decorations include a Commander of the British Empire, a Distinguished Service Order, four Distinguished Service Crosses, a member of the Order of the British Empire, six mentions in dispatches and a United States Legion of Merit.

Few major war areas were missed by them, and at one time or another all served in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Captain of the fleet's largest unit and senior Canadian naval officer afloat is Commodore Harry DeWolfe, C.B.E., D.S.O., D.S.C., of Bedford, N.S. He commands the 18,000-ton aircraft carrier, H.M.C.S. Warrior.

The H.M.C.S. Haida, a Tribal class destroyer, is captained by Acting Lt.-Cmdr. F. B. Caldwell, who entered the navy at Amherst, N.S., in 1934.

Communications Expert.

Acting Lt.-Cmdr. J. C. O'Brien of Montreal is captain of the destroyer Crescent. A communications expert, he took his early training at Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

Capt. K. F. Adams of Victoria and Acting Lt.-Cmdr. R. L. Hennessy, D.S.C., of Ottawa are both former commanders of the famous wartime destroyer Assiniboine. Capt. Adams now commands the cruiser Uganda and Lt.-Cmdr. Hennessy the destroyer Micmac.

Senior destroyer captain in the fleet is Commander H. S. Rayner, D.S.C. and Bar, captain of the recently-commissioned Nootka. He is a native of Clinton, Ont.

Lt.-Cmdr. B. P. Young, M.B.E., of Halifax and Acting Lt.-Cmdr. J. E. Wolfenden of Taber, Alta., both started as ratings in the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve. Wolfenden still is a reservist, the only commanding officer who is not a member of the permanent R.C.N.

London Letter

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 1 — (CP) — The last of London's Christmas pantomimes to expire was a newcomer to the English stage, an adaptation of the American children's story, "The Wizard of Oz."

It lost a lot of its Americanisms on the way to London, and acquired a lot of songs and ballets, but it went with such zest that it outlasted all the tried and true favorites of the pantomime season, and drew from several critics the suggestion that it become an annual affair.

Adults as well as children trooped in profitable numbers to the Saville Theatre even during a bitter cold spell that froze more than one play to death. There they chuckled and applauded as they followed the story of Dorothy, the little Kansas girl who dreams she's blown by a tornado to the Land of Oz, where, in company with the scarecrow, the tin man, the cowardly lion and her dog Toto, she has all manner of adventures before getting safely home.

It was a bit of a shock to find Dorothy going about her chores in a Kansas barnyard with a fulsomely "English" accent. In fact, the only thing savoring of North America apart from the scenery was Walter Crisham, who played the part of the straw man with an amusing sensitivity which inspired the whole show.

Art Centre

British art dealers have long claimed that London is the undisputed centre of world art transactions. Now they're worrying lest that reputation be lost to New York.

Cause of their concern is a board of trade regulation saying that no work of art may be imported without a written undertaking that its subsequent sale will be in export markets, or in hard currency to foreign buyers in Britain. Any pictures unsold after six months must be returned to the country of origin.

"These restrictions are likely to cause the transfer of the international art market from its traditional centre in London to New York," said an official of one of the big London firms where individual picture sales involving thousands of pounds are commonplace.

"We can't replace stocks of pictures we've already exported for dollars, and have no fresh works of quality to offer foreign visitors."

The Day in Parliament

(By The Canadian Press)

Today—

The Commons will discuss government control legislation.

The Senate will not sit.

Tuesday—

The Commons heard Finance Minister Abbott announce lifting of roughly one-third of goods and services from under price controls; heard him say that because of acute housing difficulties, rent control must be continued; heard Justice Minister Ilsley estimate that price controls had saved Canadians $2,500,000,000 a year between 1942-46; heard criticism of decontrol by Angus MacInnes (CCF — Vancouver East); heard Donald Fleming (PC — Toronto Eglinton) move an amendment calling on the House as being "unalterably opposed" to enacting the government's legislation for continuation of certain controls;; voted 120 to 42 to support the Speaker in a ruling arising from the fact documents appended to the control bill were printed in English only.

500 School Groups Study Stage Craft

By C. F. MORIARTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Victoria —(CP)— The British Columbia government which 12 years ago took over promotion of school and community drama throughout the province has developed interest in dramatics to the point where there now are 500 active school groups.

Set up as a branch of the department of education in 1935, L. Bullock-Webster, well known throughout Canada and the United States as actor, playwright and lecturer, was placed in charge as director. He visited all sections of the province forming groups. He retired recently and Anne F. Adamson was appointed acting director.

The drama branch divided the province into 11 districts, with an association in each to provide leadership in festivals and other competition.

Approximately 16 drama festivals are held yearly, mostly in schools; but there also are adult entries in music, elocution and dancing.

The department supplies without cost plays, books, challenge cups, stage curtains, props, make-up and spotlights. It also furnishes an adjudicator for each festival and courses on dramatic art.

A school drama advisory committee meets annually in Vancouver during the British Columbia Teachers' Convention, when teachers sponsoring drama groups assemble to discuss their problems.

Theatrical productions and festivals have been well attended, earning substantial profits. This money is distributed among groups taking part and a portion is donated to a drama scholarship.

British Propose Limiting Conscription

Would Cut Time From 18 Months To One Year

Opposition Votes With Govt. For Approval of Principle

London, April 3 (Reuters) — The government will table an amendment to modify the provisions of its own peacetime conscription bill which last Tuesday caused the biggest Labor Party split in the life of the present administration.

The amendment proposes to reduce the period of compulsory military service from 18 months to one year—a move urged during this week's debate by Labor member R. H. S. Crossman, leader of the recent revolt against the government's foreign policy.

The effect of this amendment may be to rule out more than half of the 75 Labor members who voted against the bill Tuesday, but it is likely to bring unfavorable reaction from the Conservative opposition, which united with the government to give conscription approval in principle by 386 votes to 85.

The amendment, officially announced by the Labor government will be tabled in the name of Defence Minister Alexander and Labor Minister Isaac who during the debate declared their belief that 18 months' full time service was necessary to afford sufficient opportunity for training and to give some relief to the strain on foreign commitments.

Some Abstain From Voting

When the bill was put to a vote last Tuesday 20 to 30 Labor members abstained from voting in addition to those who actually opposed the measure.

The "rebels," led by Welshman Rhys Davies, declared their convictions that the government had no mandate to impose conscription and that Britain's economic, financial and manpower resources could not bear the strain.

Davies himself suggested the bill would be "political dynamite" for the Labor Party.

The surprise concession of the Labor backbench critics, whose revolt the government tried to ward off at a parliamentary Labor Party meeting Monday, is expected to alienate Conservative sympathy when the committee stage of the bill is taken on the floor of the House soon after the end of the Easter recess on April 15.

The amendment is interpreted as a concession only to that section of the rebels which opposed conscription on economic and manpower grounds. It ignores the political and conscientious aspects suggested by the other sections.

Eleven Burned To Death In Fireworks Plant

Clinton, Mo., April 3 — (AP) — An explosion and gunpowder-fed fire destroyed a fireworks manufacturing plant yesterday, burning to death 11 of the 28 employees, working in the one-storey frame building and injuring four.

One of the injured was in critical condition. Ten of the victims died in the explosion and fire and the 11th succumbed in hospital.

The workers were making toy buzz bombers in the Brown Manufacturing Company. Shortly after the blast, cause of which was not known, flames were so intense that firemen were unable to get closer than 100 yards from the building.

Some of the victims were so badly burned identification was only possible through rings and other personal effects or through teeth.

C. S. Knoles, a worker, said the flames swept through the building in a matter of minutes.

"By the time I got to a door, I could hardly find it because of the smoke," he said. "I could hear the girls behind me screaming. I closed my eyes and mouth and started for the road outside. When I reached it I turned around. There was fire everywhere."

Floyd Shepard, a worker whose wife died in the fire, told a reporter that she was being led from the building when she suddenly remembered her daughter-in-law was in the plant. She cried: "Oh, Hazel," and ran back into the building. Her body was found later in the debris.

The daughter-in-law, Hazel Shepard, was burned critically.

Given 10-Day Term, Licence Suspended And Car Impounded

Stratford, April 3 — (CP) — Ten days in jail, a further seven days if costs are not paid, suspension of his driving licence for three months and the impounding of his car for the same period were awarded to Daniel P. Scott of London, Ont., today by Magistrate A. F. Cook.

Scott was alleged to have been involved in an accident yesterday with a car owned by Mrs. Stanley Mars and Driven by Doris Nyberg, both of Kitchener. He was charged with drunken driving.

MacLeod Apologizes For "Discourtesy"

Toronto (CP)—A. A. MacLeod leader of the two-man Labor-Progressive representation in the Ontario legislature, today apologized to the House and to the Chairman of the Committee of the House W. B. Reynolds (Prog-Con.—Leeds), for the "discourtesy" he said he showed last night.

At the opening of the House today, Mr. MacLeod said: "In view of what occurred in the legislature last night and particularly because of my own part in the mild disturbance, I feel under an obligation to tender my sincere apologies to the chairman of the whole House for the discourtesy shown him. He is perhaps the most courteous member of the assembly, though sometimes too indulgent in the discharge of his duties.

"I am doing this in order to counteract any impression the public may have secured from press reports that we conduct our business on a low level.

"The House is governed by a clear set of rules which every member should respect. These rules are based upon experience and until changed should be respected by all of us.

"In the main I think I have always kept within the rules. It is just possible that last night's occurrence may give the wrong impression.

$10 Food Packages Being Funnelled Into Britain for General Relief

Ottawa, April 3. (CP)—A person-to-person service that is expected to pour $90,000,000 worth of food and clothing into Europe from North America this year was funnelled into the British Isles today.

Simultaneous announcements in London, Washington and Ottawa bore the tidings that the $10 food packages put together by C.A.R.E. (Co-operative for American Remittances to Europe) now can be sent to friends and relatives or for general relief in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Eleven other European countries were covered previously by shipments from a non-profit, organization which was launched by relief agencies in the United States after the war and spread into Canada late in 1946.

C.A.R.E.'s Ottawa office already is doing a $50,000 a month business and the increase through British orders is expected to hasten establishment of other offices through which orders can be placed.

The Canadian announcement of the extension to Britain was made by A. B. McDonald, general secretary of the Co-Operative Union of Canada, C.A.R.E. sponsor in the Dominion.

The move climaxes what Mr. McDonald told reporters was "a tremendous number of requests" by Canadians to be allowed to send parcels to Britons through a central agency.

"They can send them by themselves," he said, "but they kept telling us they thought this was the best answer."

The food package contains two pounds each of meat, sugar, vegetable shortening, dried whole milk powder and dried fruits; 1 1-2 pounds of chocolate; seven pounds of flour; half a pound of tea; half a pound of dried egg pwder, and six ounces of soap. Orders should be sent to (Canadian) care, 193 Sparks Street, Ottawa, accompanied by cheque or money order of $1? for each package.

BUDGET EXPECTED AFTER EASTER RECESS IS OVER

Eighteen Divisions On Formal Votes Taken Since House Opened January 30

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 3 (CP)— The Commons today took a week-and a-half Easter recess which ends April 14.

Members last night brought to a close the first two months of a session which thus far has been devoted entirely to the traditional debate on the Throne Speech and the enactment of legislation to give statutory effect to many of the government's wartime controls.

The adjournment found the chamber in the midst of debate on second reading of the main control measure, the so-called "Omnibus" bill which aims at extending over the next year many of the controls on prices, rentals and other goods and services.

When the members return they again will take up the control legislation, seeking to give it passage before the Emergency Transitional Powers Act, from which the controls now derive their authority, expires May 15. Once that legislation is passed, Finance Minister Abbott will bring down his budget.

Eighteen divisions — or formal votes—have been recorded thus far in the session, which opened January 30 and may continue until mid-July.

Returns On April 22nd

A charge by John Hackett (PC—Stanstead) that the administration's control legislation lacked constitutional grounds featured yesterday's debate on the Omnibus Bill.

He asserted that there was no emergency upon which the government could base the legislation.

Before taking up the discussion the House saw regulations giving the Atomic Energy Control Board sweeping powers over the production, manufacture and use of radio-active substances tabled by Reconstruction Minister Howe.

The Chamber approved a motion establishing a 25-man committee to make a yearly study of the operations of the CBC.

Mr. Hackett based his argument that there was no emergency for the Control Legislation on the grounds the fighting forces had been disbanded, the wartime industrial machine had been dismantled and that the peoples involved were back at peaceful occupations.

Toronto, April 3 (CP)—Total sales of beer, wine and spirits in Ontario amounting to $135,776,068 for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1946, produced a net income of $30,373,061 a report tabled in the Ontario Legislature today by Provincial Secretary Michener said.

Net trading for the year amounted to $21,600,871 with an additional $8,923,559 in fines permit fees and taxes on brewers and wine manufacturers and their products bringing the total profit to $30,373,061.

Beer sales accounted for $66,879,189 exclusive of any charge for containers. Sales of Ontario wines came to $4,780,567.

Federal, Provincial and municipal governments received total revenue payments from beer, spirits and wine consumption of $71,000,000. Of this sum, 319 municipalities received 20 per cent of fees received by the board from hotel authorities, a total of $394,952.

It took 2,661,034 gallons of domestic and imported spirits, 51,029,086 gallons of beer and 2,012,879 gallons of wine to quench the thirst of Ontarians in 1945.

These figures show increased consumption over the previous year of 89.4 per cent in the case of imported spirits, 71.6 per cent for domestic spirtis, 9.7 per cent on beer, 19.9 per cent in domestic wines, and 135.5 per cent increase in consumption of imported wine.

Sales value of all products dispensed from Liquor Control Board stores during the period amounted to $64,116,310.

DREW LASHES OUT AT SALSBERG AND MACLEOD IN HOUSE

Labor - Progressive Members Tried to Start Filibuster on Old Age Pensions Bill

Toronto April 3 (CP)—Following one of the most heated clashes in many years—between Premier Drew and the two Labor-Progessive members—the Ontario Legislature today was scheduled to adjourn to an indefinite date in June, after the Federal budget has been presented.

But the House in a lengthy day and night sitting Wednesday, climaxed early today with the tense exchange over "Communists," still had a list of business to clean up and there was a possibility the sitting opening at 10 a.m. would run into the afternoon, if not into another night sitting.

It was shortly after midnight when the two Labor-Progressive members, J. B. Salsberg of Toronto St. Andrew and A. A. MacLeod of Toronto Bellwoods, started an apparent filibuster agaist passage of estimates for the Welfare Department which contained a vote for old age pensions on the old scale of $20 a month.

Mr. Salsberg said that Ontario's attitude in waiting for the Dominion Government to deal with old age pensions was "indefensible." He suggested a one per cent tax on persons and corporations could be imposed without trouble to raise at least $5,000,000 for use in increasing old age pensions.

On a voice vote, the legislature approved the estimates. Then Mr. McLeod tried to continue debate and was ruled out of order by the Chairman of Committee, W. B. Reynolds. The chairman pointed out the House had already voted. Mr. MacLeod retorted that the House had voted to deprive members of the right to speak on the estimates.

Premier Drew then drew attention to the House to a biblical quotation on which only the numbers—Chapter 26, verse 11, from Proverbs had been mentioned by Mr. MacLeol in an attack on Premier Drew in the House last year.

STORMS, FLOODS TAKE HUGE TOLL OF U.K. LIVESTOCK

2,000,000 Sheep, 30,000 Head Cattle Lost and 600,000 Acres Land Flooded

London, April 3 —(Reuters)— Floods, blizzards, snow and frost have brought to Britain "an unparalleled disaster," Agriculture Minister Williams declared in the House of Commons today.

Some 600,000 acres of arable land had been flooded in 31 counties, 70,000 acres of winter grain —almost all wheat — destroyed by floods, and another 200,000 by frost.

Losses of sheep and lambs in England and Wales totalled over 2,000,000. About 32 per cent of hill sheep and seven per cent of lowland sheep were destroyed. Some counties had lost half their sheep. About 30,000 head of cattle destined for slaughter were also lost.

Emphasizing that these figures were only interim estimates, Williams said the government considered restoration of food production in the stricken areas a matter of national importance.

The government would contribute an amount equal to that raised by subscription to the fund to which the government had already contributed £1,000,000 ($4,000,000), he announced.

Urgent interim payments to give immediate assistance to desperate farmers will be made from the fund, which is administered by the National Farmers' Union.

Williams also announced the government was working on a scheme to subsidize farmers who would, under present conditions, risk a poor crop because of late sowing. The scheme was designed to provide incentives to farmers to go ahead and sow their crops anyway and produce the best products they could. If they failed their loss would be borne, in part at least, by the government.

A similar scheme to adapt an existing hill sheep subsidy scheme to the present abnormal conditions was also planned.

These would be announced shortly.

Replying to questions Williams said agriculture would have first priority on available supplies of labor, including prisoners-of-war. Labor should be sufficient by harvest time.

Soviet Union Stands Accused By Eric Johnston

Philadelphia, April 3 — (AP)— The Soviet Union stood accused today of "sabotaging" the United Nations and Eric Johnston declared it is up to the international body to determine whether Russia wants world union or world revolution.

Headlining a group of four speakers at a rally of the United Nations Council of Philadelphia, the former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce asserted that "Russia has been the chief culprit in undermining the United Nations."

Believed Menace From An Explosion Point Of View Says Krug Interior Secretary

Washington, April 3 (AP)— Interior Secretary Krug today directed that 518 government-operated soft coal mines in the United States remain closed indefinitely because they are believed dangerous.

Krug said the 2,013 other mines under Federal control could reopen Monday at the conclusion of the six day "mourning" period called by John L. Lewis for miners killed at the Centralia, Ill., disaster, if the "operating managers certify that they have reviewed safety conditions and practices and that there is no imminent danger to the men working in those mines."

Approximaely 40,000 miners are employed a the 518 mines which Krug said are "believed dangerous from an explosion point of view."

These pits will be closed until certified by the Local Union's Mine Safety Committee and the operating managers or until new inspections determine that they are "reasonably safe."

Lewis, commenting on Krug's action, said:

"May God in heaven forgive him" for not closing them before 111 miners died at Centralia.

Lewis was testifying on mine safety to a congressional committee when Krug issued the order.

"I point out," the United Mine Workers chief said, "that Secretary Krug is doing now what he should have done ever since the safety code became effective. He's starting to enforce his own code —but after 111 men died in Centralia."

"If we must grind up human flesh and bones in the industrial machine that we call modern America then before God I assert that those who consume the coal and are made comfortable by it owe protection to those men first, and owe security to their widows and children.

"I say it. I voice it. I proclaim it. And I care not who in heaven or hell opposes it."

Recalling the work agreement which he signed last year with Krug, Lewis said:

"He promised me, didn't he? Or did he? Why, he signed it with me at the White House under the kleig lights and the miners believed him. They did not know he was lying. They know now that he was lying and they are joining me in demanding that he be removed from his high office."

Lewis called Krug:

"This modern Hercules with the No. 12 shoe and the size 5 hat."

Up to 150,000 Words Appear Daily In Hansard of Ontario Legislature

Toronto, April 3 (CP)—By the time the Hansard experiment in the Ontario Legislature is completed for the current session more than 2,000,000 words will have been duly recorded for posterity.

With the regularity of a newspaper, Ontario's first published Hansard appears daily with the complete transcription of anywhere from 70,000 to 150,000 words spoken from the floor of the legislature.

When Luke C. Hansard, an English typesetter began reporting and printing the debates of the British House of Commons in 1774, it never occurred to him that more than 150 years later his name would be perpetuated in the practice pursued in the Canadian House of Commons and in two of the Provincial legislatures—British Columbia and Ontario.

To everyone familiar with Parliamentary nomenclature, the official daily report distributed in pamphlet form and containing the debates of the previous day are known by the handy and historic name "Hansard." Hansard was first started in the Dominion House of Commons in 1874 and in 1880 Hansard reporters became officials of the Commons— 29 years before this was adopted in the British House.

The first Hansard reports in the Ontario Legislature were made in 1943. These were put out in mimeographed form and were available to members of the assembly at the end of the session. Last year, appointment was made of an editor and, with a staff of some 16 persons Hansard is available to the press within half-hour after a speaker has uttered his words and is printed in completed and revised form 48 hours after the day's sitting.

To prepare these reports, five shorthand reporters take down the "viva voce" debate in the

Recovered After Being Stolen From Railway Station

Two Arrests Made, Parties Will Appear in Police Court

Val D'Or, Que., April 3 (CP)— Gold valued at $24,300 and destined for the Royal Canadian Mint at Ottawa was recovered today after being stolen late yesterday from the railway station here and two men were placed under arrest.

Police identified the men as Conrad Morrisette, 29, and Cere Toussent, about the same age, both of Val D'Or. They are expected to appear in court later today.

The gold, in the form of two solid bricks totalling 137 pounds, was recovered from a snowbank about two miles from this northwestern Quebec mining town. It was still in the iron safety box in which it was sent to the station from Sigma Mines for shipment.

Full details of recovery of the gold and arrest of the two men were lacking.

The gold evidently had been taken off an express truck at the Canadian National Railways station and loaded into a vehicle. The road along which it was recovered led to Malartic.

Delivery of the bullion was made to the Canadian National Express Company and placed on an express truck, which was wheeled along the platform to await the train.

Details as to how the gold disappeared and was transported to the snow bank were unavailable.

Late Greek King To Lie in State Until Sunday

By FRANK O'BRIEN

Athens, April 3 — (AP)—King George II's funeral procession moved through the streets of Athens today from the palace to Athens Cathedral, where the monarch will lie in state until services starting Sunday. George died Tuesday of a heart attack.

His body was in a coffin draped with the blue and white Greek flag and banners of the Royal House. It was drawn on a gun carriage by a Bren gun carrier. Atop the coffin glittered George's crown and swords.

Crowds 10 to 15 deep lined the entire route behind brown lines of Greek Regular Army soldiers.

The new king, Paul I, and the Crown Prince, six-year-old Constantin, followed unattended, hand in hand, directly behind the slowly-moving coffin.

A single rank of five Athens policemen headed the procession.

At the end of the procession, six police cars carried Queen Frederika, other members of the Royal Family and ladies in waiting.

LIMITED REPARATIONS

Moscow, (AP)—State Secretary Marshall told the Council of Foreign Ministers today the United States would be willing to consider limited German reparations from current production, but only if the Allied powers agreed to leave in Germany a number of plants now earmarked for capital reparations.

At the same time Marshall proposed the compromise formula, he reaffirmed in a paper circulated among Foreign Minister Molotov, Foreign Secretary Bevin and French Minister Bidault that "present demands to increase the reparations agreed upon at Potsdam cannot be considered by the United States."

120 Chinese Passengers Are Feared Drowned

Shanghai, April 3 (Reuters)— About 120 Chinese passengers are feared to have been drowned when the small Chinese river steamship Lusan sank yesterday between Kuliang and Hanking on the Yangtse after an explosion in the ship's engine room, press reports said today.

Only 15 people are known to have been rescued.

WELLINGTON HUNTERS BAG 400 RABBITS DURING THE WINTER

A select group of local hunters in Wellington, eight in number, who specialize in deer hunting trips in season and other nimrodic excursions during the year, concentrated their winter efforts on destroying the elusive rabbit in and around their native village.

And, according to reports, they hit the "jack" pot. At a get-together dinner held the other night, the boys relived their rabbit-hunting experiences and finally counted "tails." The aggregate bag for the season was 400.

FINED FOR PLACING TRAPS TOO CLOSE TO MUSKRAT HOUSES

Charged under the provincial game and fisheries act with setting muskrat traps closer than five feet to muskrat houses, six Belleville and district trappers appeared in county police court Thursday and were assessed $12.50 each, fine and costs, after pleading guilty. Charges against the six young men were laid by Game and Fisheries Inspector Fred W. MacDonald, Point Anne. The men were given until April 14th to pay their fines. Those fined were Gaylord Goyer, Ealery Kellar, Lloyd Weagant, E. Woodcock, J. Goyer and Peter Lewis.

ROBERT L. BROWN PROV. COMMISSIONER OF SCOUT ASSOCIATION

After a special executive meeting of the Belleville Scout Association held at the Kiwanis Centre on Wednesday night it was announced that Robert L. Brown, secretary, has been appointed Provincial Commissioner and to be Acting District Commissioner for the Local Boy Scout Association filling the position left vacant by the departure of Lt.-Col. B. C. Sisler from the city. Maurice Button warmly thanked Mr. Brown for the excellent work as secretary of the association in the past and assured him of support of the local organization. A. W. Simpson has been appointed as secretary to replace the new provincial commissioner.

EASTER SUNRISE SERVICE TO BE HELD

The Christian Youth Fellowship group of the city will stage an Easter Sunrise Service on Sunday morning between the hours of eight and nine with the program to be broadcast over Station CJBQ at eight-thirty. The service will be held at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

All young people in the city are invited to attend the service and hear the C.Y.F. 50-voice choir, a mixed octet party and special organ and piano music, and to join in the congregational singing.

CHRIST CHURCH CHOIR TO PRESENT CANTATA

Percy Cole Named For Chicago Post

Percy T. Cole public relations officer for the Canadian Pacific Railway, will open a public relations office for the railway in Chicago, J. H. Campbell manager of the public relations department, announced yesterday. He will be succeeded by W. J. Berry of Montreal, former Windsor newspaperman.

Mr. Cole was public relations officer at Toronto since August, 1945, and came to the department from Canadian Pacific Airlines, where he had been executive assistant since 1943. Before that he was aviation editor of the Evening Telegram and associate editor of Commercial Aviation and editor of Monetary Times. He began his career on the Belleville Intelligencer.

Mr. Berry began newspaper work with The Canadian Press at Toronto, and later worked with the northern News at Kirkland Lake and the Sudbury Star until 1942 when he enlisted in the RCAF. On discharge in 1945 he worked for the Windsor Star until he joined the CPR in September. He was born at Cobourg.

Percy Cole is a former resident of this city and for some years served with the Ontario Intelligencer and the Toronto Evening Telegram.

Police Blotter

That ladies' lingerie must be among the "hard to get" items at local stores is suggested following the report of a clothes line robbery on Dundas Street Tuesday night when a night gown, two ladies' slips, a girl's blouse, disappeared from the drying line in a back yard. The disappearance of the lingerie was reported at the local police station.

Joseph Brown, Cannifton Road, reported glancing out his window shortly after midnight last night and seeing a man going through the glove compartment of his car. Mr. Brown investigated with hesult that the intruder dashed off down the street and made his escape despite the fact that Mr. Brown gave chase. Description of the man was given to police.

Mr. Brown lost nothing from his car as result of the intruder's action, although his tools were scattered over the car seat.

FINDS $300 PEARL ON APRIL FOOL'S DAY

Collingwood, N.J., April 3 — (AP)— It may have been April Fool's Day but the take-nothing-for-granted policy of a Collingwood sea food house proprietor has enriched him to the tune of one $300 pearl.

Lewis M. Westcott opened an oyster Tuesday and found cuddling in the bivalve an object which looked like a pearl to him. His brother-in-law laughed and told him not to be taken in by so rusty and obvious an April Fool joke. However Westcott went to see a jeweler. The jeweler estimated the value of the rusty joke at $200 to $300, Westcott said.

Plans Advanced For Conference To be Held in City

..All committee chairmen have their plans well advanced for the coming Region VI annual conference of Junior Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade which is to be held in Belleville on April 25-26-27.

Conference Chairman Charles Lundy has the support of the following local chairmen:—

Accommodation, Wm. Bell; Registration, W. Edawrds; Entertainment F. Cormier; Transportation, J. McNab; Speakers, W. Jackson; Reception P. Mercier; Sponsors Wm. Brown; Program Booklet, D. Burr; Finance, J. Kelleher and Secretary Treasurer T. A. Carruthers.

The conference slogan emphasis one of the major objects of "Jaycee" work; to encourage self improvement activities among members to make them more effective leaders in business and in industry."

Study clinics will be held with the following subjects being on the agenda for discussion—Government and Clinic Affairs Leadership Training, Internal Organization and Tourist Trade.

It is anticipated that before the close of the conference another object of "Jaycee" work will be realized—"by bringing young men into active fellowship with one another so that they may learn to live together in greater harmony and understanding."

Provision has been made to accommodate seventy-five delegates from Peterborough, Kingston, Cornwall, Carleton Place, Ottawa and Montreal. Out of town delegates are being urged to come early and stay late so they may fully enjoy the hospitality of our friendly city.

Sponsors Chairman William Brown, is now contacting local firms for financial support. It has been customary at past conferences to have the various banquets and luncheons sponsored by interested persons who realize that such an event is an excellent opportunity to sell the products and facilities of their city.

The sum of $1,000 was obtained for the conference in Kingston last year and it is hoped that at least an equal amount will be realized for the coming conference to be held in Belleville.

"I was on my honeymoon and forgot all about it," Pierce explained.

Mrs. Elsie Moore Describes Trip To Australia

Kiwanian Queen Mrs. Elsie Moore delighted a large number of the members of the club with her splendid description of her trip to Australia by boat and the return journey by air at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel. Mrs. Moore has delivered her address to many clubs in the city since her return and the Ontario Intelligencer carried a lengthy interview on her return. However, the members thoroughly enjoyed her spontaneous wit and humor in describing her highlights of the trip. She has crossed the Pacific ten times and this trip was to visit her brother and a grandson, whom she had never seen.

The speaker was introduced by Harold Craig and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Jack Walton. Jack White presided at the luncheon and there were a number of guests introduced including the wife of the President. Harold Carruthers conducted the singing and Dave Price handled the fine box. On Tuesday night next the sports committee of the club will entertain the members of the baseball team and talk over the plans for the coming summer. This will be a special night and all are invited to attend. A splendid program has been arranged.

Mrs. Moore told her listeners of the strike on the boat before leaving San Francisco and her troubles to find rooms before the ship sailed. She claimed the trip was made under military discipline due to the number of troops on board. "The time on the ship was spent in playing bridge with admirable companions," said the speaker. She also stated that 20,000 Americans had applied for Australian citizenship and many divorced girls from Australia were returning home on the same ship and some had very funny tales to tell of their life in the United States. The speaker told of her arrival in her homeland and how the Labor government of that country was taken by the residents. "No one says anything against the government and all are trying to help but the majority do not like it," said the speaker.

Maj. J. Cousins Appointed Second In Command

The appointment of Major Jack Cousins to the post of second in command of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment, R.C.A. (Argyll Light Infantry) announced by the regiment a few days ago, was confirmed today by Headquarters Eastern Ontario Area, Kingston. Major Cousins succeeds Lieut.-Col. G. M. Davison, E.D., who was recently promoted to the command of the reserve force unit.

Major Cousins has had extensive military experience both in Canada and overseas. He served throughout the North-West European campaign in France, Belgium and Holland. For his service in Holland and the Allied cause, he was awarded the Netherlands Bronze Cross.

Major Cousins, who resides at 46 Dunbar Street, is a school teacher in civilian life and was educated at the Collegiate Institute here and Peterborough Normal School. Prior to his new appointment he commanded one of the battery units of the 9th Regiment.

Inspector Hayes Re-elected Pres. Humane Society

The annual meeting of the Belleville and Hastings County Humane Society was held recently at which the following officers were elected: Hon. Pres. Lt.-Col. P. H. Wills, Hon. Vice Pres. Dr. R. W. Tennent and Dr. M. E. Branscombe, Pres. Inspector Clare Hayes, Vice. Pres. Miss H. Ackerill and Miss A. Wallbridge, Treas. Miss J. Tickell, Secretary Miss H. Fraleck, Executive: Mrs. R. W. Tennent, Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, Mrs. A. E. MacColl, Miss I. Keeler, Miss H. Sulman, Miss C. Wallbridge, Miss E. Cherry.

The Inspector's report for the past year showed 157 dogs and 177 cats humanely destroyed, 5 stables were inspected as well as 7 barns in the country, 6 pig-pens, and 24 box cars on the railway; and 24 visits made to the city market. There was one prosecution and a conviction secured.

Funds were raised by the holding of rummage sales and by membership fees and donations. Humane education was promoted in the public schools and the magazine "Animal Life," official organ of the American Humane Education Society of Boston, was subscribed to and a copy sent to each of the public schools in the city. A film relating to animals and children was shown in the schools.

Modern Soda Bar Installed by Guild Restaurant

Boasting of a new and modern soda bar, the Guild restaurant on Front Street, operating under the management of J. T. Bothwell, is now prepared to offer its customers ever more efficient soda bar service and under new and attractive surroundings.

Equipped with the very latest in refrigeration the new soda bar has a polished and glistening surface with streamlined stools offering comfortable seating accommodation. Modern refrigeration enables the dispensing of favorite soft drinks, ice cream sodas and creamy milk shakes at the correct temperature and without the use of ice, something which is impossible with older type of equipment.

The Guild specializes in fancy ice cream dishes and caters to especially prepared afternoon teas for the ladies. Home-cooked foods, deliciously prepared by expert chefs, are served for the customers' enjoyment.

Telephone Worker Commended For Saving Two Lives

Perry A. Young, Boswell Street a Bell Telephone cable-splicer has been commended for his quick thinking and resourcefulness which resulted in saving the lives of the plant manager of the Adolphustown Telephone System of Napanee, and his helper, after they had collapsed from carbon-monoxide fumes in their snow-bound truck recently.

In a letter to G. W. Proctor, Bell Telephone manager here, R. A. Ballantyne Adolphustown Telephone plant manager, states:

"I wish to compliment you on the quick thinking and action of one of your employees, Mr. Percy Young.

"During the recent storm (March 3) my helper and myself along with several other people were stranded on the Hamburgh Road in a snow drift.

"We were sitting in our truck with the engine running waiting for a snow plow, when we were overcome by carbon-monoxide fumes.

"We owe our lives to the quick action of Mr. Young who was assisted by Mr. Ivan Bradshaw (Canada Bread) Mr. Peter Laveck (Purity Bread) and Mr. Loe Losee (Central Garage).

"Due to Mr. Young getting us out in the open and applying artificial respiration we soon regained consciousness and barring a slight headache, we are both in good health after a very narrow escape from death.

"The fact that Mr. Young happened to be present and his knowledge of first aid was no doubt the reason we are alive today.

"Again may I compliment you on the initiative of your employee, Mr. Young, and hope that he will receive due credit.

(Signed) R. A. Ballantyne

Merchants Look For No Immediate Rise in Prices

According to a consensus of a cross section of city merchants and business men today, Mr. and Mrs. Buying Public need have no immediate cause for alarm regarding rises in prices of various decontrolled commodities.

As one merchant stated, "the barometer of business today is the purse of the man on the street. It is he who will more or less govern the stability of prices. It is his money which keeps the wheels of business turning. There would be no point in boosting prices to the level where the public would shy away."

It was predicted that some slight rises in prices of some articles now off control would go into effect, but they would not be of a serious nature.

Money is considerably "tighter" in Belleville than it was a year ago, another merchant stated. Credits are beginning to be established again, he said.

A coal merchant stated that the reported increase of three dollars per ton for coal was purely conjecture on the part of some business prognosticators. It appeared to be the general feeling of coal men here that no increase would go into effect unless circumstances originating from wholesale sources forced such a move.

Cattle Buyer Savagely Beaten Resisting Robbers

Cornwall, April 3 — (CP) — Beaten savagely about the head and suffering from a broken right arm when he unsuccessfully attempted to resist robbers at his home last night, Duncan McGillis, 60-year-old Harrison's Corners cattle buyer, was reported in "fair condition" at Hotel Dieu Hospital here this morning.

Police said the assailants made off with a "considerable amount" of money.

More than 40 stitches were required to close the extensive lacerations on the victim's face and head.

Police said McGillis told them he was assaulted by two men when he answered a knock on the door late last night. He was alone in the house at the time.

When he came to, he was tied hand and foot, but despite his injuries he succeeded in freeing himself and made his way to a neighbors where he turned in an alarm.

MORE SHORTAGES FOR BRITAIN

London, April 3 — (AP) — Millions of Britons lost their chances for a new suit or dress today.

The government announced that the issuance of new clothing ration coupons had been postponed from Aug. 31 to Oct. 31 because of production losses in the cotton and wool industries during the winter fuel crisis.

Britons Suffered Severe Privations During Winter Storms Says Fred Deacon In Telling of His Impressions of Trip

Old Country Must Have Further Loans to Tide Her Over Economic Crisis — Canadian Goods Should be Better Publicized to Enjoy Future Recognition

A crisis-torn Britain, unbloodied and unbowed in the throes of a new emergency, will pull through if she gets another loan from the United States, and a loan and gift from Canada. She is shaking herself loose from storm and shortage shackles, but in order to live she must export her goods to the hard currency or dollar nations of the world.

That is one of the impressions gained by Mr. Fred H. Deacon, vice-president of Deacon Brothers Ltd., here who recently returned from a six-weeks business trip to Britain, Ireland, France and Switzerland.

The world cannot afford to let Britain go down, Mr. Deacon said in an interview with the Ontario Intelligencer, but she must have dollars with which to purchase Canadian wheat and American produce if she is to survive the present economic crisis.

Food Situation Worse

Unsolicited statements from Britons in all walk of life revealed that the food situation in the sea-girt island is far worse today than any time since 1939. "It is far more irregular and uncertain because of the fact that storms unprecedented in the history of Britain caused disruption of distribution," Mr. Deacon said.

Root crops, such as potatoes and turnips, which the Englishman stores in the ground for winter use, were covered with snow and ice. In the emergency Canada shipped 65,000 tons of potatoes to the Mother Country.

While the severe storms had a lot to do with the fuel situation, there would have been a shortage had Florida weather been present, Mr. Deacon said. "England could not get the coal out of the ground. Even now arrangements are being made to get an additional 30,000 miners in the pits."

Canada Favored Land

Mr. Deacon who spent four weeks in Britain, one week in France and another week in Switzerland, was definitely impressed with the fact, derived from several business discussions that the Canadian scheme of prices is the lowest in the world. It is at least from 30 to 50 percent lower than any other nation including the U.S.A.

"Canada," he said, "is still the best country in the world, and people here would do well to realize it. The stoical Englishman is passing through another tremendous crisis and is still immersed in rationing, shortages, point systems, and restrictions."

"The best thing Canadians who have friends in the United Kingdom, can do, is to send boxes of foodstuffs over there. And they should do it now. People here have no idea what the average Briton is experiencing at the present time with regard to food."

Small Meat Ration

The Briton gets one and one-half slices of bacon per week and this plus a small quantity of fresh meat is his meat ration. He gets an egg a month, and a piece of butter the size of a small match-box weekly. His margarine ration is about twice that size while lard is approximately half the size of the match-box Sick people and children get one-half or a pint of milk per day.

Due to the recent industrial shut-down the Englishman's future regarding clothing is not bright. He can get his clothes on the point system, but closing of textile plants caused by the fuel and power shortage will make even the distribution of rationed clothing difficult.

Mr. Deacon who disembarked from the "Queen Elizabeth" on February 11 was met by a stunned England. For that morning the power was cut off.

Power Shortage Acute

"Can you imagine what Belleville or Toronto would have done or how the housewives would have felt with power off at 9 in the morning, until 12 noon and from 2 to 4 p.m."

And the sudden cut-off caught England unprepared. Britons were astounded, for it was a throw-back to the dim-out days of the war, and that was not a pleasant memory with the John Bull of the street.

Hotels in the metropolitan areas were totally unequipped. Candles lighted reception desks. Barn lanterns stood at elevator entrances as a warning. The elevators were "out of order" and guests walked to their rooms up long flights of stairs.

No Heat

Office buildings were dark. There was no heat. Shop windows looked eerie in the dim candle-light. In the tubes (underground railways) escalators ran upwards only, to relieve passenger congestion as trains arrived. Passengers walked down stairs to catch trains.

Industry and business was caught flat-footed with no fuel. The metropolitan area of London had sufficient coal for only five days operation of its power plants.

There was terrific grumbling on the street. The people claimed they had been misled by the Fuel Ministry. Five months previous the Electric Board had brought the news of a threatened coal shortage before the Ministry. The shut-down came as a calamity for all industy was shut down. Workers were laid off. But the government advised industry to pay the wage earners the same amount and on the same dates, with a promise of recompense.

Huge Production Loss

Then came Churchill's statement that with the proper planning and the purchase of coal from the United States to the amount of ninety million dollars the shut-down would have been avoided. Britain lost millions of dollars in production weekly. The government had gambled and lost.

In Manchester, Mr. Deacon asked a taxi driver, how he was faring for fuel. The driver pointed to the floor of his cab. There were no floor boards. "I have burned them to keep my kiddies warm," he said.

There were approximately 100,000 Polish soldiers in Britain at the time. They still wore their British Army equipment with the Polish flashes. But they crowded immigration offices in an effort to get out of the country. On one occasion when Mr. Deacon had official immigration business, 35 of these Poles were endeavouring to get visas for Italy. "It was warmer there."

Thousands Want To Leave

There are thousands of people in England who want to come to Canada, and many others who want to try New Zealand or Australia. 350,000 German prisoners of war are in the country, but were not utilized in the storm and fuel crises.

Ordinary repairs constitute another problem for the Britisher Every repair costing over two pounds must first have a government permit. And when the permit is secured, there is no guarantee of delivery of materials. A friend of Mr. Deacon whose water pipes had frozen and burst awakened one morning to find water dripping from the ceiling. He rushed for repairs but was told a permit was necessary. And that would not be along for at least three weeks.

Little Rebuilding

As a result of the permit system and dearth of material, there has been little rehabilitation done in the bombed-out areas. Blackened walls still stand as stark mementoes of the dark days of war. In some places, air raid shelter signs are still apparent. Harrod's the largest department store in London is just receiving material for war repairs. It is the same situation all over the land.

But there is one industry that is thriving in Britain, Mr. Deacon said. That is the football gambling pools, which now is regarded as the 7th largest industry in the country. "It is the only place the Englishman can spend his money. There is little food and fewer clothes. He cannot spend it on these things. When he does he pays a purchase tax from 10-15 per cent on everything. Cigarettes cost a half-crown, (55 cents) a box."

Spending a few days in Belfast, Londonderry and other Northern Ireland cities, Mr. Deacon noted that the people were brighter, cheerier, and appeared to be better fed. Fuel was scarce as were other rationed commodities but on the whole the people appeared to have suffered less.

Prices High In France

In France, Mr. Deacon noted that German prisoners of war are kept busy working on the railroad system, and building and repairing war-torn bridges. This was not the case in England. The food situation in France is much better for the traveller, but prices are terrific, especially in the black markets.

In London, there was a five-shilling ceiling for meals, but hotels got away from this by instituting various degrees of cover charges. Meals were restricted to three courses, and if the traveller took bread with his soup he had had two of the three courses allowed him. The third was his meal of meat, with cabbage or another vegetable. If you got to the dining room early you got meat, otherwise you were satisfied with pigeon, rabbit or hare. Or possibly scrambled eggs made of the powdered product, or a fat sausage with a slight meaty flavor.

Black Market Active

In France, it was different. One could get caviar if he wanted to pay the price. Stores were filled with merchandise but it was not of top quality. Rationing was in effect.

Cigarette cost 25 francs for 20. Exchange was quoted at 125 francs for $1, official. On the black market you got between 235 and 250.

Monte Carlo on the French Riviera had not suffered much from the war. It was quiet although there were a large number of wealthy Americans and their cars in evidence. Mentone had felt the brunt of war, for first the Italians and then the Germans stripped the coast of everything. They evacuated the population to hills and carried off everything of value.

Houses were bare walls. The invaders commandeered marble facings from mantels, electric light switches, stair steps, and in moments of stark vandalism, cut squares or centrepieces from valuable carpets and rugs.

Villa Dispoiled

On one occasion, Mr. Deacon visited what was formerly a handsome 35-room villa centreing olive, orange and lemon groves and vineyards, with the owner who had not seen the property since pre-war days. Everything was stripped from the house. As they wandered through the once beautiful rooms they heard a chopping noise. Investigating they discovered a German prisoner of war, removing mines from the garden. He later showed them the graves of five Germans shot on the spot and buried in the garden.

In Switzerland it was a different picture. The faces of the Swiss people and their environment recalled a nation which has been the recipient of everything from the world's peoples through two wars.

Fine Swiss Trains

Here was an exceptionally high standard of living. Banks were bulging with money. Stores were crowded. Everyone was working. Industry's stacks were gushing with smoke. Food was rationed only for fair distribution purposes.

The new Swiss trains caught the eye of Mr. Deacon. They are made of aluminum electrically controlled and as accurate on schedule as the finest Swiss watch. "In fact," Mr. Deacon remarked, "you can set your watch with the Swiss train schedules. If they are supposed to leave at two-thirty they do not wait a second. Their time of arrival is equally as accurate."

The Swiss ski resorts, St. Moritz, Davos and other internationally known winter holiday spots were patronized by English, French and Americans. The Englishmen, however, were at a disadvantage, for they are only allowed 75 pounds a year for foreign travel—and that amount does not last long at such expensive resorts. So naturally the Englishman's visit is of short duration. Prices were extremely high in every line, food as well as merchandise.

Should Insist On Commitments

Canadians should realize what a fine country they live in, was Mr. Deacon's reaction to his visit. While it is all right for Canada to make loans to Britain, she should be realistic and insist that her pre-war requirements from England in the way of textiles, cotton and wool, and yarns, cotton and wool, be recognized and that who makes the trade agreements, should make it conditional that these requirements be forthcoming and not placed in the same position and afforded the same treatment as Argentina, Brazil and other countries of the Americas who because they know England needs beef, are driving hard bargains at world prices.

Textile imports from Britain to Canada dropped from 74 million square yards in 1938 to four millions in 1945, and textile production in Canada dropped commensurately because she has not the spinning and weaving facilities.

Should Maintain Quality

Canadian commodities have been of much better quality in Britain during the past twelve months, Mr. Deacon said, "and Canadians should see that their bacon, cheese and apples are properly merchandized and promoted. The British consumer does not know half the time that he is eating Canadian food. This country can never establish a market if promotion is left to the British Food Ministry and the Federal Department of Agriculture. That is a job for private enterprise, not government control."

In closing, Mr. Deacon reiterated that "Canada is the best country in the world and all it needs is Canadians to do something about it. If they adopt the policy of an honest day's work for an honest day's pay, they will be the envy of the world."

Income Tax Evaders Given Jail, Heavy Fine

Ottawa, April 3—(CP)—Cracking down severely in line with a government policy to hit big income-tax evaders hardest, Magistrate Glenn Strike today sentenced two Ottawa department store merchants to six months in jail plus a $40,000 fine.

In default of the fine, which must be paid by Saturday, Joseph H. Vineberg, 64, and his son, S. Vineberg, 34, operating under the trade name of Larocque Registered, must serve an additional 18-month jail term.

The Vinebergs, who operate a large department sotre in lowertown Ottawa, were convicted Monday of making false excess profits tax returns and Crown Prosecutor James A. Burrows asked that the $40,000 fine be imposed.

Mr. Burrows, an official of the income tax division of the revenue department, told the court that the case was the "largest income tax evasion case that has ever been before the courts of Canada."

The amount of tax evaded involved $235,000.

"This is a case of considerable importance," said Magistrate Strike. "The statement filed by the partnership showed accounts payable very much higher than could be ascertained by voucher, and the inventory was much lower than the proper inventory that should have been fixed."

After the passing of the sentence and the jail terms the magistrate stated that he was prepared to suspend the sentence of the six month term against the elder Vineberg.

U.S. Takes Control Of Jap Pacific Is.

Lake Success, N.Y., April 3 — (AP)—The vast chains of Pacific Islands where Japan mounted her attack against the United States officially went under American control today through Security Council approval of a United Nations strategic area trusteeship. The unanimous council decision was reached last night.

The agreement gives the United States sweeping rights, amounting to virtual annexation, under which the government may fortify the vital islands, close them at will for security reasons, and ban foreign aircraft.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 3 (CP)—Profit-taking and hesitancy about holding stocks over the long Easter weekend holiday was evident in price movement during the early session when stocks that advanced yesterday moved back today. The move affected all groups except Western Oils which remained inactive with the few issues trading edging upward.

Volume for the first three hours was 584,000 shares.

Papers in the industrial lists moved back as a group. Other groups were slow but the general trend was off.

Mining issues showed widest losses in the senior and junior producing golds. Here losses were widespread but still far less than yesterday's advances.

Base metals posted a good gain for Noranda, 7-8 at 48, but losses predominated in the group.

HOGS

Toronto, April 3 — (CP) — Grade A dressed bacon - hogs were unchanged at Hull $22 delivered, unchanged at Stratford to farmers $21.85, to truckers $22 delivered, in markets reporting early today.

Heavy Easter Holiday Traffic Is Predicted

Toronto, April 3 (CP)—Heaviest Easter holiday traffic in many years was predicted today as road, rail and air lines booked reservations for the movement which started last night and reaches its height tonight.

Both the Canadian National Railways and Canadian Pacific Rilway, with Trans-Canada Air Lines and American Air Lines, said here that extra sections were being added to regular schedules over the weekend. More than 1,500 passengers already have been booked for special Easter tours to New York and other centres.

Sample of the holiday business was announced that the four regular flights from Toronto to United States points on the air line will be augmented by 11 special flights, the first of which left yesterday afternoon.

At Niagara Falls it was said that Canadians planning to cross to the United States there would be advised to secure United States currency on this side first. The unofficial discount on Canadian currency in Niagara Falls, New York, today was said to have gone to nine cents. For some time American merchants have taken a flat discount of five per cent.

WOOLWORTH ESTATE VALUED $15,691,975

Scranton, Pa., April 3 —(AP)—Personal property in the estate of the late Charles S. Woolworth was valued at $15,691,975 in an inventory and appraisement filed yesterday by executors. Woolworth, who died Jan. 8, had holdings worth $8,368,445 in the F. W. Woolworth Company of which he was a co-founder.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 3 —(CP)— A small supply of cattle cleared at steady prices on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Veal calves, hogs sheep and lambs were steady. Receipts: Cattle 140, calves 40, hogs 320, sheep and lambs 380.

Weighty steers brought $14.50-$15; butcher steers $13.50-$15, heifers $13-$14.75, butcher cows $9.50-$11.50 with canners downward to $8.

Veal calves were $16-$17 for choice with plains downward to $12.

Hogs were dressed, grade A $22, grade B1 $21.60. Sows $19.25 dressed.

Good light sheep sold up to $10.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, April 3 (AP)—Coal mine news helped unsettle the stock market today and, while selling was unimpressive, leaders generally backed down fractions to around two points.

Extreme declines were reduced in the majority of cases.

On the offside early were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Gooderich, Goodyear, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, American Woolen, Eastman Kodak, and Du Pont.

Canadian issues gave up fractions by mid-day. Hiram Walker lost 1-4 while Canaidan Pacific and Dome Mines each was off 1-8.

PRODUCE MARKET

EVELYN DICK SEES

torso-murder trials here, saw the attempt and will be a court witness against the three women.

By now Mrs. Dick is familiar with old Barton Street jail. She has been there more than a year during which time she became one of the stand-out figures among its inhabitants, the woman charged for so long with the torso-killing of her husband — a charge on which she was acquitted — and the woman to whom all bits of prison gossip were brought.

Currently she is being held in jail pending the disposal of an appeal by the Crown against her acquittal on the charge of husband murder, the Crown contending her statements to police should have been admitted to evidence.

At first report few details of the attempted jail break were available.

Mrs. Dick will be one of the Crown's star witnesses when the three young women appear in magistrate's court on a charge of attempting to break jail. The women were Misses Helen Rea, 25, and Florence Arnott, 18, both of Hamilton, and Evelyn Hamilton, 37, Toronto.

Three Appear in Court.

They appeared in court today charged with assault occasioning bodily harm and attempting to break jail with intent to escape. None entered any plea.

The attempted break was staged in a women's cell block when the matron, Mrs. Sadie Andrews, was attacked by the three women. She warded them off, prevented their escape but was confined to her bed today with lacerations.

Mrs. Andrews was in the act of offering a light when one girl sprang at her, threw a coat over her head and dragged her to the floor.

It was reported one girl struck the matron over the head with a shoe. Someone else hit her with a scrub brush. As Mrs. Andrews screamed for help there was a general melee and the woman let herself out of the cell block as three guards came to her assistance.

Mrs. Dick said she was seated at a table and took no part in the disturbance.

Founder of Canadian Club

Charles R. McCullough of Hamilton has died at the age of 82 years and leaves a memory that will long linger. It fell to his honor to be the man who was responsible for the foundation of what is now a national institution in Canada, the Canadian Clubs, which have developed across the Dominion. There are other branches in the United States and in Britain. He saw the need and the advantage of an organization of this kind for Canadians to foster Canadian ideals and the very success of the suggestion is to be found in the spread of the movement.

The late Charles McCullough was at one time a resident of Belleville where he was engaged as a teacher in a business college. His association with business colleges attracted his interest throughout his long life. Many years ago he entered the engraving business and became president of the Ontario Engraving Company.

Canadians owe a debt to this man who leaves through the instrumentality of the organization of Canadian Clubs a healthy influence upon Canadian life. in many centres speakers of national and international importance appear before the clubs which spread the evangel of Canadian ideals. These clubs become the expressions of good will between Canadians and other peoples, for speakers of other lands are often called upon to address these bodies of business men.

Today among the outstanding women's organizations are the Women's Canadian Clubs who carry on a laudable work.

Canadian Clubs have been a forum for Canadian men and women.

In these clubs the influence of the late Charles McCullough will go down the future years.

More Ceilings Off

More commodities and services have been announced as freed of controls. The latest list is an extensive one, including basic products essential to the average citizen. Ceilings are taken off coal and other fuels, footwear, certain foods as turkeys, ducks and geese live or dressed, wools in all forms, all motor vehicles, beverage preparations made from cocoa, chemicals and plastics, and ranges, refrigerators, domestic washing machines and sewing machines, and other lines.

Finance Minister Abbott expresses the view that the Government believes the action would bring prices "smoothly to the levels which now are appropriate." There is expressed some concern that prices in some lines may rise, especially in view of any shortages. Many producers have stated that they are against price increases following the order.

Mentioning the possibility of higher prices for coal and other fuels Montreal Gazette says that if there should be upward re-adjustments in fuel prices before next winter, this "could hardly have been avoided sooner or later without an undesirably indefinite prolongation of controls and costly subsidies." However it adds that the adjustment is timed to coincide with the advent of warm spring weather and could be made with a minimum of disturbance and hardship on the ordinary householder and leaves the whole summer for a rational and gradual adjustment of prices to real costs and distribution factors."

The lid is now off about a third of goods and services which were under control.

Voice of Spring

To those in northern climes the voices of spring have an irresponsible appeal, whether the sound of rushing water or the chirping of birds which have come back. Canadians have set their heart on the robin, that merry minstrel, whose chirrup from housetop or tree branch instantaneously strikes vibrant chords in the hearts of those who hear. Being one of the first arrivals and possessing a musical language that is the very essense of joy, the robin comes naturally by his popularity among the birds. He is a sociable fellow, he wants to be where humans are, he is inquisitive as everyone knows who has watched him hopping nearer and nearer on the lawn. Then too he wears a favorite brown and black attire that marks him out among the birds.

Most people will take the robin's word for it, his presence and his carolling from the top of a dwelling or a lofty tree as the inevitable and convincing proof that winter has vanished and spring has come. Even before he is seen his voice of melody is heard ringing across parks, across streets or across fields. There is no bird that announces itself so clearly and with all the evidence of good will as he does in the welcome music with which he declares his arrival some fine morning in early April. That time is now come.

Modern Tanker

Laid down to be fast enough to defy submarines without waiting for a convoy, a British tanker has been converted to the world's most modern vessel of her kind. She is "Helicina," which is not only fast but sets new standards of comfort for all the crew. On her first run from Southamton to Curacao, in the West Indies, she completed in a few hours over ten days a trip which has hitherto taken tankers 15 to 16 days to make. "Helicina" is notable for her size, and her modern propelling machinery. Every member of the crew has a cabin to himself, and sleeps on a spring bed above which is a reading light. The furniture of these cabins includes a writing desk, a chest of drawers, and a settee. The seamen and firemen have separate messes, but sliding doors connect the two compartments so that they can be made into one large recreation room. The messes are equipped with a leather upholstered chair for each man.

Give Your Name

For refusing to give his name to the other party following a motor car accident, a Montreal man had to pay a $25 fine. The case should be a warning to motorists.

Do not forget that, if you figure in a collision with another car, the law demands that you give your name and address in writing, if the other party to the accident demands it. Failure to do so carries with it a penalty.

You have nothing to fear from this. If you were not in the wrong in the accident, giving full particulars as to your identity will usually only aid in clearing you from blame. Your refusal to supply the information will not only make it inconvenient for you, but it may also weigh heavily in the eyes of a court should a suit ensue. Juries quite often will take this as an indication of guilt.

Do not forget, also, that you have the right to demand the name and address of the man who tangles with you.—Chatham Daily News.

SMOOTHING OUT TRAIN RIDES

The roll of great passenger ships has been much lessened by the use of Sperry gyroscopes. Robot steering mechanisms for airplanes have depended on small gyroscopes, as has the gyrocompass. But only now are these giant spinning tops being used to smooth out the effects of rough track on railway trains. This comes as an outgrowth of the tank-gun stabilizers used in World War II to make firing of guns more acurate. We eagerly await their installation on sleeping cars, says Rotarian Magazine.

Satisfying His 55 Bosses

Ponder a moment on the troubles of Mr. Trygve Lie, secretary general of the United Nations. Not only has he 2,000 staff members demanding immediate pay increases, but he has 55 employers. Most executives find one employer difficult enough to satisfy.—Milwaukee Journal.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1947, Edgar A. Guest)

FRIENDSHIP

A friend's a friend though rich or poor, in plenty or in need.
The name is but an idle word, if flattery pens the creed.
A friend will drink from hardship's glass as well as victory's cup,
And back a comrade when he's down;
not only when he's up.

Some call it friendship when they run a conqueror home to cheer.
Crowds always line the streets to see some famous man appear,
But friendship is a deeper trait; it wears through thick and thin.
It stands by comrades when they lose;
not only when they win.

Some turn their backs on shabby dress and pleas of need rebuff,
The scorn of pride in post and purse is truly bitter stuff.
But friendship clings to friends of old and bids them in to sup,
And stays the friend when friends are down; as well as when they're up.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

APRIL 3RD., 1927.

A meeting of the open forum of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday and arrangements were made to hold a "Newcomers" night on the evening of April 12. The meeting will be preceded by a dinner and each member of the Chamber is expected to bring as a guest a person who recently came to Belleville to reside. There will be addresses by leading citizens and a musical program will be given.

Mr. Carl Reid went to Toronto today.

Mrs. M. Malyea, Cedar Street, will leave shortly for Toronto where she will in future reside.

A litter of silver foxes arrived at Mr. Charles J. Symons' fox pens this morning. The number is not known as mother fox will not allow the young ones to be touched.

When burning the grass on the north side of St. Thomas' Church today the fire got beyond control and the fire brigade was called to extinguish it.

The announcement that Mr. Harry B. Stock, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company, would deliver a lecture, illustrated with sixty-five lantern slides on "The World of the Telephone," before the Women's Canadian Club drew a large audience to the High School assembly room and all present enjoyed the lecture and the manner in which it was presented.

Mr. Mark Sprague of this city went to Hamilton today to take part in a trap shooting tournament. Mr. Sprague is a member of what is termed the Indian team and that team will endeavor to recapture the challenge flag which it lost last year.

Col. W. N. Ponton has been appointed to act as Crown Counsel at the assizes which will open here this week before Mr. Justice Britton.

40 YEARS AGO

APRIL 3RD., 1907.

Mr. A. L. Smith, druggist at Port Arthur, Ontario, and at one time employed in Templeton's drug store in this city, purchased recently in that city a business block at a price of $12,000.00. He will open a high class drug store in the building.

At an early hour Sunday morning the greater part of Sutherland's sawmill, situated at the upper end of Cannifton Village, collapsed and went into the river. This was owing to high water and ice and the fact that the building was very old, having been erected a century ago. A new portable mill will be erected as soon as possible. There is considerable custom sawing done in the village and the mill is necessary.

Mr. Harry J. Clarke, B.A., has returned home from Toronto where he attended the Teachers' convention.

The Rev. Willard Brewing of Christ (Reformed Episcopal) Church, Toronto, is visiting friends in the city.

Collins; Secretary-Treasurer, E. R. Gordon; Committee of Management, A. Carmichael, J. Matheson and D. Thompson.

Interesting item in issue of ten years ago: "The street car company has completed the clearing of ice from the tracks and the horse drawn street cars were running today. It gave a summer-like appearance to Front Street."

Tenders for the operation of the bay bridge have been opened and Mr. Richard Arnott's tender of $4,340.00 was accepted.

T.C.A. Reduces Prices On Atlantic Flights

Montreal, April 3. (CP)—Canada Air Lines yesterday confirmed that rates for its Transatlantic flights were brought down to International Air Transport Association conference minimum tariff based on route mileage flown.

Under the new T.C.A. tariff, a one-way flight from Montreal to London costs $312 plus 15 per cent compared with $375 plus tax charged formerly. A round-trip now costs $561.60 instead of $675, both with the tax additional.

Charges Russ Invading U.S. Fishing Grounds

Washington, April 3 — (AP) — Senator Warren Magnuson (Dem. Wash.) complained to the State Department today that Russians using 16 ships which the United States gave the Soviet Union during the war have "invaded" North Pacific fishing waters customarily fished by Americans.

Furthermore, Magnuson said in a letter to State Secretary Marshall, he is informed the Russians intend to sell the fish in American markets.

Letter to the Editor

Chamber of Commerce

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

It is regretable but true that if the Belleville Chamber of Commerce were to be quietly dissolved its absence would probably go unnoticed by the citizens and business men of Belleville for a very considerable time. This is so because in recent years it has accomplished nothing and, so far as the public is concerned, has not even attempted to accomplish anything of any worth to the community.

This is not because there are no problems demanding its attention; there are many, many problems of great urgency both local and national which are crying for attention. It is not because of any lack of calibre of the Executive. All members of the Executive are of proved ability and have made distinct successes in their own businesses. It is because of an apathy and lethargy of its membership and those who should constitute its membership at a time when such an attitude is folly not only from the public's standpoint but that of their own true interests.

Let us consider the result of this apathy and lethargy:

Chamber of Commerce Offices

The Chamber of Commerce offices though well housed and well situated, are shabby in the extreme. There is no sign and the gold lettering is falling away. The only bright mark, the Tourist Information sign, was erected not by the Chamber of Commerce but by the Junior Board of Trade. No merchant would operate a business under such conditions and expect patronage or respect. Yet all the mercnants of Belleville permit this eyesore as their Chamber of Commerce.

Need For Leadership

The installation of parking meters is before the City Council. The Junior Board of Trade spent about $400 in proving a parking scheme that would make parking meters unnecessary in Belleville. The Chamber of Commerce undertook to carry it on. Yet parking meters have been passed by Council and apparently ordered. The order price is $85 per unit for an American meter as against $62.50 for a Canadian product immediately available. The $85 machine is said to require less winding. Approximately $30 of the $85 does not represent goods but duty payable on their entry. The total difference works out to $5,800. Look upon it as a half mill on the tax rate or look upon it as money that could be spent in advertising the merits of Belleville as a location for industry; is it not a question in which the Chamber of Commerce should take an interest?

The City has voted some thousands for crude lavatories in the Market Square, apparently in the place of already existing ones. Once again, look upon it as it affects the mill rate or look upon it as money that could be spent in attracting industry; was it not a question in which an alert Chamber of Commerce would take an interest?

Again, the City proposes to spend considerable sums for a day of celebration for the returning veteran. Veterans would appreciate activity on the housing question and the presence of industries in which to earn a livelihood. Facing an uncertain future, a celebration is a pretty empty thing and I have not encountered any veteran who is impressed that a celebration is about to take place. The veteran is not a fool and knows that it would be in his greater interests if the money and energy were spent to bring a high-pay industry to his city.

National Problems

The average business man is fond of saying that business and politics don't mix. Business may not mix with politics, but politics is mixing with business, and it is utter folly for us to bury our heads in the sand so as to avoid seeing problems which are of life and death importance to us.

Man of War was a great race horse and won 19 out of 20 major classics. But Man of War would have been a failure if badly ridden or carrying 160 or 170 pounds. So it is with the system of free enterprise. It has served us well and brought prosperity such as no other system of economics could have accomplished. Now we have removed half the working parts and still expect it to function. It carries a burden of taxation some of which is unnecessary and some of which is necessary but unwisely levied. Most of the industries which came into being and expanded a generation ago with high wages, wide distribution and low unit costs would be impossible today because profits that could be "ploughed back" towards greater productivity and employing more people are "killed" yearly by extraordinary taxation. So the Communists in our midst are delighted. They exult that "free enterprise" does not work. It is not that "free enterprise" does not work. We don't work "free enterprise."

There is a limit to space and I will not elaborate further. But these problems affect the lives and prosperity of the citizens of Belleville. Yet to what extent have they been agitated by the Chamber of Commerce? And what leadership has been given by the business men of Belleville? And if the business men of Belleville fail to give leadership from whom can we expect it?

CURES FOR PEPTIC ULCER A DIME A DOZEN

Came the Sunday paper with a yarn bearing a London dateline about a specialist (it would have to be nothing less than the a specialist, who makes a bid for new business by announcing that all but one of his last 20 ulcer patients (stomach, peptic, gastric, duodenal ulcer that is) have been cured within one or two months by daily hypodermic injections of water. The specialist explains that ulcers are not healed by diet alone, nor by injections, but because of the patient's confidence in his physician etc., etc.

The story reminds me that a couple other remarkable cures for stomach ulcer have been exploited recently—two at least, but I can't remember now just what they—oh, yes one is a bit of crochet work on some of the sympathetic nerves and the other is vitamin B1 (thiamine) therapy.

Either or both of these latter treatments may be of value, but the hypodermic injections of distilled water — that may be all right for a London "specialist" but it seems pretty childish, doesn't it? Can ulcer patients in England be so naive that the doctor must administer a placebo hypodermically in order to gain their confidence?

In all treatment of stomach ulcer or stomach ulcer complex there is one catch which, apparently, a good many physicians as well as their patients too often forget, namely, that it is the natural course of the disease to be active and troublesome for a while and then to be camparatively quiescent or untroublesome for while—periodic phases, somewhat like Undulant fever.

Thus if a new remedy or diet or other measure happens to be tried at the right time, the quiescent interval that follows is likely to be credited to the new treatment or the recurrence of trouble is as likely to be blamed on the treatment.

Even the selection of a diet for the ulcer patient is by no means the fussy problem we formerly made of it. I mean it is not a question of allowing the patient to eat this and that and forbidding the patient to eat other things. Nor is it a matter of a diet list which restricts the choice of food to specified items. In any case of ulcer it is well for the patient to ask his doctor about the diet — particularly about foods or dishes of the suitability of which there is any doubt.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

SKIN OIL

Does the use of oil on the skin prevent the benefit of the sun's rays? (G. N.)

Answer—A heavy application of oil or oil mixed with things impervious to light may lessen the intensity of amount of ultraviolet rays that reach the skin. It is mainly upon the amount of ultraviolet rays in sunshine that beneficial effects of exposure depend.

SEEING DOUBLE

Having been blessed with twins—boy and girl—we wish to bring them up the Brady way. Inclosed is ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope—please send The Brady Baby Book. When my husband telephoned his parents that we had a pair of twins, his dad, a college teacher, exclaimed "You mean quadruplets?" (Mrs. J.M. McA)

Answer—Dad was right. Twins are twins—one pair would mean four in hand, two pairs eight—confusing, isn't it?

Use of Steel Traps to Fight Vermin Causes Furore in British Commons

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 3 — (CP) — A clause in the agriculture bill authorizing the Minister of Agriculture to permit the use of steel traps in fighting vermin has caused more furore in the Commons even than a clause under which a farmer may be turned off his land if he does not employ it efficiently.

Members of Parliament who represent factory districts and know nothing about farm problems are being inundated with letters from animal-lovers who say steel traps are unnecessarily cruel.

They take their inquiries to Tom Williams, the present agriculture minister, who was a miner before he entered politics. Williams, standing by the advice of his experts, regrets that pests suffer pain when caught in steel traps but reiterates these devices are necessary to protect crops vital to Britain.

Members turned out in scores to see a demonstration in the Commons arranged by groups who said more humane methods could be employed.

Outside the House, a lively discussion between farmers and friends of animals has developed in newspaper letter columns. This sort of argument over kindness to animals as opposed to the hard facts of farm life has been going on with unabated vigor for years.

Commons Shorts: H. L. Austin, Labor Member of Parliament for Stratford, made a bit of history in the Commons when, summoned by the division bells, he dashed from the new parliamentary gymnasium wearing blue shorts and rubber shoes and, after donning a coat, hurried into the House to cast his vote.

Tradition not being lightly disturbed, arrangements had been made when the gymnasium was opened some months ago that a member might enter the House in shorts if he put a coat on.

As usual, history showed someone once had been more daring than Austin — an Irish member of parliament who heard the division bells ring as he enjoyed a bath. He swathed himself in a towel and dashed into the voting lobby with bare wet feet, leaving passing foot-prints on the cold Commons floor. In those days, there were no women in the House.

Felt Sick For Many Years Due To Stomach Disorders

Had So Much Gas, Heartburn and Sour Acid-Risings All the Time — Couldn't Eat," Says this Man. Bad Headaches and Backache Added to Misery. Praises Syntona for Relief.

MR. GORDON STEINHOFF

"For a good many years I suffered with a weak, nervous, upset stomach and I just couldn't seem to get anything to help me," said Mr. Gordon Steinhoff, Brigden, Ontario, in a recent report.

"This condition brought on a combination of symptoms that made my stomach feel so distressed from day to day that often I couldn't eat my meals. I would bloat up with gas and have spells of heartburn with sour acid risings and cramps in my stomach. It was an awful feeling. I became subject to headaches and dizzy spells and had a dull, aching pain across my back. My nerves were so bad I often couldn't get to sleep after going to bed at night.

"I had taken so many things I didn't have any faith in medicines any more, but when a friend told me of the good results he got by taking Syntona I decided to see what it would do for me. Before long I found it was helping me and with this encouragement I kept on until now it has relieved all the gas, sourness and heartburn so that I can enjoy all my meals every day and have no trouble at all. I am free of headaches and dizzy spells, the pain has gone from my back and my nerves are settled down so I can get my proper sleep at night.

"It's certainly wonderful to be this way again and I advise anyone suffering this way to get Syntona and begin taking it without delay."

If you suffer from disorders similar to those described above, why not follow Mr. Steinhoff's example and begin taking Syntona today. It is made only from the purest Herbs and roots, contains no harsh drugs or chemicals and can be taken by anyone without fear of further upsetting even the most delicate stomach.

A Pledge

With the announcement of the removal of price ceilings on Used Cars we sense an immediate obligation to the consumer and to the government. High prices have never been associated with a good used car market. A large selection of good used cars which will insure a large turnover can be sold for a smaller profit.

It is therefore our aim to help drive used car prices down from their present levels. There will be of course a period of re-adjustment in which the smaller and lighter cars might temporarily sell for higher than the government established ceiling prices. On the other hand, a person preferring a large and heavy car will find he will be able to buy one much below the pre-ceiling prices. In addition older model cars will drop considerably in price immediately. Therefore, all in all, there should not be any appreciable price increase. If any, it will be temporary until we can help fill the large demand for good used cars in Belleville and district. We have already made plans for bringing high grade used cars in quantity into this district. As soon as we can bring enough of them in prices will take an appreciable drop.

This will be our contribution to NOT ONLY holding the line against higher prices but actually lowering them.

WEDDINGS

VADER—BAXTER

Baskets of cala lilies and ferns added much to the beauty of Holloway St. United Church, for the marriage on the morning of March 29th., when at eleven o'clock Sybil Aileen Baxter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Baxter, of Carrying Place, became the bride of Jack Frederick Vader, son of Mrs. Launcelot Vader and the late Mr. Vader of Massassaga, with Rev. Charles A. Perkins as the officiating clergyman.

Entering the church to the strains of wedding music played by Mrs. Calvert, the bride was given in marriage by her father. She made a charming picture in a floor length gown of ivory satin, featuring a sweetheart neckline, and a bouffant skirt ending in a slight train, covered by her full length veil. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses. Miss Betty Sills of Belleville, was the bride's only attendant, wearing a floor length gown of poudre blue net over silk, with a lace bodice, matching veil and gloves. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

The groom was ably assisted by Mr. Douglas Baxter of Carrying Place, and the ushers were Messrs. Jack Baxter and Clinton Vader.

During the signing of the register Misses Jean Vader and June Gray sang "I Love You Truly".

Following the ceremony dinner was served at the home of the groom, where the bride's mother received in an ensemble of green crepe with touches of beige, and wearing a corsage of white carnations. The groom's mother also received in a gown of turquoise blue, with a corsage of white carnations.

For travelling to Montreal, Que., the bride chose a suit of navy blue with white accessories and matching hat. After their return Mr. and Mrs. Vader will reside on the groom's farm near Massassaga.

The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a matching brooch and earrings and the vocalists, compacts.

Lady Diana Duff Cooper Willed $100,000 by Spanish Admirer

London, April 3. (Reuters) —Lady Diana Duff Cooper, wife of the British Ambassador to France, has been left more than £25,000 ($100,000) by an unknown admirer, wealthy Spanish aristocrat Manuel Antonia, Count of Luzarraga, who died in February last year.

In the Count's will, probate of which was granted by a British Court today, all the money and securities the Count kept in a London bank were left to Lady Diana, formerly the Actress Diana Manners, together "whatever I may possess in the Banque Cantonale Vaudoise, Lausanne (the Vaudois Cantonal Bank, Lausanne, Switzerland."

The Count once lived at a London hotel, but then went to Geneva, where he died at 65.

He met Lady Diana only once in his lifetime, when he stopped her in the street, but he was her secret admirer for more than 15 years after seeing her at a London ball before her marriage. He wrote her once weekly until the street meeting —when he identified himself as the writer of the letters. From then on he wrote once a month.

The Count was involved in a three-day sensation in London in August, 1922, when reports circulated that he had been ordered to leave the country. In an interview he declared that he did not intend to go and that he had been engaged to a "well-known English society lady and we were to have been married."

A few days later a British paper said it was authorized by a "distinguished young woman," whose name was withheld, to publish an emphatic denial of the Count's story.

Women's Activities

WEST HUNTINGDON W. A. - W. M. S.

The March meeting of the W.M. S. and W. A. of St. Andrew's Church, West Huntingdon, was held at the home of Mrs. Harry and Mrs. Harold Thompson, dinner being served to twenty-six members and visitors.

In the absence of Mrs. Milton Shaw, the vice-president, Mrs. John McInroy opened the meeting with a hymn and a poem. Mrs. Harold Thompson read the Scripture lesson taken from the 9th chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians, after which Rev. Mr. Walker offered prayer.

Mrs. Don Haggerty read a paper on the theme "Desire", and timely readings were given by Mrs. Tom Emerson, Miss Sarah Wallace and Miss Bessie Fleming. A duet by Mrs. Morley Haggerty and Mrs. John McInroy was much appreciated.

A synopsis of the first chapter of the study book was read by Mrs. Chester Sills.

During the business period it was decided to hold the next meeting at the home of Mrs. Alec. Fleming. Mrs. C. Sills on behalf of the organizations represented, thanked the hostesses and the meeting was dismissed by Mrs. Walker.

ST. PAUL'S GUILD MEETS

Marmora (Special) — A special meeting of St. Paul's Ladies Guild was held on Monday evening in the Parish Hall with Mrs. W. D. Lavender presiding. Rev. J. M. Brownlie, rector, opened the meeting with prayer. A letter was received from Marmora L. O. L. 319 soliciting a contribution towards the Cemetery Vault fund. This matter will be dealt with at a future meeting.

The reports of the General Fund and the Church Decoration Fund were given by the treasurer, Mrs. D. McInroy, the latter fund having been increased by a substantial donation. The report of Mrs. L. K. Crawford in the bake sale and rummage sale recently conducted by the Deloro group showed the event to have been highly successful. Mrs. I.B. Nichol for the Sick and Visiting Committee reported calls being made to sick members in the past month. Plans were made for the Masonic banquet to be held in the Town Hall on April 21st. It was decided to collect the Lenten self-denial boxes shortly after Easter. Mesdames W. Neal and J. Eggett were appointed on the refreshment committee for the May meeting. The rector closed the meeting with prayer after which the committee in charge served refreshments.

ROSLIN W. A.

The April meeting of Roslin W. A. assembled at the home of Mrs. H. Chisholm with an attendance of ten ladies. The president, Mrs. Colden, presided.

During a business discussion plans were made for a quilting bee and pot luck dinner to take place during the present month.

Mrs. Colden in charge of the program chose the Scripture lesson from 1st Corinthians. A reading "Abide with Me" was given by Mrs. Chapman and another "Before the Cross" by Mrs. Colden; both of which were in keeping with Easter spirit. Mrs. Heywood closed the meeting with prayer. The hostess and her assistants served delicious refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

JUBILEE EVENING AUXILIARY

The approach of Easter was the keynote of the short but effective program directed by Miss Gertrude Lazier at the regular monthly meeting of the Jubilee Evening Auxiliary on Tuesday night in Bridge Street Church. The topic was developed by a suitable selection of Bible readings and hymns, and through prayer and responsive reading.

During the program Miss Nancy David gave a very entertaining recitation "Angela's Missionary Box." Miss Barbara Joan Houston contributed to the enjoyment of the evening by singing "In the Garden."

The president, Miss Irene Grills, announced the annual joint meeting of all the missionary organization of the church, to be held this month, in the form of a pot-luck supper. The guest speaker will be Dr. Bates of Toronto, a retired missionary who has served forty years in Japan. His topic will be "The Dawning of a New Day in Japan."

Supper was served by Miss Joy Nichols' group.

PINE GROVE W.I.

The March meeting of Pine Grove W.I. was held at the home of Mrs. F. Campbell, on March 27th with a good attendance of members and visitors.

Mrs. Coulter presiding, opened the meeting with the Institute Ode and community singing.

Treasurer's report showed a balance of $68.66 on hand. Mrs. Rodgers suggested that the three dollar grant be used to buy a book of readings.

It was decided to donate $5 to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

An invitation from Stirling W.I. for a social evening on April 9th was accepted. Mrs. H. Coulter was appointed to represent Pine Grove W.I. at Film Board, Foxboro.

In the absence of the convener for Community Activities, the following members gave readings. Farm Home, Mrs. Meale. A community "Whose Interest?" Mrs. W. Rodgers "The Golden Anniversary at Stoney Creek" Mrs. L. Finkle. "The Land of Beginning Again," Mrs. R. Vanderwater. "Spring Awakening," written by Mrs. P. Meale was read by Mrs. Fred Campbell. "Lift the Latch," was read by Mrs. C. Ross.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. H. Detlor.

Refreshments were served, and the meeting adjourned.

12 Lounge Chairs Presented By Bethlehem Shrine

Made possible by the generous contributions of Belleville and district residents through the medium of a tag day in this city some time ago, the sanitarium section of the Department of Veterans' Affairs hospital at Kingston on Wednesday afternoon was presented with 12 lounge chairs by the Bethlehem Shrine, No. 11 White Shrine of Jerusalem of this city.

Worthy High Priestess of the local Shrine, Mrs. Frank Moon, made the presentation of the chairs to Dr. O'Neil in the absence of the hospital superintendent, Dr. Benson, the chairs being received on behalf of the veterans in hospital by Major Edgar Matthews, Matron Nurse Duncan and Nurse Peck.

The chairs are for the use of hospitalized veterans who, in the words of Mrs. Moon as she made the presentation "sacrificed so much for us in the last war".

Members of the Belleville Shrine who made the trip to Kingston, were Mr. and Mrs. Ashby, Mr. and Mrs. Moon.

Pupils Contribute To Fine Program

Pupils of Queen Alexandra School contributed to the program at the April Home and School meeting Tuesday evening.

A colorful Irish skit was acted by Grade 5 pupils from Miss McPherson's room. The children were in costume and the back drop of a thatched cottage and garden lent reality to the little play.

Mr. Anderson's class sang very creditably The Lord's Prayer and Miss Hart's class also displayed through songs and a dance the excellent musical training that is being given to pupils at the school.

Some of Mrs. McKay's Grade 5 and 6 pupils enacted a play "The Junior Pipers" in which a young King and his noblemen set about to solve the problem of "lost minutes". There was no stumbling over the lines and the whole performance "went over" very enthusiastically with the audience. Mrs. McKay's class won the prize for largest attendance of parents.

Mr. Jack Deacon accompanied by Mrs. Deacon, sang "Sylvia", "My Boy" and "The Call of the High Road" — the latter being an original composition by Mrs. Deacon. These three numbers were beautifully done and very much appreciated by everyone.

Mrs. Sparling Speaks

"Are We Parents or Mr. and Mrs.?" was the topic of Mrs. Grant Sparling's address. As guest speaker of the evening, Mrs. Sparling drew from her wide knowledge and experience in welfare work many stories of discordant and defeated homes. Through the help of various agencies and people, together with a desire on the part of the couples themselves, homes have been rebuilt and the "Mr. and Mrs." have become real parents. That problem children are the direct result of maladjusted homes was pointed out. Main reasons for failure to become good parents were lack of training or preparation for marriage or parenthood, economic insecurity, emotional twists, intemperate in sex, alcohol or bad temper, poor housing, desire for fun at expense of the family. Mrs. Sparling felt that the present educational system overstresses academic attainments and that over-ambitious parents can ruin their own and their children's lives by setting too high an academic standard for them. She felt that there are many other fields of endeavour where they can excel and be useful and happy. The "Mr. and Mrs." of the Saturday night party were deplored by Mrs. Sparling as their lack of interest in Church on Sunday gives their children a feeling that spiritual things are of little importance. "Only God and a firm belief in Him can give parents that power and serenity which will help them guide children to give their best of their generation which promises to be the most complex and terrible in all history."

Mrs. Wilkes and Mrs. LaFrance discussed the 'pros' and 'cons' of the value of radio programs for children.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Small Afternoon Tea

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to use a large silver tray with silver teapot, water kettle, sugar bowl and cream pitcher in the living room when one has only three callers? They are distinguished people, and while I want to impress, I do not want to overdo. I know that it is done at all large teas, but this is just an informal call of three.

2. What shall I serve with hot tea? Shall I also offer wine?

L.

1. I do hope that you will use your handsome silver tea service when you serve tea to your three distinguished visitors. You are fortunate to have such a lovely treasure, and so by all means enjoy it and use it, whether you are serving for many or for a few. There is no reason in the world why it should be reserved for special occasions.

2. Serve only the hot tea. If I were you, I would not offer wine, for this might be considered "overdoing" the occasion.

It would be better taste to concentrate on giving your tea-party such a beautiful background as you can give it with your service, and on the perfection of your tea-accessories. Serve simple accessories, such as small, slim sandwiches with simple fillings. You might like to have a few of the sandwiches made of raisin or nut or date bread. Or you might like to serve hot tiny baking powder biscuits, opened and buttered. Or cinnamon toast, or toasted raisin bread, or nut bread and cream cheese sandwiches, or rolled sandwiches, plain or toasted, of white bread (if toasted brush them with melted butter and toast them in the oven). And for the "sweet" course, little tea cakes, plain or delicately frosted; or cookies, preferably home-made, or slices of nut cakes or fruit cake.

Don't "Congratulate" Bride

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have always been under the impression that it is wrong to use the world "congratulations" in expressing your good wishes to a bride. Please tell me whether this is right, and I would like to know whether it is a new custom?

Your "impression" is right . . that we should congratulate the bridegroom and wish the bride happiness. That is not a new custom ;it has always been true. But I am constantly surprised, when I listen to guests in a receiving line at a wedding, how comparatively few people know that it is a breach of good manners to "congratulate" the bride.

Seating Four in the Movies

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When two girls and two fellows go to the movies or theatre together, in what order should they enter the row where their seats are?

C.M.

The usual and most convenient order is for a man to enter the row first, then the two girls, and last, the other man.

When Hotel Guest Sends Package C.O.D.

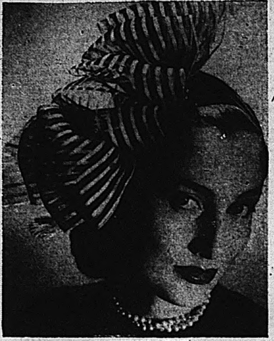
Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When you are staying at a hotel where you have stayed several times before and where therefore they know that your credit is good, isn't it all right for you to send C.O.D. packages for the cashier to pay and add to your bill?

G. S.

You shouldn't do this unless you tell the clerk ahead of time that you are going to, or even may, send a package C.O.D.; or unless you telephone him about this plan from the store from which you are sending the purchase. This is not only considerate of the hotel management, but it protects you, since this is the only way the hotel can know if you ordered the article.

Sophisticated Beanie



By PRUNELLA WOOD

Inspired by the lovely beanie, G. Howard Hodge turned out this sleek cap of smooth navy straw to emphasize the new "neat head" look. He gives his creation a shot of femininity with a band of navy horsehair striped in white that extends into a fluffy chou at one side.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Skirt hems high, skirt hems low, it is a satisfaction to a woman to possess pretty legs. This is the age of the slender, rounded silhouette that every woman adores, every man admires. It is lovely anatomical balance. Those girls whose calves are fatted, and those who toddle around on spindle shanks, are not marching in the beauty parade.

Improvement in leg defects takes place when they are systematically exercised in natural ways. Swimming is highly recommended by teachers of physical education. The force of the movements necessary to send the body through the water strengthens every fibre from the hips to the little pink toes. Too much stress cannot be placed upon walking as a means of keeping healthy and looking it. American woman, alas, are not walkers. In England, women think nothing of clipping off a ten mile hike. Uncle Sam's girls shudder at the thought of tramping six or eight blocks. It may be the explanation of the over-development of many middle-aged figures.

Gym work in high schools and colleges, together with outdoor sports, keep young people supple and of good proportions. It is a pity that physical education ceases with studies. It is vitally necessary to keep the entire musculature in tip-top condition if the feminine figure is to retain grace and youthful contour.

High kicking is an excellent means of normalizing legs that are too fat or too thin. Go high up on your toes when you do this. Make every endeavor to be light of movement. Bicycling is recommended; it shuffles off fat cells and, at the same time, strengthens those muscles that have gone soft or those that are not perfectly developed. Jumping rope has about the same effect as bicycling. Jump six times on one foot, six on the other, six on both.

For fatted calves and thighs that have accumulated adipose tissue, try this exercise:

Trim Ankles and Neatly Molded Legs

Send it as high as ever you can, then far out at the side, holding the torso close to the floor. Stretch the muscles to the utmost; describe a fourth of a circle with your toes. Lower the leg in the outstretched position. Take a long breath, then swing the leg back to first position and repeat. Use the left leg the same way. These movements call into action the powerful muscles on the outside of the thighs. Fat cells, unable to stand muscle activity, get discouraged, go off and die.

All this stretching and pulling of muscles, cartilages and ligaments greatly increases the circulation of blood in the lower limbs, helps to normalize conditions.

Massage will break down adipose structures on the calves, but results come slowly. Movements must consist of pinching and rolling the flesh, so as to dissolve the undesired padding.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Thinks Her Relatives Are Unfair To Her Boy Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 20 and very much in love with a boy 22. We have loved each other for almost eight years, although we had to sneak around to be together, for my parents don't like him, nor do any of my relatives. People have given him a bad name because at times he has got into fights in town, and then, too, I think it is because he lives on the bad side of town.

He enjoys everything I do, and does everything to make me happy, and I try to do the same in return. I am living with two aunts near 50, both old maids, and we get into arguments about this boy. If they would only give him a chance, they could see what a fine boy he is.

I am going back to college next Fall, and when I come out, I hope to teach a couple of years and then we plan to marry. Do you think it wise for us to wait about five years more before we marry, since we both love each other so much and since we have waited this long? I hate to make my family unhappy, but I am unhappy, too. Please tell me what you think is best.

"J. C."

What I think would be best, "J.C.", is just what you are planning to do—that is, to finish your education. If you decide to teach a year or two after that, it would probably be a very good idea, but you could wait, to make that decision, or any other, until after you have graduated. You could plan your studies with that purpose in view.

I would have no way of forming any opinion as to whether your relatives are right or wrong about the suitability of this boy as a friend for you. It is possible, of course, that their prejudice against him may be based on superficial grounds, but it is also possible that their opposition has aroused so much antagonism in you that you refuse to see any reasons for their attitude.

If you are wise enough to go ahead with your plans, you will be so occupied with constructive interests that you will not be able to concentrate wholly on this matter, as you are evidently now doing, and as time goes on, you will gain perspective about it and know better how to judge this boy's true worth.

A Flirt Gets Wise To Herself—Or Does She?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16 years old and really a spoiled brat, and I don't want to be one.

I've been going around hurting people. By that, I mean boys' hearts. I have stacks of boy friends and I have an awful gift of being able to get any boy I want. I get them, and start them off to a romantic beginning. I tell them I'm in love, too. But that's only for a while until I see someone else I want.

Another bad thing is that I can get all the boys whose hearts I broke back, after I've been so awful. That is, I could get all but one. I think that's the one I really like. He is the one who has opened my eyes to all I've been doing, but he doesn't want me.

I'd do anything to stop this habit, or whatever you may call it. Please don't say it's up to me to get myself out, because I've tried. I also know it's my own fault. Won't you please help me?

"M.A.C."

The man a girl can't get is always the one she wants, and this goes doubly for the type of girl you are. A heartless flirt doesn't respect the boys she can get easily. But it's another story when one comes along who is proof against her shenanigans and refuses to allow her to add his scalp to her collection. Then she feels the magnetic attraction that always draws the female of the species irresistibly toward a male who's stronger than she is.

You say you've tried to mend your way, and imply that you haven't been successful. Why not? It ought not to be so terribly hard to stop being insincere and put a little sincerity into your words and actions for a change. Could it be that you're, in reality, so proud of this "awful gift" of yours for breaking boys' hearts that you're reluctant to give it up?

Suppose you begin by asking yourself —and trying to give yourself an honest answer—whether you're actually interested in this boy for what he is, or whether it may not be merely that your vanity is intrigued because your wiles won't work on him and you're determined to make him another of your victims by hook or by crook. Which is it you want me to tell you—how you can make yourself into an honest, sincere person, or how to make this boy succumb to your charms? Think about this for a while, and then let me know your answer.

The Experts Say . . .

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, —(CP)—A couple of slices of cold beef between two slices of toast—and 200 years ago the "sandwich" was born. Even then it was meant as a quick pick-me-up lunch, because the fourth Earl of Sandwich was doing a 24-hour stretch at the gaming-table—he had no time to eat more.

The sandwich has come a long way since those early days. Now it includes everything from a jaw-breaking "Dagwood" to those dainty little two-bit numbers you pick up at the bridge table., Bu whether it be meant table. But whether lit be meant nibbling afternoon-teagoer, the general neatness of the sandwich, and the tastiness of its filling, are all-important.

When making a quantity of sandwiches remember first to soften the butter by creaming with a fork. Spread butter thick on one-half of sandwich only, in order to be economical of time. On formal occasions remove crusts but do this before the bread is buttered in order to save butter.

Keep sandwiches fresh by first wrapping in waxed paper and then in dampened towel.

Fillings—Vegetables—sliced tomatoes and cucumbers; shredded lettuce with chopped peanuts or cheese; grated carrot with orange juice or honey; chopped onion with peanut butter; sliced onion with sliced orange. To each of these add dressing and salt and pepper as needed.

Fruit— mashed banana with peanut butter; chopped dates with about half as many chopped nuts and mixed with whipped cream.

For a delicious spread ideal for toasted sandwiches ,try this mustard-cheese filling :one-half cup butter, three-quarters cup white sugar, one cup milk or cream, one small cup cider vinegar, three eggs, three level teaspoons mustard, one level teaspoon salt, two sweet green peppers (put through food chopper), one-half pound packaged cheese. Cook in double boiler and seal in jar.

Here and There: Eating habits should vary with age and nutritionists of the health and welfare department say that the older one gets the more his meals should be simple and consists of easily-digested foods.

In advanced years protein requirement is reduced. Only a small amount of tissue-building material is needed for body repair. Physical processes and activity slow down, so caloric need from food is less.

While the same basic food rules apply at all ages, the form and quantity of meals for the elders differ from those required by younger persons. In the twilight of life meals should be smaller, if more frequent, and consist of warm food, easily chewed.

Have all those heavy winter garments thoroughly cleaned before putting them away this spring, say health and welfare department officials. While dirt may not show as much on these articles as on lighter, summer wear, it is sure to exist, and may encourage the spread of vermin, while the clothing is tucked away.

Doctors say that dirty gloves and mittens could be responsible for skin infections on face and hands next year, when these articles are used again.

Fashion Flashes

FIRMLY ENTRENCHED everywhere with women is the little black cotton dress for city wear, come summer. Black cotton broadcloth makes a neat little number, sleeveless, but with extended shoulder line. Interest is gained by a very wide self-lattice yoke. Bodice buttons down the front. Concealed pockets in side fullness of skirt.

NOT FOR MANY SEASONS have hats been so dressy and colorful. Lemon yellow skirt felt is shirred into a wide, off-the-face bonnet with the crown tip open. The hat is wreathed with tiny green leaves which cascade down the back.

MADE TO GO with new tailored suits is a collection of handsome gilets and dickies. A white pique weskit has a deep U neckline filled in with a tucked sheer yoke that carries a tab collar.

SHEER BEAUTY is the best description of the beautiful lingerie now coming into the shops. A lovely ensemble consists of a white satin gown and a negligee of white silk chiffon. The bodice of the very high-waisted gown is of the white chiffon traced with strips of the satin in a scroll design. Similar detail on the sheer cuffs of the negligee sleeves.

COMING ALONG SOON will be neat little cotton frocks, eminently simple, yet smart enough for all-day general wear. Combed cotton chambray, in dove gray, pale blue or pale pink, is used for a pretty little frock with box-pleated skirt and rows of white rick-rack braid on pilgrim collar and cuffs.

A REAL PARADE of fine suits will be along for Easter. Navy blue alpaca is used for a dress-up suit with a cutaway jacket which has accordion pleated, stiffened white organdie trim, very wide at the neckline and tapering to a point at the waistline closing. The organdie also wings up the sleeve slits and traces a line along the slit pockets.

Target for Wheat Acreage In Eire 700,000 Acres in '47

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Dublin, April 3 — (CP)—Prime Minister De Valera says the only way for Eire to avoid another "black '47" " — 3,000,000 died in Ireland's worst famine 100 years ago — is "for everbody who has a bit of ground that can grow wheat and who has the means of doing it to do so."

The target is 700,000 acres, more than was grown in any year during the war. It is unlikely to be reached in 1947 because bad weather has delayed farm work by many weeks.

Eire has no reserve stocks. Much of last year's grain crop was destroyed by rain. At least 150,000 tons of wheat are needed to maintain the present six-pounds-weekly bread ration through July, August and September and so far only 9,000 tons has been promised by the International Food Council.

Lack of fuel was another critical problem. All reserves had been used up during the winter, worst for more than 50 years, and every person who could be spared from other work should help cut peat.

"All the efforts are in these two lines and they are first priorities," De Valera warned. "Firstly, sow wheat; secondly, cut turf."

Agricultural experts have estimated De Valera will be lucky to get 350,000 acres of wheat this year. At mid-March seeding was only one-fifth as far ahead as in 1946. Farmers have a few more tractors and mechanical implements than a year ago but industrial tractors are being pressed into farm service to speed plowing and seeding.

58,466,000 Poultry On Canadian Farms

Ottawa, April 3 —(CP)— Numbers of poultry on Canadian farms increased 5.5 per cent, and in 1946 and at Dec. 1 stood at 58,466,000, compared with 55,426,900 a year earlier, the Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The advance—contrasting with declines in livestock numbers — was due chiefly to an increase of 5.8 per cent in domestic fowl from 51,696,800 Dec. 1, 1945, to to 54,702,200 last Dec. 1. Turkey numbers increased from 2,648,900 900 to 2,555,500. Geese dropped from 558,000 to 541,500 and ducks from 616,800 to 574,300.

The Day in Parliament

(By The Canadian Press)

The Commons resumes consideration of government control legislation.

The Senate will not sit.

Yesterday:

The Commons heard a charge by John Hackett (PC—Stanstead) that the government's control legislation lack constitutional grounds; approved a motion establishing a 25-man committee to make an annual study of operations of the CBC; saw Reconstruction Minister Howe table regulations giving the Atomic Energy Control Board sweeping powers; adjourned for an Easter recess to April 14.

DREW LASHES OUT

Saying that the Prime Minister of Ontario was entitled to respect by reason of being elected to his office, Premier Drew continued:

"If I am to be compared to any animal I would rather be compared to a dog. The enemies of dogs are rats, particularly Communist rats."

For three minutes the House was in an uproar as government members thundered applause and the chairman tried to restore order.

When Mr. MacLeod attempted to continue he was drowned out by the desk-thumping of government supporters.

Threatened to Name Member

Premier Drew then said that he had risen in reply to "a contemptible attack on this government and if the member for Bellwoods will not respect the vote taken on this item I will ask that he be named." (Naming of a member by the Speaker would call for the member's expulsion from the sitting.)

Mr. MacLeod previously had said that it was a pity the legislature did not have power "to compel the premier and members of his cabinet to return to their homes to try to live on $20 a month."

George Harvey (CCF — Sault Ste. Marie), another late speaker on the estimates, suggested that the province "tax all natural resources." There was no reason, he said, why paper manufacturers, getting a "greatly increased price" for their product, could not be taxed to help old age pensioners.

The night sitting had seen a division in the first few minutes when W. J. Grummett, C. C. F. House leader, moved six-months' hoist for the amendments to the Police Act. Other C. C. F. speakers and the Labor-Progressives during the afternoon had attacked the amendments which give members of police forces the right to collective bargaining with municipal councils, but prohibit police affiliation with trade unions.

On the division on Mr. Grummett's motion, which would have killed the amendments, the vote was 38 for the government and 20 for the opposition. Many of the government members had not returned from dinner at the time.

31 Bills Read

Altogether 31 bills were given final reading before the House went into committee on the estimates.

Attorney - General Blackwell said on the Attorney-General's estimates that an increase of about 60 in the Ontario Provincial Police strength was due to assumption by the provincials of municipal policing powers at several points. There was no increase in relation to the possibility of the force being called on for duty in strikes, he said. The men on municipal policy duty never had and never would be moved for strike duty.

Estimates were also passed for the Provincial Secretary's Department, the Highways Department, Lands and Forests, the Prime Minister's Office and Planning and Development.

During the afternoon discussion on Attorney-General's estimates Mr. Blackwell said the clause forbidding police affiliation with Trade Unions was similar to one in the British Police Act in effect since 1919.

Mr. Blackwell cited the case of Alvin Rowe, the Ontario Provincial Police Constable who supplied Ontario C.C.F. leader E. B. Jolliffe with documents which Mr. Jolliffe used to support his charge at the last election that the Drew government maintained "a paid secret political police—a Gestapo."

Mr. Blackwell said that Rowe had sought to cause disaffection among police at Hamilton during the steel strike last summer. "We require legislation that will stop this sort of thing," he said.

BUDGET EXPECTED

Not Pretty Thing

"The emergency which justifies the complete disrespect of a country's constitution is not a pretty thing," he said. "It is something that threatens the life and soul of a nation."

Such an emergency did not arise from a list of "petty things" which a government felt should be kept under control.

Bona Arsenault (L — Bonaventure) said the one field where the government should re-impose controls was that of motor cars. Veterans who needed them for their livelihood could not obtain cars because manufacturers were sending them to countries throughout the world.

J. M. McDonnell (PC — Muskoka-Ontario) said it would be "unfair" to assert that the Progressive Conservative opposition wanted to return to pre-war conditions. The Conservative government of 1930 to 1935 had not been responsible for the depression of that era.

He said that once a planned economy was started it was difficult to say whether the C. C. F. party was advocating such a policy and would require an extensive civil service which would plan the lives of all Canadians.

Small headings are put on various sections of the debate to help in reading, essential particulars identifying the speaker are inserted and the copy goes to the printer to turn up the next day in advance copy form as a brochure containing the previous day's discussions.

The advance copies that are printed by noon the next day may be changed by the members concerned providing their changes are not "substantial." That is, they are not permitted to alter the sense of any observation. The completion of broken sentences, the correction of names or quotations and generally giving their oratory "polished diction and the rounded phrase" which it often lacks when delivered, encompasses all that member may do in the way of revision.

The revisions then are sent to the printer and the final copy, which is mailed to newspapers and anyone paying the $5 annual subscription, is ready within two days after the debates concerned.

EASTERN BLUEBIRDS BACK

Toronto, April 2 — (CP)—Eastern Bluebirds, now arriving from the south, were called "Blue Robins" in old Upper Canada, records of Charles Fothergill, early Ontario naturalist show. Fothergill arrived in York — now Toronto— from England in 1817 and his records, in the Royal Ontario Museum, describe a "blue robin", recognizable as the Eastern Bluebird.

Today we Live in a Greater Canada

Not a dream of the future but a Present Fact!

TODAY Canadian manufacturing has reached record peacetime heights. It has gone far beyond anything attained in pre-war years. During the war we became the world's fourth industrial nation. Now, in peacetime production again, over 980,000 Canadians are employed in manufacturing—compared to 570,000 in mid-1939. And average pay has more than doubled!

CHARLES McNELLEN, in the years 1920 to 1924 was driving a truck for a Toronto electrotyping firm. During this time he studied the business and was appointed as salesman for the same company from the latter part of 1924 until April, 1931. His enthusiasm inspired other men who agreed to assist him in the founding of his own business. Today he is President of "Bomac"—one of the largest electrotyping and engraving companies in Canada.

MR. McNELLEN says, "Canada has been good to me. She will prove the same to those young Canadians who are ready to take advantage of the vastly increased opportunities she offers today. Here, within our own country, in every field of endeavour, successful careers await the talented and ambitious."

For years pulp and paper ranked as Canada's most important peacetime industry—judged by wages paid, production value and exports. It is greater than ever today—with a 48% increase in employment over 1939.

Spurred by war demands, Canada became the fourth steel producer of the United Nations and manufacture of iron and steel products became the industry employing most Canadians. Today there are more than twice as many of us engaged in this industry as before the war.

The textile industry is our other great manufacturing employer. It, too, tremendously increased its output to meet war needs. Today in it, too, far greater numbers of Canadians are employed than in 1939.

British Opinion Divided on Whether Nation Can Achieve Sound Economy

Britain's struggle for economic stability has been complicated by a winter fuel crisis. In this article, the last of a series written as the result of a tour of the Midlands, Stuart Underhill discusses prospects for the future.

By STUART UNDERHILL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Birmingham, Eng., April 3 — (CP)—Last year, in the first flush of reconversion, this country coined the proud slogan: "Britain Can Make It." Now critics of the government twist it into the sardonic question: "Can Britain Make It?"

They mean "make it" in the slang sense, of course. Can she overcome the countless difficulties that have piled up in her path, increased production, and struggle back to a sound economy?

British opinion ranges between two extremes. One is optimistic: The fuel crisis and accompanying power cutoff, which has left industry still disorganized, provided a healthy shock to workers and executives, who [illegible] will be more inclined to "put their backs into it."

The other is despondent. "We shall have to go to the United States for another loan in a year or two," said an official of a big pottery. "They'll say: 'All right, but you're obviously incapable of handling the money yourselves. We'll have to send our people to look after it.' We shall wind up by being part of the U. S."

Wants to Better Conditions.

The man-in-the-street probably feels somewhere in between, alert to the dangers of complacency, and anxious to do what he can to better conditions.

But even if the spirit of the country is sound, another difficulty remains. British manufacturing equipment is a curious hodge-podge of obsolete and ultra-modern. There are plenty of big, modern factories with up-to-date methods — and some old firms too have kept up with the times — but there also are many which are content to drone away at the slow, steady pace they've pursued for 50 years.

Machine tools are being produced in increasing quantities but most of them are swallowed by the gluttonous export market. There is a growing feeling, however, that the government will soon direct more to the home factories in order to increase general domestic output.

Manufacturers are eager for new methods and some for the first time in history are seriously studying market demands abroad. Costs remain prohibitively high, however, and it is unlikely that they will ever be able to compete with cheap, mass production methods.

Parliament Adjourns For Easter Holiday

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 3 (CP)—Parliament adjourned for the Easter holiday today, with Labor supporters saying the Attlee administration had survived its severest trial and Conservatives saying the government had been so badly shaken it would never fully recover.

The pressure of parliamentary business which made Labor's first session notable continued. Added to nationalization and other legislation hastened by Socialist planners were the fuel crisis, economic anxieties and foreign policy uncertainties.

The Speech from the Throne which opened the new session in November promised measures to nationalize inland transport—railways, long-distance road transport and docks—and the electricity industry. Both received second reading in the Commons in three months, although criticism came from new quarters, including some Liberals who had approved earlier government steps to nationalize the coal industy.

Barely pausing for breath, the administration produced the agriculture bill providing fixed prices and stabilized markets for farmers with authority to remove inefficient operators from the land.

This won substantial Conservative support for most clauses. But the opposition benches roared again over the far-reaching Town Planning Bill which establishes a development charge on new building and similar programs to improve the value of land. By this bill the future use of land can be controlled by the government or its agencies.

Receives Worst Shock

Five weeks after the coal mines were brought under the government-appointed National Coal Board, the Labor administration received its worst shock in 18 months of power when it was forced to announce a complete breakdown of electricity services was at hand, Britain's leading industries must be closed until coal could be built up at power stations and householders must cut off electrical appliances for five hours daily.

Bac-bench criticism was heard over government manpower policies. Reductions were urged in a defence program calling for 1,087,000 still to be in the forces in March 1948 down 340,000 from December 31, 1946.

Several members said they hoped for greater contributions to Imperial defence from the Commonwealth and Empire as Britain no longer could carry all the load alone.

Foreign Secretary Bevin's foreign policy had its critics, with the oppositon apprehensive about proposals to take British troops from Egypt, relations with Russia and defence safeguards when India's status changes.

The House of Lords carried a motion condemning the government's economic policy by 119 votes to 30. But as the vote did not involve legislation it was taken calmly by the government.

MEN

The properties of Commander Red Lake Mines Limited are located in that part of the Red Lake Area where the remarkable development of Campbell, Dickenson and Detta in the past year has attracted widespread attention. Under the same financial sponsorship and with field work under the direction of the same organization, the Commander properties, with strikingly similar geology and structure, afford an attractive opportunity for comparable development.

MONEY

In the course of the past year, $20,000.00 has been spent on preliminary development. Cash on hand and available is adequate to insure the completion of the development campaign projected for the new season. Options for the purchase of the Company's capital stock, when fully exercised, will provide the Company with additional capital of $470.000,00. There remains in the treasury, free of option, 1,399,995 shares.

METHOD

With the mapping of the South claim group now completed, Mr. G. L. Holbrboke, the Company's Consulting Geologist, recommends an intensive program of surface sampling and 15,000 feet of diamond drilling for the present season. The primary objective is the investigation of a strong shear zone, trending approximately east-west across the South claim group. Additional work will include the sub-surface exploration of the diorite contact in the northern part of the group. Contracts for diamond drilling have been arranged and all preliminary work is completed.

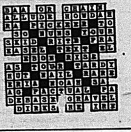
Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle



HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You break your neck getting to a slam. And what happens? Some silly lead by an opponent throws you for a loss right now. Next time you stop at game, and bingo. A lead lets you take all 13 tricks.

You have been reading here incidents in a deal during a mixed pair tournament. Here again are the cards:

NORTH
♠10
♥Q 5
♦K 10 9 6 5
♣Q 7 6 4 2

WEST
♠8 7 6 4 3
♥K J 3 2

♣K 9 5

EAST
♠Q J 5
♥A 10 9 4
♦J
♣A J 10 8 3

SOUTH
♠A K 9 2
♦A Q 8 7 4 3
♣None

My south partner opened with a diamond. My takeout to two clubs was forcing for one round. Partner then said two diamonds. If it is necessary or advisable, the four card spader will be shown next.

Over two diamonds came my jump to four in that suit. With what I had, we must try for a game in the sparklers. That I did not jump on the first round denies two sure tricks in my hand.

But if I have the heart ace, my partner considered, we may have a slam. So, she bid four no-trump; the ace and king teller-asker. My reply had to be five clubs; convention for showing no aces.

East stepped in right here and doubled five clubs. He knew it was a convention signal and that we would not remain in that suit. But it would signal his west partner to lead a club.

As expected, my partner went back to our agreed suit and bid five diamonds. When this got around to east, he doubled for penalty. My partner redoubled and west led a club as signalled by east.

With a heart lead, opponents could have held us to the 11 tricks for which we had contracted. With the club lead, south was able to take a clean sweep of tricks for a top.

The first trick was ruffed. A round of trumps was pulled. Two top spades came in, dummy flinging a heart. The south smallest spade was ruffed in dummy. This made good the spade nine. Getting back in with a trump, south led spade nine and dummy shed the heart queen.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

"The Late George Apley," with Ronald Colman in the starring role, has Boston so annoyed there must be considerable truth in the jibes it takes at the city, but they make wonderfully witty entertainment for the rest of the world.

Based on the best-selling novel by J. P. Marquand and the Pulitzer Prize play which grew out of it, it tells the story of a Beacon St., aristocrat whose family gets out of hand.

The Star's Doings

Winning an Academy Award makes any star the hottest thing in three counties and Fredric March is in that happy position. Right now he is reading the script of "The Dark Page" in his New York dressing room between acts of his Broadway hit, "Years Ago." The story is about a newspaper editor who murders his wife and puts his best reported on the story.

Bob Hope is scheduled to join the parade to the Far East in 'The Caliph of Bagdad' a fantasy with Oriental settings. Before that he will make "Paleface" and "Clown of Fortune."

Eugene Ormandy, conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra and the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, will appear in "Counterpoint," formerly called "Memory of Love."

AT THE BELLE — Annabella is currently seen in the leading feminine role in "13 Rue Madeleine," the new 20th. Century-Fox adventure hit starring Jas. Cagney at the Belle tonight and Friday.

ALL OFF — SPLASH!

Regina — (CP) — Rapid melting, which left many "lakes" on Regina streets, prompted one bus driver to an unexpected transfer-point call. As he neared downtown Regina he solemnly called, "Broadstreet and Lake of the Woods."

COUSIN TO MANGEL

The sugar beet belongs to the same family as the garden beet and the mangel-wurzel.

AT THE CAPITOL — Wild Bill Elliott, who stars in Republic's "Sheriff of Redwood Valley," opening tonight at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program the technicolor western, "Smoky," starring Fred MacMurray and Ann Baxter. Matinee starts on Good Friday at 2.15 p.m.

J.P. FITZGERALD, SPORTS EDITOR, TELEGRAM, DIES

Forced to Give Up Wish to be Priest and Seek Outside Employment

Toronto, April 3 (CP)—James P. Fitzgerald, 72, for the past 47 years on the staff of the Toronto Telegram and dean of Canadian sport writers died suddenly last night at his home in nearby Oakville.

"The Boss," as he was affectionately known to his admiring sport staff, came to work yesterday morning in apparently good health. He wrote his column early in the day as was his custom as sports editor and he returned to Oakville at the noon hour.

After lunch and his usual nap, Mr. Fitzgerald complained of a sore throat. Later he said he felt worse and in the evening he collapsed and died.

Of Irish descent, he graduated from St. Michael's College and the University of Toronto. His heart was set toward the work of his church and he decided to train for the priesthood, but ill health robbed him of his greatest wish. He was forced to give up his studies and sought outside employment.

His first taste of the work that was to provide him with a life-long vocation was gained on the old Toronto News. He worked under the tutelage of W. A. Hewitt, present Secretary of the O.H.A. A year later he left the News and became the first sports editor on the Telegram.

The love for baseball he harbored during his school years never abated and it remained his favorite sport throughout his life. He was offered a professional contract as a catcher when he graduated from university but declined it. But his interest was the game and for a number of years he was official scorer of the International League in Toronto.

He was Secretary of the Ontario Athletic Commission from its inception in 1920 until he resigned in 1941 and he aided materially in the founding of the O.A.C. Athletic Camp at Lake Couchiching.

Awarded Military Cross

At the outbreak of war in 1914, "J.P.", as he was known to his friends, was married, the father of three children. But he would not remain out of uniform and went overseas in spite of the fact he was over 40. When all men above 40 were ordered home, he led the protests and the order was rescinded, but the group were forced to resign their commissions. Later he was recommissioned in the field and returned to Canada with the rank of Major, and the possessor of the Military Cross.

Mr. Fitzgerald is survived by a son, Maurice, a daughter, Helen, and four grandchildren. His wife died in 1936.

QUACKENBUSH WRENCHES KNEE, OUT FOR SERIES

Detroit Red Wings Will be Weakened Against Toronto Maple Leafs

Detroit, April 3 — (CP)—Indefinite loss of defenceman Bill Quackenbush with a wrenched knee heightened the gloom in the Detroit Red Wings' camp today as they awaited the fourth game of their Stanley Cup playoff with Toronto Maple Leafs.

Down two games to one in the best-of-seven set the Red Wings went into tonight's game needing to take three out of the possible four remaining games to reach the finals.

Loss of Quackenbush, hurt in a collision with Toronto's Gus Mortson during the Leafs' 4-1 victory here Tuesday, forced manager Jack Adams to juggle still more a Detroit lineup that already has rookie Ralph Almas filling in for the injured Harry Lumley in goal and forward Jimmy McFadden, hastily recruited from Buffalo, in place of Jerry Couture.

Toronto's Howie Meeker, fast little right winger, also came out of Tuesday's rough game with a twisted knee but was expected to be ready for tonight's scrap.

The Maple Leafs haven't lost in seven games on Detroit ice this year. If the string holds up tonight the Leafs will be a shoo-in to close out the Red Wings Saturday at Toronto and qualify for the finals.

CANADIENS WILL BE CRIPPLED AGAINST BRUINS

Kenny Mosdell With Broken Arm and Reardon With Cut Toe Will Not Dress

Montreal, April 3 — (CP) — Dick Irvin's injury-riddled Montreal Canadiens seeking their second straight Stanley Cup title, have high hopes of winding up their best-of-seven series with Boston Bruins tonight in the fifth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final.

Leading 3-1 in games the Canucks, with two crippled players—one out for the balance of the season and the other unlikely to play again in this series — will have a re-organized club on the ice tonight. Kenny Mosdell with a broken arm, suffered Tuesday at Boston, and Kenny Reardon with a cut tendon in his big toe, will be definitely sidelined.

The Bruins also are feeling the effects of the rugged play. It was reported from Boston that three of the Bruins would be unable to take the ice tonight. They are defenceman Johnny Crawford, and Murray Henderson and forward Don Gallinger.

Manager Art Ross of the Bruins has called up Pete Lund, a forward from the Boston Olympics of the Eastern United States Hockey League. Lund will likely replace Gallinger.

Canadiens will dress five rearguards, Frankie Eddolls, Glen Harmon, Butch Bouchard, Leo Lamoureux and Roger Leger.

Ross has not said whether he plans to use Milt Schmidt on the Boston defence again. In the third game at Boston Saturday when Schmidt was moved back he surprised Canucks by sparking Boston's only victory of the series by sniping two goals.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Standing on the threshold of what is expected to be the greatest year in its history, the Ontario Amateur Softball Association, will hold its 25th Annual Meeting in the Welland House Hotel, St. Catharines, Ont., on Friday—(tomorrow). General sessions will be held in the morning and afternoon, while the final meeting of the 1946 executive is slated for tonight.

• • •

The greatest number of delegates in history from all parts of the province, will be in attendance. Official delegates from the Belleville Softball Association are Vice President Harold Bawden, Executive member G. H. Carver, and Frank Sedore. Secretary Harry Knott and Executive member Harry Rollins will also be present at the convention, as will representative members of the Point Anne Softball Association.

• • •

One of the more important features on the agenda is the election of officers and this item should see a stern battle among aspirants to the office. Nominated for the prexy's chair for 1947 are O. H. King, Simcoe; E. A. Simpson, Kingston; J. R. Brush, Sarnia, and W. C. Thrasher, Hamilton. Popular secretary Frank Feaver, Hamilton, has the sole nomination for that post as has Treasurer W. L. Alguire, St. Catharines, for the job of keeper of the Royal purse.

• • •

Forty-four proposed amendments to the constitution, bylaws and playing rules will be brought before the meeting and many wrinkles will doubtless be ironed out.

• • •

Reports of the secretary and treasurer for the 1946 season reveal that last year was the most successful in the history of the Association. Tremendous interest was displayed in the game throughout the province which is substantiated in the fact that affiliations increased 27 per cent.

• • •

The game is spreading in all directions according to official reports. Through the affiliates of the Amateur Softball Association of America, softball is being introduced throughout South America and Cuba. Quebec has had a set of bilingual OASA rules printed and overseas, The Netherlands Government has set up softball leagues throughout the country and has translated and published OASA rules with the permission of that association.

• • •

A select galaxy of leather-pushers are scheduled to appear in what looks to be the best boxing card ever presented city and district fans at the Trenton Air Station on Wednesday, April 9. The boys, practically all of them topflight in their own and other districts hail from Toronto, Oshawa, Trenton, Brockville, Belleville and Trenton Air Station.

Headlining the card which fairly sparkles with slug-bug talent is classy Bill Goulding who is matched with Johnny Page (pronounced Pagay), of Ottawa who is said to be one of Bytown's hardest hitters. Goulding is well known in these parts and the bout should be well worth watching.

• • •

Then there is Eddie Senos, sensational Trenton Flyer fighter who tangles with Glen Dafoe, well-known in these parts. A Belleville favorite, highly regarded in out-of-town fistic circles is George Polmanter who meets Johnny Keeler, of Oshawa in one of the four five round bouts.

Here's the dashing Nicky O'Neil, a tough Irisher who will be seen in action in the fine boxing card at the Trenton Air Station on Wednesday next. The card in attracting a lot of attention and some of the best boys in the province will be slinging leather willy-nilly during the evening.

On the whole the card fairly reeks with punching class and the fistic faithful are due for a splendid evening's entertainment as Sarge Kelly and his airmen cohorts are leaving no stones unturned to make the show a success. The cream of the Ontario pugilists will be there — and don't miss the show. It is being held in the station Sports Hangar and the first gong tinkles at 8:15. By the way, Sergeant Hub Smith, himself a leather-pusher of no mean ability — a guy who knows all the rules and plenty of boxing questions and answers, is the referee. More about the show later.

SOCCER MEETING TONIGHT

Note to Mr. Finlay—Optical: Due to the fact that we had to leave for St. Catharines, Ont., this afternoon, this writer will not be able to attend the soccer-football meeting tonight. However we understand there will be a good turnout — and soccer players and fans are advised to meet Mr. Finlay at the YMCA tonight at eight o'clock. And good luck boys. Get organized—and get playing.

$50,000 Voted To Keep Huskies In the League

(By The Canadian Press)

Financial backers of the Toronto Huskies entry in the Basketball Association of America have voted $50,000 to put the team back into competition next season. The club itself has not said whether it will play but an announcement is expected sometime after April 11, when Maurice Podoloff, B.A.A. President, visits Toronto.

Lew Hayman, manager of the team, told backers that he would not resume the post next season.

A spokesman for Republic pictures said yesterday that an agreement had been reached with Babe Ruth to film the life story of baseball's home run king. Counsel for the studio and the Bambino were said to be drawing up formal documents on the agreement.

Montreal's Young Men's Hebrew Association marked up a 57-50 victory over the University of Ottawa in the first of a two-game total point Canadian Senior Basketball playoff series last night.

Return match will be played in Montreal Wednesday.

Golfing odds against one hole-in-one following another are computed at an astronomically high figure but it happened yesterday at a Petersburg, Va., golf course. The odds were beaten by H. L. Miller and Dr. E. P. Hodges playing in a threesome. They both cupped the 130-yard pitch with the same eight iron.

Rinks from Ottawa, Montreal, Quebec and some United States points have been invited by the city of Toronto to enter a two-day goodwill bonspiel Friday. Some 84 curlers are expected to compete for the goodwill shield to be presented.

Edmonton, April 3 — (CP) — To most Canadian golfers, the sun-drenched greens and fairways of the south are but a dream during the winter months.

But, says Bert (Edmonton Bulletin) Greer, two Edmonton professionals, Pete and Alex Olynik, have pretty well solved the problem for the city's enthusiasts. They have operated a golf school here for the last two years.

"To say that the school is popular would be putting it mildly," says Greer. "A huge bucket containing several hundred coverless balls is mute evidence of the amount of club-swinging that has been going on in the last three months. The school opened Jan. 2 and will close April 5."

The brothers Olynyk — Pete is the Mayfair Club's pro and Alex the pro at Highlands — have used psychology in laying out their school. There are six driving lanes, and all are open. The purpose, says Pete, is to cure players who feel inferior.

"They must do their swinging in full view of everyone, and when they step onto the first tee in the spring they should have fewer butterflies in their tummies," is the way he puts it.

Roughly 300 players have attended the school. They've used up about 1,400 old golf balls, which Pete Olynyk is considering sending back to the factory for new jackets.

The school, now set up in a store basement, is picturesque. Paintings of mountain scenes and golf courses line its sides.

HOLLINGER WINS SECOND GAME OF O.H.A. FINALS

Defeats Hamilton Tigers 4 to 3 in Overtime and Always Ahead

Hamilton, April 3 — (CP)—The Hollinger Greenshirts outplayed the old Hamilton Tigers all the way last night to win by 4-3 in overtime and with the next two games scheduled at Schumacher it looked as though the Tigers had better pull up their socks if they wish to continue in the Allan Cup trail.

Tigers, eastern senior champions of last year, blanked Hollinger 3-0 in the first game. They were always behind in the second. It's a best-of-five series, and the third game is at Schumacher Friday and the fourth also at Schumacher Saturday. The fifth has been scheduled for Hamilton next Monday.

The Greenshirts, champions of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, got the jump on the Ontario Hockey Association senior titlists at the start of last night's battle, and they stayed ahead. Three times Tigers fought back to even the count, but Tigers could not come back after Tony Talentino fired the game-winning goal after two and a half minutes of the overtime period.

That was Talentino's second goal of the night. The other Hollinger goals were scored by Cecchini and Theriault.

Tigers' goal-getters were Runions, Miocinovich and Shillington.

Hollinger scored the only goal of the first period. The teams were tied 2-2 after the second and 3-3 after the third.

The game was about as rough as the first meeting of the two senior teams but only 11 penalties were handed out and all were minors. In the heavy going referee Ken Holmeshaw stopped a hot shot from Tigers' John Conick with his stomach, while Wes Brownlee, the Hollinger goalie, was given first aid treatment after being struck in the mouth on a close-in shot from Shillington.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 3 —(CP)—Johnny Neun, currently steering a Cincinnati Reds baseball team which Arthur (N. Y. Times) Daley drily comments is "no red menace," is the last man to have completed an unassisted triple play in the major leagues . . . It happened May 31, 1927, and it took some shrewd thinking on Johnny's part . . . Neun was playing first base for Detroit, which led Cleveland 1-0 in the ninth with Doc Jamieson of the Indians on first and Glenn Hyatt on second . . . Homer Summa, the man at the plate, exploded a line drive toward right-field . . . Neun speared it and tagged Jamieson without a waste motion, while Myatt, believing the ball hit safely, sprinted blithely for third . . . "Throw the ball, Johnny," shouted second-baseman Jackie Taverner, glove outstretched . . . "Not me," replied Neun. "I'm running right into the Hall of Fame." And he did, running to second base for the third out.

Controversial Cerdan.

Nothing much on the New York sport pages these days except the three Bs — baseball, basketball and boxing — with horse racing moving up fast on the outside . . . Fight fans still can't decide whether Marcel Cerdan, the European middleweight champion, is phenomenally good or whether his two-round knockout triumph last Friday over Brooklyn's Harold Green was tainted . . .

Paddock Patter.

Hear about jockey Ralph Neves? Maine Chance Farm offered him the mount on Jet Pilot in the Kentucky Derby, but Neves said no, he didn't want to leave his daily gin rummy game with Joe Cohe, assistant manager of Tanforan Track in San Bruno, Ca[illegible] . . . So Main Chance offered to pay Cohen's expenses east as a rummy companion if Neves would sign .

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 7

Should she read? New books had come in her absence. Should she telephone Heretofore she had always longed for a free afternoon, but then everything had centered around Bill. Everything had been a graceful sentinel reminding her of hours to spare or hours to hurry before Bill came or went. The schedule of living had revolved about him.

Now there was no schedule. Now there was no planned time to rise or eat or go to bed. Now all her time was hers. But though her inner life had fallen into complete disorder, she knew that she must maintain a rigid outer order in her appearance, in her home and in her relationship with other people. Bill's tidiness and his punctuality would be carried on even in a life without him.

Going to the Sheraton coffee table, she took a cigarette and lighted it, thinking, "These first weeks will be the worst. And these first nights.. When the lights are out, I feel as if I'm sleeping with a ghost."

Bill was a bridegroom again. It would have been funny if it hadn't hurt so much, Bill, thirty, was too old to be a bridegroom. Honeymoons were for boys and girls, intensely in love, planning an interwined life. Carol thought "Evelyn is Mrs. Sturtevant now. She is the real Mrs. Sturtevant. I'm only allowed to go on using his name."

She had had a letter from her father and as she read it she had seen a thin, nervous, greying man. By his letter she knew that time had softened him and that ten years ago his letter would have been explosive. Now it was filled with platitudes and an invitation to Florida. But no doubt on a patio shaded by palms the problem of a daughter to whom he had never been close seemed very remote indeed. Carol was glad that he had at last found his niche.

She had called on Bill's mother, a stout, motherly little woman, and had sat in the crowded living-room of the big frame house in the unfashionable section of town, hearing Mrs. Sturtevant's weeping, hearing her say, "I still don't want this to make any difference between us, Carol. I've always loved you as my own daughter and I want you to come to see me.

"It put me in bed, what happened. I don't know what came over Bill. I just don't understand it. You raise children and try to teach them the right things and send them to church and then they do things you just can't understand. Everybody thought you were so happy."

Carol did not tell Bill's mother that you could also live with a man for several years, and then not understand him.. Perhaps one of the greatest mistakes you ever make is in trying to understand other people...Mrs. Sturtevant did not say whether Bill and Evelyn had been to see her.

Carol answered it in her bedroom.

It was Scott's deep, slow, amiable voice that said, "Hi, Carol. How are you?"

She had said it so often! "I'm perfectly fine. How are you?"

"Never better. How's about you and I going out to the club tonight? If Freda and Ian are going, we could make it a foursome for dinner. I'll call them. "And when she hesitated he said, "Oh, come on. Please."

She had dreaded the club, scene of many happy hours with Bill. And what if Bill and Evelyn were there? But he wouldn't! Why wouldn't he? That would be terrible, seeing him, seeing their lives divided....No she couldn't. That was too much. But how could she avoid them indefinitely?

She said, "All right, Scott."

"Good girl. I'll pick you up a little before eight. In the meantime I'll call Freda and fix it up with them. Just get back in town today. That's why you haven't heard from me sooner. Well, see you later."

When Carol put down the phone, she thought, "How can Scott be Bill's friend and mine, too, now?" For Scott, a dark-haired young man of medium height, a bachelor who shared an apartment with a devoted older sister, was really more Bill's friend than hers. They had grown up in the same neighborhood and though Scott had by no means attained Bill's success in business he managed, nevertheless, to move in Clinton's best circles. In Carol and Bill's home he had been as a member of the family, coming and going at odd hours, spending the night and raiding their refrigerator and liquor closet.

Carol had often thought that though Scott had by no means easy-going and quiet; actually he lived strictly according to plan and bothered only with people who could be of use to him. Also it had occurred to her than even Scott's best friends accepted him at face value, never suspecting that Scott did not permit them to scratch the surface of him and to know his innermost thoughts and ideas. Not that they were base or vicious thoughts or ideas, but ideas in which Scott always put Scott first.

She thought now, "And after tonight everyone will take it for granted that eventually I'll marry Scott. He's been in my home often, and even Freda had said that he was half in love with me. I never believed that. What I felt was that Scott envied Bill and me.. I wonder if for every divorced woman there is always her husband's friend. Perhaps he is the first man she has to cope with in her new status."

The Clinton County Club was five miles from the city and boasted an excellent eighteen-hole golf course, several tennis courts and a large swimming pool. The clubhouse was a low white building with a centre hall which divided the dining-room from the ball room and with a veranda which encircled the entire building.

At 8.30 that evening the dancing had not yet begun, but the dingg-room was crowded.

Carol, wearing a green sheath of a dress, sat with Freda, wearing black net, and with Scott and Ian. There were shadows of weariness beneath Scott's large, deep, dark eyes. His hair was smooth and dark, his mouth large, his rare but hearty laugh infectious. It was as though Scott had a secret and people liked him perhaps because they were always hoping that he would tell them his secret and because he could be counted upon always to be good-looking and agreeable.

Ian, a tall lean man with a greying head, scholary features and sharp brown eyes, was passive, distinguished and humorous.

Everywhere about her Carol saw familiar faces—Dee and John Downs, Lillian and Browne Williams, Claire and Henry Porter—many others. Lillian and Browne had come over and spoken to her. The others had nodded and smiled in the old familiar way.

She was glad she had come, she felt at home and almost happy again. George, the water, had said, "I'm so glad to see you back, Mrs. Sturtevant." Monsieur Corot, the hand-kissing dancing instructor to whom all well-brought up Clinton children were sent for dancing lessons, had paused at the table to say, "May I dance with you later, Madame? I shall have them play a rhumba just for us."

Yes, it was the same as it had always been since Bill belonged. She remembered how excited and proud they had been the night they had come to their first dance as members. Parking the car Bill had asked, "Do I look all right, Carol?" And she had said, "You look perfect. How do I look?" And Bill had said, "You look beautiful. I guess we've—we've made the grade, sweetheart." Little things like that, known only to you two, shared by no one else because you trusted no one else to know your fears and uncertainties—and because you trusted each other so implicitly.

"You see, I do know your country club women," Clive Holdridge had said. To think of that challenging, masculine face was to be shaken instantly out of apathy. A man to stir the imagination and senses, but also one to make you apply brakes to your heart.

Scott said in his grave voice, "You haven't played any golf yet, have you, Ian?"

"Not yet," Ian said, lifting his liqueur glass. "Ground is too soft and they haven't whipped the greens into shape. Won't be long though. It's April..."

Freda smiled fondly at him. "Don't remind me. April to me, instead of being synonymous with birds feathering their nests, reminds me that a fifteen-room house has to be turned inside out with cleaning, that young Ian has to go to the dentist and that Aunt Minnie makes her annual visit."

Ian said, "You should hear that boy of ours read. It's amazing how quickly they learn these days. The new system of teaching seems crazy, but it works."

Carol said, "I learned with lentils. Every child went to school with a little bag of lentils and we formed the words on the desk with the lentils."

"I still don't know how I learned," Freda said. "And I'm still a mathematical idiot."

Scott inclined his hand toward Carol and smiled. "How's your rhumba? The orchestra is tuning up in there."

"I danced with a South American in Cuba. He danced beautifully."

"Don't go making any comparisons."

"And of course, Ian will dance every dance with me," Freda said. "In the bar and out again." She touched his hand and smiled at him. "That's all right, darling. I'll stick right with you."

But all at once something happened to Freda. When Carol turned to speak to her she saw that Freda's face was as if frozen and her large eyes glassy in their stare. At the same moment someone brushed by Carol's chair. Though she did not turn, she knew...It was Bill!

Scott and Ian saw him. They looked up, made a pretense at smiling, colored a little and looked at Carol who now felt frozen, too.

"It's Bill, isn't it?" she asked. If she turned her head, she would see him.

Freda said, "Yes. Bill and — and Evelyn. Don't look now, Carol. Everyone is looking."

FILM TRAVELS WORLD

Burnaby, B. C. — (CP)—Education methods, teachers and students in Burnaby schools, depicted in the film "Investment in Use," produced by Ken West, will be seen by movie audiences throughout the world.

Do your children ever have THE GLUMPS*?

And when the kiddies act that way, you can be certain there's something wrong. Often, what they need to make them chipper and gay is a good reliable tonic ... Mulveney's Mother's Friend. Mother's Friend is a milder, gentler laxative made especially for children. Give them Mother's Friend to help them keep regular ... and cheerful.

Shhh ... Mother's Friend is also ideal in helping to eliminate worms.

Adults get the glumps sometimes too. When you feel that way, tired and dismal, try Mulveney's B'Well. It may be just the thing to help pep you up ... help you feel on top of the world.

Ask for the tonics you know ... Mulveney's B'Well, and Mother's Friend ... at your druggist's. Do it today!

13 Floating Stations Collect Weather Data To Guard Ocean Travel

London, April 3. (Reuters)—Safer travel for airlines traversing North Atlantic and Scandinavian routes will result from establishment of 13 floating weather stations which will operate in the Atlantic after July 1.

These stations will collect information about weather tendencies and wind velocities and radio it to London for compilation into meteorological bulletins to be made available to all countries.

The United States will provide eight of the floating stations, Britain two—sharing maintenance of a third with Norway and Sweden—France one, and Holland and Belgium one between them. Provision of these vessels was laid down in the international agreement drawn up by the provisional international civil air organization which was signed last September.

When on station the vessels will be anchored 350 miles west of the Irish coast and 400 miles west of the Faroe Islands.

Supplementing the normal complement of the corvettes will be the meteorological staff of 12 officers and 42 ratings skilled in Radar and other navigational aids.

TENDERS

Tenders addressed to the undersigned and marked tender will be received until Thursday, April 24th, 1947, for the laying of a sanitary sewer with private drain connections on Wellington and adjoining streets.

Plans and specifications may be obtained at the City Engineer's office.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

Hindenburg's Will Was Burned By Hitler

By B. R. YOUNG

New York, April 3 (AP)—Baron F. G. von Tschirschky, who said he helped draft the political will of Germany's late president von Hindenburg, said Adolf Hitler destroyed the document so he could become chief of the German state and lead his Nazi Party into power.

The Silesian-born aristocrat attached to the German vice-chancellory and a confidante of von Hindenburg, said in an interview that the elderly field marshal urged the German people in his will to restore the Hohenzollern monarchy after his death in August, 1934, and, by implication, expressed his "complete scorn" for the Nazi leader.

Von Tschirschky, who fled to Britain late in 1934 to escape punishment for his anti-nazi activities, came here from London this week. He said this was the first time the complete story of the von Hindenburg will had been told publicly.

Monarchy Restored?

Hitler, he predicted, never would have come into power had the full wishes of von Hindenburg been made known to the German people.

"They loved and respected him" he said. "The army, which was a powerful German force, would have followed the guidance of the field marshal and the monarchy unquestionably would have been restored."

Von Hindenburg's last charges to his people were contained in two documents, "a last will," and "a testament."

The testament recited the history of the field marshal's admiration. His political will "contained very clear stipulations" of what course von Hindenburg wanted the German people to follow after his death, the baron said.

"He had declared in it that it was his wish that the army should always be independent of politics and party influence that he, the President, had considered himself as regent for the monarchy, as he felt that the German people were only suited to be governed by a constitutional democratic monarchy.

"He furher outlined in his last will and in quite definite terms, that he wanted to see the rights of parliament established under a two-chamber system on democratic lines comparable with the parliamentary system of Great Britain; and lastly, that all racial and religious discrimination be done away with."

The tall, greying baron said he was present when von Hindenburg's last will and testament were delivered to Hitler as chancellor.

"Hitler declared he would be prepared to publish the so-called testament, but not the document containing the last will of the President."

Two extra drafts of the will were made, the baron said, adding he kept one and Vice-Chancellor Franz von Papen was given the other. The document given to von Papen subsequently was secreted in Switzerland, but Nazi agents, von Tschirschky said, discovered its hiding place in 1938.

He said he destroyed his own draft when the Gestapo began trailing him and "several attempts were made on his life."

If von Hindenburg's wishes had been published at the time of his death, the war never would have occurred, the baron asserted.

"The German people would have come to some kind of unity, the parliamentary system would have been restored and Hitler would have gone along with it. He always went along with the strongest battalions."

Rudolf Hoess To Pay With Life For War Crimes

Warsaw, April 3 —(AP)—Rudolf Hoess must pay with his own life for more than 4,000,000 lives snuffed out at Oswiccim (Auschwitz) extermination camp in the 2½ years he was Nazi commandant there.

The 47-year-old ex-colonel, on trial for three weeks, was sentenced to death last night by the nine-judge Polish Supreme National Tribunal. No date was set for the execution.

The prosecution accused Hoess of supervising the gassing and cremation of some 3,000,000 Jews and 1,000,000 other men, women and children from a dozen countries — including Poland, Russia, Hungary, France, Belgium, The Netherlands and Czechoslovakia —at the camp in southwestern Poland.

Hoess, commandant at Oswelcim from mid-1941 to the end of 1943, questioned this figure. He said he could count only 2,500,000 victims. He tok responsibility for carying out the exterminations, but blamed superiors for institution of the policy.

Hoes, who has a wife and five children in Germany, told the tribunal once that he would have thrown them all into the Oswelcim furnaces had he ben ordered to do so. British authorities who questioned Mrs. Hoess at Hamburg in December, 1945, said they found her house full of clothes and jewelry taken from executed Jews.

Higher Coal Prices In Ontario Foreseen By Former Official

G.W. Craig, Toronto, Expects Anthracite Will Rise to $18

Toronto, April 5 (CP)— G.W. Craig of Toronto Friday night announced his retirement as manager of Toronto Coal Exchange, a position he held three years, and in a statement predicted that the average price of anthracite in Ontario soon would advance to $18 a ton from the present $14.75.

He charged that short weight coal deliveries are much too common" in Toronto and that some United States coal sold here is nearly 30 per cent ash.

The price advance would result from withdrawal of Canadian government subsidies or bonuses on United States anthracite and the removal on April 15 of coal controls, he said.

Howard W. White, president of the Toronto Coal Exchange and local manager of the Century Coal Company, said later that Mr. Craig's duties as coal exchange manager were ending because the coal exchange was "folding up." Mr. White said the organization was set up under federal wartime coal controls, and with the lifting of controls it was no longer needed.

He took issue with Mr. Craig's production of $18-a-ton coal but said he thought the price might go to $17 or $17.25. He also said the ash content of United States coal sold here would not exceed 15 per cent.

Mr. Craig said he planned to set up an Ontario-wide association to be known as the Alberta Hard Coals Association, Ltd., "to aid in developing high-grade Canadian hard coal for the people of Toronto and Ontario."

Govt. Redoubles Efforts to Beat Strike Deadline

Washington, April, 5 (AP) — The United States goverment redoubled its efforts to beat the deadline for a coast-to-coast telephone strike Monday by meditating the dispute without seizure of the industry.

Conciliation director Edgar L. Warren and John W. Gibson, Assistant Secretary to Labor, still hoped to duplicate their feat of last year when they brought off a settlement just 25 minutes before a country-wide walkout of telephone workers was due to begin.

The contract negotiations between the Independent National Federation of Telephone Workers and the Bell System involve directly 287,000 members of 39 unions. But the N.F.T.W. expects possibly 340,000 workers to go out if the strike develops as scheduled at 6 A. M., in each time zone Monday.

Government conciliators here stepped up their talks involving two of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's biggest and most important units. These are the long lines division, which handles the long distance operations of the Bell System and the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

The telephone lines will be taken over only after the strike begins—if it does—and then only if that seems the way to bring order to the situation, this official asserted.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 5 (CP)—Synopsis: The warmest weather of the year is occurring in the lower Mississippi Valley where temperatures have remained ..above 70 throughout the night. Streaming northward this warm air is interacting with cooler air in the Great Lakes region and causing rain over an extensive area. A storm centre is moving northeastward across Missouri and will probably cross Southern Ontario early Sunday. The passage of the storm centre is accompanied by strong shifting winds which may develop into gales. Cooler weather now prevailing over the western part of the continent is expected to move in behind the storm centre.

Signal Saves Baby-Sitter and Two Children

Windsor, Ont., April 5 (CP) —The presence of mind of an 11-year-old "baby-sitter" was credited today with bringing rescue to herself and two younger children as they were overcome by coal gas fumes in a house on west-side McKay Avenue.

The "sitter," Doris Fields, followed her father's instructions by turning on a porch light at the home of Clarence Hopkins, where she was caring for Hopkins' children, Lois, six, and Jack, eight. The light was a pre-arranged "trouble" signal.

The older girl's father, Herbert Fields, said he noticed the light on shortly, before midnight last night. He crossed the street but was unable to get in the front door or to arouse the children. He forced a bedroom window and found the three youngsters overcome.

A fire department rescue squad revived them and the children were taken to hospital. Attendants said today the condition of all three is good.

Three Charged With Murder Given 30 Years

Rome, April 5 (Reuters) — Amerigo Dumini, Amleto Poveromo and Albino Viola, three of eight men charged with the murder in 1924 of Italian Socialist Giacomo Matteotti, yesterday were sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment apiece.

Cesare Rossia and Francesco Giunta were acquitted for lack of evidence, but Giunta will not be released as other charges are pending against him.

Acquitted under amnesty were Filippo Filippelli and Filipo Panzeri. The eighth accused, Augusto Malarcria, is believed dead. No sentence was passed on him.

Matteotti, leader of the Italian Socialist party, was kidnapped from his house in Rome June 10, 1924 and his mutilated body was found two days later. His last speech in parliament was a denouncement of Fascist terrorism and electoral frauds.

KILLED BY CAR

Guelph, April 5 — (CP) —William Carey, 63, of R. R. 5, Guelph, was killed late Thursday night on the highway north of here when struck by a truck police said was driven by Walter Park, of Mount Forest. Park will appear here Saturday on charges of dangerous and careless driving laid yesterday by Provincial Police.

10 British Seamen Survive Wreck Another Ship on SOS Call Unreported

Paris, April 5 (Reuters) — There was still no news today of the French ship Polynie which left the port of Concarneau, Brittany, in yesterday's storm to answer an S.O.S. appeal. The sea has now become calm along the French Atlantic coast.

The ship she went to rescue managed to limp into Concarneau unaided and without loss of life.

Ten survivors from the crew of the 1,777-ton British steamship Willodale, which sank in the Bay of Biscay with the known loss of six men and six more missing, were receiving treatment in hospital at La Rochelle.

From their beds they described their ship's desperate 5½-hour struggle for life before daylight yesterday. Despite their efforts, water flooding in through a leak in the hold burst into the engine room. The ship was listing badly, and the captain gave orders to abandon her.

Shortly afterwards she sank and the crew were thrown into the water amid some of her cargo of pit props. The survivors were picked up by a French pilot ship.

Six bodies were recovered and taken to La Pallice. Six others of the crew, including the master, Capt. O. Hill, of Swansea, Wales, are missing.

Southampton, England, April 5 (Reuters)—The 20,017-ton Dutch motorship Oranje, one of whose crew was killed and three were swept overboard during a storm in the Bay of Biscay, arrived here early today.

The body of the fourth mate who died after being dashed to the deck by waves was on board the liner.

Reported missing from the ship were a stewardess, a steward and a nurse.

FIVE U.S. MARINES KILLED BY ARMED CHINESE IN BATTLE

Heavily-Armed Convoy Prepares to Pursue Bandits Who Attack Ammunition Dump

Peiping, April 5 —(AP)—Five United States Marines were killed and 16 wounded by armed Chinese — reputedly Communists — in a four-hour battle near Tangku today.

Even as the attackers faded into the darkness from which they had struck at a Marine ammunition dump, a heavily-armed Marine convoy was made ready at Tientsin, 25 miles to the west, to set out in pursuit.

Stung by the biggest casualty toll in a long series of clashes with North China irregulars, Col. Julian N. Frisbie, Marine commander at Peiping, was flying to Tientsin to take personal command.

The reports of the fighting were fragmentary, saying that one Marine tank was disabled by a land mine, and that several explosions of stored ammunition rocked the dump.

The size of the attacking forces could not be ascertained.

Marine fighter planes were called out but the Chinese had vanished before the airmen could get into action.

This same dump was raided last Oct. 3 by an estimated 200 who wounded a Marine slightly but left several of their own dead behind. They succeeded in carrying off some ammunition.

Premier Takes Ride in New Helicopter

Toronto, April 5 — (CP) — To the "ohs" and "ahs" of hundreds of spectators, Premier Drew Thursday took part in a demonstration of the use of helicopters in forest fire fighting.

As the aircraft hovered above a large bush fire specially built at the front of the Queen's Park buildings, the premier carefully took aim with chemical bombs and scored three direct hits on the fire — but the fire was stubborn and Rangers of the Lands and Forests Department finished it off with pump extinguishers.

Two helicopters took part in the demonstration and their antics brought comments of "amazing," "incredible," "remarkable," from members of the Legislature who braved the winds set up by the rotor blades as the planes landed and took off.

The Lands and Forests Department has leased one helicopter for use in Northern Ontario this summer to complete experiments in fire fighting. It is planned that if the experiment is successful, the department will purchase several and eventually have a fleet located at all vital spots in the north country.

ANXIOUSLY WATCH WATER

Wallaceburg, Ont., April 5 — (CP) — Residents of the district surrounding this Kent county town today anxiously watched rising flood water of the Sydenham River as they approached the level of a retaining wall while a heavy rain fell in the area.

Tass Report U.S.A. Promoting Cardinal Spellman As Papal Secretary Called 'Unfounded'

London, April 5 —(AP)— Tass, the Soviet News Agency, said today the "U.S.A. . . . is seeking to promote" the appointment of Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, as Vatican Secretary of State.

The story did not make clear whether it referred to the United States government or United States Catholics. Before making the statement, however, Tass said the Vatican was economically dependent upon "America" because, it asserted, 80 per cent of its income came from the United States and Canada.

"Notwithstanding its economic dependence on America, the Vatican has continued so far to oppose the appointment of the American Cardinal Spellman to the post of Vatican state secretary fearing lest this appointment would still further increase the dependence of the Vatican on the U.S.A., which is seeking to promote this appointment," the report said.

The Tass story was written from Vienna and quoted "reports reaching here from Rome." It said "the Vatican is experiencing serious economic difficulties."

"Only 20 per cent of its income," is said "comes from Italy, France, Spain and other countries."

Vatican City, April 5 (AP) — Vatican sources declared "unfounded" today a Tass report that pressure was being exerted on the Holy See for the appointment of Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, as papal secretary of state.

Therefore, said these sources, "it was not true that the Holy See was resisting U.S. attempts to promote the appointment of Cardinal Spellman as reported by Tass."

These sources, close to the state secretariat at the Vatican, said the Tass report "on its face value was without foundation."

Since the death of Luigi Cardinal Maglione, secretary of state, in August, 1944, there has been speculation upon the appointment of his successor "and sometimes", said the Vatican sources, "also Tass speculates."

These sources added that only Pope Pius "could have anything to say about the appointment of his secretary of state," adding that the Pontiff "was not subject to pressure from anyone."

THIRD SESSION 22ND LEGISLATURE CLOSED TILL JUNE

114 Bills Passed and One Govt. Measure, 19 Public Bills Remain in Order Paper

Toronto, Apr. 5 (CP). — With Royal assent given to another 58 bills last Thursday, the Ontario legislature wound up a four-week sitting to adjourn until June. Altogether 114 bills were passed during the first part of the third session of the 22nd legislature.

One government measure and 19 public bills still remain in the order paper for the reconvened sitting, the date of which has not yet been set. By 5 p.m. Thursday, with the last of the estimates approved, the House rose for its two month recess.

Clearing away estimates of the Departments of Labor and Education, the House also gave third reading to the recent amendments to the Highways Traffic Act. The major portion of Thursday's afternoon sitting was taken up with the Labor Department estimates.

Labor Minister Daley told the assembly that though some critics felt the Hours of Work and Vacations with Pay Act did not "go far enough", still thousands of workers in the province had benefited who never before had been given a week's vacation with pay.

Praise was also given to the Workmen's Compensation Act by the minister as he termed it the "best social legislation in the world".

Regarding bills introduced by the opposition members which sought to reduce the work week to 40 hours from the present 48-hour maximum, Mr. Daley said the time was not ripe for such legislation. There was a shortage of skilled and semi-skilled labor of all types and this in the main was responsible for the current housing shortage.

"If you shorten the hours, you immediately exaggerate the situation," he said. "There is no doubt that the trend of things — the thinking of industry even more than that of the workers — will eventually bring us to a five-day week, probably a 40-hour week.

"I do not know when this will happen," he added, but said conditions would change "soon" in compliance with the trend.

THIRD SESSION—Page 3

Runaway Balloon Leads Fliers Chase

Rock Hall, Md., April 5 (AP)—A runaway barrage ballon which led army and navy fliers on a frantic chase was only a deflated gas-bag today, waiting for its owners to claim it.

A refugee from Washington, the balloon collapsed and fell in Chesapeake Bay last night.

The 35-foot, helium filled runaway worked loose from its nylon moorings about 11 o'clock yesterday morning, apparently restless in spring zephyrs over the capital, where it had severed conscientuously for two weeks as an advertisement for the war assets administration.

The army sent one plane in vain pursuit, the navy three. They returned when the bag drifted off main air routes.

JINNAH CONFERS WITH VICEROY ON INDIA PROBLEM

Leaders Willing to Try Again to Negotiate With Moslem League

By WALTER J. MASON

New Delhi, Apr. 5 (AP).—Mohammed Ali Jinnah, president of India's Moslem League, conferred for an hour and 50 minutes today with Lord Mountbatten, the new viceroy, in what was described officially as "friendly and informal conversation".

It was Jinnah's first meeting with Mountbatten and occurred as reports circulated that leaders of the predominately Hindu All-India Congress party was willing to try again to negotiate with the Moslem League for settlement of India's snarled political-religious troubles.

What Jinnah's attitude would be only Jinnah knew and he wasn't saying. He has consistently demanded an independent Moslem State of Pakistan as against Congress insistence on a unified India and there is no reason to believe the powerful league leader has changed his mind.

A usually well-informed Congress source said leaders of his dominantly Hindu party would be willing to try for a settlement within the framework of the British cabinet mission plan issued last May. The league first accepted the plan as "limited Pakistan", then rejected it because of congress interpretations.

Since the British government statement fixing June of next year as its date for quitting India, the league has insisted the cabinet mission plan is dead, including the consistent assembly the league has boycotted since its inception last December.

An official source at the viceroy's house emphasized today that talks with Mohandas K. Gandhi, Congress and League ministers in the interim government, representatives of Maharajahs and others are "exploratory".

Gandhi has seen the viceroy five times this week.

Express Clerk Severely Beaten By Two Youths

Toronto, April 5 —(CP)— Beaten, kicked and left lying in a pool of blood with his hands tied, Anthony Laws, 49-year-old express clerk, last night told police he suffered undetermined injuries when attacked by two youths who attempted to rob the Canadian National Express office at the Union Station.

Apparently scared off when Law's yelling attracted an assistant, the two failed to get into the vaults and left without taking anything. Police pressed a search for them after they were reported to have boarded a northbound street car outside the station. Laws was taken to hospital for X-rays.

UNION OFFICIALS TO CONFER ON 49-DAY STRIKE

More Than Ordinary Importance Attached To Meeting to Be Held in Montreal

Glace Bay, N.S., Apr. 5 (CP).—One of John L. Lewis' righthand men, International Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers (A.F.L.), will attend a conference to be held in Montreal next week to discuss the 49-day-old Maritime coal strike, it was learned here today.

The fact that one of the top officials of the international union would meet representatives of the operators was taken here as meaning that more than ordinary importance was attached to the talks.

The strike parley, first mentioned in the provincial legislature at Halifax early this week, was said by authoritative sources in Ottawa to be an effort to end the walkout which has left 13,000 miners idle and has paralyzed eastern Nova Scotia's most important industry.

The Ottawa sources said the Federal government would take no part in the meeting but would await with interest any developments which might arise from it.

The federal government has paid out millions in subsidies to operators since early in the war to compensate them for losses and to support miners' wages which ran to a minimum of $5.84 a day when the strike began.

Subsidies End March 31

The subsidies ended March 31 but Reconstruction Minister Howe has expressed the government's willingness to re-institute them if the strike could be settled and production restored to a "healthy" condition.

Because neither side would comment on the meeting, it was not clear here just how far such a conference could go towards settlement of the dispute. Union men pointed out that any contract which might be agreed on by company and union officers is traditionally placed before the rank and file for acceptance or rejection.

A majority of the membership last fall gave their officers a mandate to call a strike, if necessary, to obtain a satisfactory contract.

That was shortly after the union had formulated demands which later were scaled down to a wage increase of $1.40 a day plus a welfare fund and provision of a pension scheme.

Since then Dosco has placed its top figure at a $1 a day increase and has made that conditional upon increasing per man day coal production from the current figure of 1.4 tons to the 1939 level of 2.4.

PUT ON ALERT

Pelelieu, April 5 (AP)—Marine and Navy personnel were put on the alert yesterday against a possible Banzai charge by 32 Japanese holdouts hiding in the caves of bloody Nose Ridge on this Pacific Island. A Japanese naval rating who surrendered Thursday informed Capt. L. O. Fox, Island commander, that the fanatical little band, which has hidden in the hills for more than two years, was discussing such an attack.

Britain, U.S. and France May Draw Closer If Foreign Conference Fails

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Moscow, April 5 — (AP) — Some western diplomats predicted today that if the Big Four Foreign Ministers fail to agree on Germany — as it appears they may — the United States and Britain would make new efforts to pull the French into the existing American-British economic merger of German occupation zones.

Some evidence was seen that the three western powers were drawing more closely together. French sources talking privately with reporters have called to their attention foreign minister Bidault's occasional agreements with State Secretary Marshall's proposals.

Though their progress seemed to have reached a near standstill, the ministers were scheduled to return today to their old dispute over powers to be vested in a prospective German government.

Britain was reported trying to force a showdown discussion on the government problem, but most diplomats were agreed that no effective moves to set up a central government in Germany could be made until basic economic questions had been settled.

The key economic problem was Russia's demand for $10,000,000,000 in German reparations over a 20-year-period, some of it from current production, and western opposition to this demand.

Yesterday Molotov, in an interview with Johannes Steele, United States writer and radio commentator, said he doubted the Truman aid plan for Greece and Turkey would "restore democracy" there.

The best way to restore democracy to Greece would be to do away with foreign intervention, Molotov commented in the first official Soviet comment on the plan.

Steele had implied Greece was no democracy at present since he phrased a question: "Do you believe that President Truman's proposed American policy on Greece will restore democracy to Greece?"

10 P.C. Boost May Come Monday, Other Classes Later

Categories Affected by Order Not Immediately Known

Ottawa, April 5 — (CP)—Domestic rental ceilings, which protected Canadians against spiraling accommodation costs through the war and into the housing-short post-war era, are to be relaxed to the extent of 10-per-cent soon — some probably Monday and others next month.

It was learned here that a government announcement early next week, following closely on an indication given by Finance Minister Abbott in the Commons last week, will disclose this first change in allowable rental charges for homes and apartments.

It will be a complicated order involving various categories of accommodation divided by date of construction and purchase and in some cases will have a retroactive clause back to April 7.

It was not known just what categories would be immediately affected but it was learned the 10-per-cent rise will be allowed on some immediately and on other categories about May 1.

Informed sources here believed the government might follow the pattern recently established for commercial rentals which now may become control-free providing the landlord and tenant sign a lease agreeable to both for a minimum of two years.

The commercial changes became effective March 1 and provided for a 25-per-cent increase in all types of business accommodation still under control providing the landlord was prepared to sign the two-year lease.

In cases where the tenant of such business accommodation refused, however, he would be required to vacate at the end of the present lease at which time the accommodation becomes free from control.

The commercial order also provided that accommodation being offered for rent for the first time would be control free and it was also bme follo also be followed in the forthcoming orders covering domestic dwellings.

The March 1 order also made provision for allowing a limited number of landlords to occupy tenanted homes which they had bought in the "justifiable" belief that they would be able to obtain occupancy. Some further modification of these eviction controls is expected.

Many Ruhr Miners Go Back to Work

Essen, Germany, April 5—(AP) —Many Ruhr Valley coal miners who struck Thursday to protest food shortages went back to work today.

British and German coal control officials said a "very high proportion" of the miners on the first shift were back on the job.

Some 300,000 miners had walked out despite warnings from British authorities that their action might result in less — not more — food for their families. The strike was scheduled to last 24 hours.

Tractor on Track Blamed in Wreck Of Streamliner

Chicago, Apr. 5 (AP). — A tractor that slipped from a freight train's flat car almost into the path of an oncoming passenger train was blamed for the freak wreck of the Burlington Railroad's Twin City Zephyr in which two passengers died and 34 other persons were injured.

The eight-car steel streamliner, bound for Chicago from Minneapolis and St. Paul was travelling its usual 75-miles-an-hour speed when it plowed into the tractor late last night at suburban Downers Grove.

The Diesel engine swayed sharply, pushing along the 14-ton obstruction. The action snapped the coupling to the coaches and the engine continued on for two blocks and then spun over on its side.

The first and second coaches jackknifed and smashed against deserted brick and concrete railroad station, caving in a part of the building wall. Most of the injured were in the first coach, sheared open by the impact. The third coach came to rest upright but astride the Burlington's three tracks. The remaining five coaches also left the rails but remained upright.

The dead were Lloyd Wright, 48, Oak Park salesman, killed in the wreck, and Edith Helland of Minneapolis, who died from injuries today.

Edward Flynn, executive vice-president of the Burlington Railroad, said the despatcher's records showed both trains passed the Downers Grove station at exactly the same time. Police set the time at 10:41 p.m. This was verified by eyewitnesses, who said the tractor fell across the streamliner's tracks a few seconds before the collision. The trains were travelling in opposite directions.

City and District News

CHECKER TOURNAMENT BEING PLAYED HERE

The Eastern Ontario checker-playing championship will be at stake here on Easter Monday when the annual tournament for the above district is to be staged at the Y.M.C.A. As has been customary in other years it is expected the tournament will be divided into two classes, "A" and "B" with the winners to play off for the championship. Present holder of the Colliver Trophy is J. Livingstone of Picton.

FIRST GRASS FIRE

First grass fire of the season was answered by the local fire department at noon on Friday when firemen were called to the Belleville Golf Club at the east end of the city. No damage was reported as result of the blaze which firemen reported had been extinguished before it spread to any buildings or fences.

British Columbia Would be Isolated

Vancouver, April 5 — (CP) — British Columbia would be virtually isolated from the United States in wire communications, if a country-wide strike of telephone and telegraph operators goes into effect there Monday, Vancouver communications officials said last night.

A spokesman for the B.C. Telephone Company said the strike would cut off all telephone calls to the U. S. except emergency calls. He said more long distance calls were made from Vancouver to Seattle, Wash., than to any other centre with the exception of Victoria on Vancouver Island.

Telegraph officials said they were not certain how the threatened strike would affect them, but "presumed" their services would be similarly cut.

Brig. Johnston, 79, Had Long Service

Weybridge, Surrey, England, April 5 — (CP) — Brig. George Napier Johnston, 79, a Canadian soldier with a long Empire service record, died here Thursday.

Born in Quebec and educated at Royal Military College, Kingston, he served in India, New Zealand, the West Indies and the United Kingdom before becoming director of artillery for New Zealand in 1911.

For war services he was mentioned in dispatches eight times and was awarded the D. S. O. and other decorations.

Syrup Firm At $4.50-5.00

Maple Syrup at from $4.50 to $5 the gallon was fairly plentiful on the local produce market Saturday as a number of district farmers offered the commodity for sale. One vendor offered maple sugar at approximately 75 cents the pound.

Eggs held at 40 cents the dozen for firsts with from 35 to 38 cents being asked for mediums and a few extra-weights selling at 45 cents.

The fowl offering was slightly larger than usual with prices being a little firmer as capons sold at 50 cents per pound with the general price for well finished fowl running up to 45 cents. Only one vendor offered broilers at from $1.50 to $1.75 per pair.

On the outside market top grade apples sold at $3.25 per hamper while cooking varieties brought from $2.25 to $2.50 the hamper. Potatoes sold at the usual $1.50 per bag, while winter vegetables such as carrots and parsnips fetched 50 cents the peck.

Several vendors offered crocuses with prices ranging 20 to 25 cents per bulb.

Young pigs sold at $10 each.

Sulphide Family Homeless After Home Destroyed

A family of nine, including parents and seven children, were rendered homeless at Sulphide last Thursday when the dwelling house of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Luffman was completely destroyed by fire. Nothing was saved from the blaze with the family losing all clothing, bedding and furniture.

Mr. Luffman has just commenced his afternoon shift at the Nicholls Chemical Company when Gordon Cassibo who was passing saw the smoke and raised the alarm. The fire had apparently originated in the attic. A bucket brigade hastily formed was unsuccessful in checking the progress of the flames.

Neighboring homes owned by William Moore and Phil Langevin were saved by the efforts of the bucket brigade formed by neighbors and employees of the chemical company.

Junior Farmers Of Hungerford Hold Meeting

The Hungerford Junior Farmers held their April meeting on Tuesday, the 1st., at the home of the secretary, Mr. Earl Gray, Plainfield. The president, Carl Bateman, presided over a good attendance of club members. H. W. Burns, Assistant Agricultural Representative, discussed club project work with the members. Twenty members signified their willingness to join a Potato Club and Stewart Elliott, Potato Club leader, was asked to have the twenty bags of potatoes at the organization meeting for the club in Thomasburg on Tuesday, April 15th. Eight members from the club have submitted their names to join the Thurlow Calf Club, the organization meeting to be on April 9th in Cannifton.

Addresses were then given by Gerald Bateman on silage production, Parkyn Richardson on production of high quality milk and Earl Gray on the treating and cleaning of seed.

A discussion of club bus trips followed and the members decided to join with some other small club in the county in going on a bus trip later in the spring.

Lunch was then served by Mrs. Gray.

Farmers Selling Brood Sows Due To Labor Shortage

Due to a shortage of farm labor a number of farmers in Hastings County are disposing of brood sows as well as a number of milk cows. In Prince Edward County also single men are reported to be very scarce but there seems to be a few married men available for farm work.

A scarcity of oats, barley and wheat as feed for cattle, poultry and hogs is reported in Prince Edward County while in Hastings drovers have reported that hogs going to market are light due to the shortage of heavy feeds.

Slightly over 30 applications for experienced farm workers are on hand at the Belleville office of the Employment Service, according to Manager Herb Reed. This was stated to be average for this time of year, but a heavier demand for farm laborers is expected as soon as spring work commences. Wages offered range from $45 to $60 per month, including board and washing.

Belleville district farmers are interested in securing Polish veterans as farm laborers with approximately 25 applications for such farm help at present with the Employment Service. Farmers appreciate this type of help because they are assured of assistance on a year-round basis.

Msgr. Nicholson Appointed Apostolic Protonotary by Pope

On Holy Thursday, His Grace Archbishop O'Sullivan of Kingston, made known that he had received a cable from the Apostolic Delegate to Canada, who is at present in Vatican City, that Pope Pius XII has appointed Monsignor J. F. Nicholson an Apostolic Protonotary. This is a rare honor and the recipient is numbered among the highest officials of the Papal Household.

Monsignor Nicholson is Vicar General of the Archdiocese of Kingston and pastor of the Church of St. Michael the Archangel in this city since 1930. Before coming to Belleville he was principal at Regiopolis College, Kingston. In the First Great War he was a chaplain with the Eighth Brigade, Third Canadian Division, C.E.F. He was decorated with the Military Cross. Archbishop O'Sullivan will confer on Monsignor Nicholson the insignia of his new honor at the High Mass on Sunday, April 13th., in St. Michael's Church.

Thurlow Junior Farmers Attend 1st Annual Dinner

Over two hundred members of the Thurlow Junior Farmers, club girls and parents attended their first annual club banquet held in the Orange Hall at Plainfield this week. The banquet was the first of its kind to be staged by a local club in Hastings County.

Guest speaker for the banquet, T. R. Hilliard, Junior Extension Fieldman, outlined the various Junior Farmer projects throughout the province and told what Junior Farmers are doing and thinking about.

He complimented the Thurlow Junior Farmers upon the success of their first year as an organized group and told parents that their presence at the banquet signified their interest in the Junior Farmers' club. He stressed that membership under the Junior Farmers club should be a stepping stone to work in senior organizations.

President of the club, John Huffman, was chairman for the program which was featured by instrumental duets by the Wannamakers Brothers, a recital by Mrs. Ben Clarke, Frank Hockaday, ventriloquist, a duet by the McPherson sisters, and some magical confusions by Len Fozard, Belleville.

Thurlow township reeve, Harry Harrison, welcomed the group on behalf of the club. Wesley Down, R.R. 1, Hilton, vice-president of the Ontario Junior Farmers, brought greetings from that organization. A. O. Dalrymple, agricultural representative, introduced the guest speaker, while Roscoe Robson, M.L.A., for Hastings East, expressed the appreciation of the club members to the guest speaker and to others who had assisted the Thurlow Junior Farmers in their first year as an organized club.

Carl Thompson, secretary treasurer of the Thurlow Club, presented Mrs. J. O. Huffman, mother of the president, with a coffee percolator, in appreciation of the work she had done in the past year in preparing refreshments for the various club meetings.

Medical Night Observed By Belleville Lodge

Medical night was observed at The Belleville Lodge No. 123 A.F. and A.M. on Thursday evening at the Masonic Temple when a member of the medical fraternity was initiated into Masonry by a degree team composed of medical men from the city and district. The degree team was composed of I.P.M. Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clarke, W.M. Dr. E. Carleton, S. W. Dr. Grant Fraser, J.W. Dr. R. Beattie, Chaplain W. D. Embury, Treasurer Arthur Hill, Secretary Carl Crosby, S.D. R. E. Clarke, J.D. E. Fairman, S.S. C. MacDonald, J.S. L. A. Kells, D.C. E. Smith, I.G. W. Bird and Tyler I. Stephenson.

Guests were present from Bancroft, Stirling, Toronto, Madoc and Tweed and they witnessed a most interesting ceremony when Rt. Wor. Bro. and Alderman H. J. Clarke was presented with a 50-year jewel. He was initiated into Masonry in April 1897 and has taken an active interest in his lodge for all these years and his worth to the fraternity was ably expressed by many of the brethren. Wor. Bro. Charles Bird gave an interesting talk on the degree of a Master Mason. At the fourth degree Wor. Bro. H. Bates presided and a fine program was given with a solo by W. Colclough and selections by William Connor on the electric organ kindly loaned for the occasion by Jack Bush.

Bro. Gilbert Scott, manager of the American Optical Company gave an address on his experiences as a resident of British Honduras. He told of the government's efforts to prevent illness in the colony and of the habits of the natives, declaring that the Negroes in that state were very honest and courteous.

MRS. JAMES A. BARRY
(Belleville—Niagara Falls, N.Y.)

The following obituary taken from the Niagara Falls, N. Y. Gazette of April 3rd., will be of interest to old friends in this city of Mrs. James A. Barry: Stricken with a heart attack on April 2nd, at her home, 443 Sixth Street, Mrs. Clara Agnes Thompson Barry, 55, died the following day at the Memorial hospital. Born at Belleville, Ont., February 7, 1892, she came to this city 33 years ago.

Surviving are her husband James A. Barry; three daughters, Mrs. William Vivian, Mrs. Howard C. Greenwald and Miss Marguerite A. Barry; a sister, Mrs. Edith Thompson Thompson and a grandson, all of Niagara Falls.

The funeral was held at Niagara Falls Saturday afternoon, April 5th.

Take Gloomy View Of Russ Refusal To Issue Visas

By EDDIE GILMORE

Moscow, April 5 (AP)—British and American official sources here are taking a gloomy view of the situation produced by Russian refusal to issue exit visas to 15 Soviet wives of British subjects.

Some Russian women married to Britons and Americans, in informal conversation with the embassies involved, have asked for advice whether to inform their husbands overseas and then try to get divorces in view of the possibility they may never see the men again.

The United States Embassy has made no official move on the question since Britain informed the wives of the status of their case. The view here, however, is that the Russians probably will apply the same policy to wives of American citizens as they did to wives of British subjects.

As a person fairly familiar with Soviet procedure and behavior, this correspondent feels that the situation is not so bad as official British and American sources are painting it.

There are reasons to believe that visas will be granted in the future—as they have in the past—in cases where the officials are convinced of some special need or sincerity.

Many Soviet officials have felt that in the past an exit visa granted the Soviet wife of a foreigner was nothing but a licence never to come back again to Russia.

Unless memory fails only 2 Russian women who married aliens during the war, returned to the Soviet Union after leaving on these exit visas. One was the wife of an R.A.F. non-commissioned officer. The other was the wife of this correspondent, who returned with him last October from a vacation in the United States.

Seal Hunter Taken Off Ice Floe

Seldom Come By, Nfld., April 5 (Reuters).—Seal hunter Christopher Cobb, adrift for 72 hours on an ice floe, was rescued Thursday night by the auxiliary schooner Duke and landed here safely, although suffering from exposure.

Cobb left his home on Joe Batts Arm last Tuesday to hunt seals on close-packed ice discernible from the shore. The ice broke up, carrying him out to sea. A seal-spotting plane located him Wednesday 20 miles off Fog Island, northwest of Newfoundland, and dropped a portable dinghy, food and clothing all of which fell behind his reach.

CARD OF THANKS

I would like to express my deep appreciation to the people of the communities of Moira, West Huntingdon, Fuller and Eggleton for your kind friendship and the hospitality of your homes during the past eight years. The cordial fellowship in our mutual relations make it a joy to remember you all. I cannot describe my gratitude for your gifts and good wishes. I trust the future may afford us many opportunities of sustaining the helpful and joyous fellowship these years have afforded.

KENNETH STEWART.

Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Locke and family of 32 Pine Street, wish to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to their many relatives, friends and neighbors for their kind expressions of sympathy and floral tributes extended during their recent sad bereavement.

SETTLEMENT REACHED

Timmins, April 5 — (CP)—Settlement of a wage dispute between 12 graduate nurses of St. Mary's Hospital and hospital authorities was reached at a special meeting in the nurses residence here last Thursday. The 12 nurses, who had resigned this week when their request for a $30 monthly wage increase was countered by a compromise, cancelled their resignations at the meeting. Also for the first time here, a wage scale was established for all graduate nurses in the hospital.

IN MEMORIAM

HANNAN — In loving memory of Pte. Norman H. Hannan, who was killed in action April 4th., 1945, in Holland.

He is gone, but not forgotten,
Though his grave is far away.
Near the place he fought to save us
From the enemy, that day.
But we sorrow not as some do
Void the hope, "We'll meet again
When the trumpet sounds from Heaven
And the Lord comes back to claim
All who've trusted in His shed blood,
Sins to pardon, souls to save."
Yes, we'll join him,—rise to meet Christ
Who has power o'er all the grave."
I. Thess. 4: 16-18

—Sadly missed by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Hannan, 249 William St., Belleville, Ont.

SHARP — In memory of a loving husband and father, Cpl. George Dale Sharpe, who was killed in action two years ago, April 5th., 1945.

God knows how much we miss him,
Never shall his memory fade,
Loving thoughts shall ever wander
To the spot where he is laid.

GILROY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Benjamin G. Gilroy, who passed away April 5th., 1946.

The vacant chair can never be filled,
A broken link we can never replace;
Sad was the parting, no one can tell,
So sudden on earth the sorrow fell;
Memories we treasure no one can steal
Death leaves a heartache nothing can heal.

—Sadly missed and ever remembered by Wife and Family.

CHUMBLEY — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Doris Ethel Chumbley (Greenwood) who passed away April 4th., 1946.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles and trials are past,
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore
Till God called her home to suffer no more.

W.C. Pettit Appointed District Representative

Announcement is made by John Labatt Limited, London, of the appointment of Mr. Wilfred C. Pettit as the Company's representative at Belleville. He will cover the territory from Trenton to Napanee, including Picton and the area north of No. 7 highway. Mr. Pettit joined the Company in 1938 and after working through various departments, during the early years of the war was acting supervisor of the Equipment Service Division.

In 1943, he enlisted in the Canadian Army, returning to the Equipment Service Division in January, 1946. Mr. Pettit's thorough knowledge of all equipment used in the dispensing of beer should prove of great assistance to the hotel operators in his territory.

Endeavors to Avert U. S. Telephone Strike

Washington, April 5 (AP) — Government efforts to avert next Monday's threatened coast-to-coast telephone strike in the United States moved slowly today.

With 287,000 workers preparing for the walkout, Federal officials concentrated on trying to break an impasse in negotiations here between the American Union of telephone workers and the long distance division of the American telephone and telegraph company.

The long distance workers union is one of 39 affiliates of the National Federation of Telephone Workers, which is pushing demands for $12 weekly pay increases and other contract revisions.

MAY SURRENDER RUNDSTEDT

Nuernberg, April 5 — (AP)— A usually well-informed source said today British authorities soon would hand over German Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt to American war crimes trial authorities in Nuernberg.

Von Rundstedt was commander of German forces during the "Battle of the Bulge."

THIRD SESSION

The morning sitting on education department estimates was highlighted by Premier Drew's contention that despite the Federal decision to limit cadet training in secondary schools, Ontario would neither limit nor abandon this training.

He said the Department of Education had complete jurisdiction in this field and the Dominion's action was a "prime example" of what would happen if the province yielded its privileges to the Dominion.

For what was expected to be a "quiet session," the first four weeks of the Legislature were far from being "quiet."

Outbursts against the CBC, the Toronto Star and Communists by the premier, shared the spotlight with the unprecedented resignation of the Speaker of the House, a full-dress debate on Dominion-Provincial relations and lengthy debates on both the Throne Speech and the budget address.

Mr. Drew lead the attack on "misrepresentations," and was joined by several members of the cabinet as the weeks passed. The premier implied that the misrepresentation by the Star and the CBC had been deliberate with the intention of misinforming the public about the Drew government and its policy.

CBC Receives First Blast

Two days after the House opened, the CBC received the first blast regarding a newscast report on what the Throne speech said about Dominion-Provincial relations. Then after the budget was brought down — announcing a seven per cent corporation tax and suspension of provincial income tax — Mr. Drew's ire was aimed at a CBC commentator. The commentator had said that the Ontario budget destroyed "any hope . . . that a tax agreement could be reached soon" among the provinces and the dominion.

The Toronto Star's editorial and newspage reports, too, were said to contain "deliberate misrepresentations" when various portions of the budget were reported and discussed.

The charges made by Mr. Drew against the two Labor-Progressive party members in the House however, were most vitriolic. But despite these tongue-lashings against Communists, neither A. A. MacLeod and J. B. Sansberg were deterred in their constant criticism of the government's "lack of a strong social program".

The L.P.P. members attack on the "failure" of the government to institute a housing program and to increase the $28-a month old age pension was the principal opposition with which the government had to contend. The old-age pension issue threatened to develop into an all-night filibuster last Wednesday when Mr. Salsberg demanded that the government make a statement as to whether or not it was going to increase the allowance.

Something unusual in labor legislation was passed affecting municipal fire department members and policemen. These measures made collective bargaining compulsory and provided for arbitration if discussions with municipal councils broken down.

Stringent Rules Enforced.

A principal difference between the two bills, however, was that where firemen now belong to a union, the amendment to the Police Act forbids policemen from joining any trade union or association with union afficiation. Firemen in Ontario have belonged to the Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters (A.F.L.) since 1920.

Stringent rules regarding traffic accidents were enforced in a Traffic Act amendment which also sets up an "Unsatisfied Judgments Fund." This fund, to which it is believed all drivers will contribute $1 a year, will protect drivers and pedestrians from reckless and irresponsible drivers. The fund provides compensation up to $5,000 for injury or death to one persons, and $10,000 in the case of two or more persons.

The most startling development of the session was the resignation Friday, March 21, of Hon. W. J. Stewart, Parkdale member, as Speaker. The resignation, rumored to indicate a minor split in Progressive Conservative ranks, was accepted the Monday following and James DeCongalton Hepburn, member for Prince Edward-Lennox, was elected to the post.

The resignation resulted from what Mr. Stewart said was "disrespect" for the office on the part of Hon. George Doucett who holds the dual portfolios of the highways and public works departments. Mr. Doucett's inquiry on the floor of the House why he could not get tickets to the Speaker's gallery for two guests, set off the altercation and the consequent resignation.

Approval of the government's decision not to accept the federal tax proposals was given by a 57 to 21 vote. However, the fact that the House would not reconvene until June, led to speculation that the Dominion budget, which is due in May, might necessitate some changes in the provincial policy and budget.

Many Germans Wish to Adopt Britain as Home

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Guilford, Surrey, England, April 5 —(CP)— German fighting men who never succeeded in invading the British Isles by war may one day farm English fields, their right to do so peacefully acquired.

A surprisingly large number still held as prisoners-of-war seem eager to forget their German heritage and adopt Britain as their home.

A few hours after Agriculture Minister Tom Williams said that German prisoners might be "assimilated in our own population as civilian farm workers," commandants of prisoner-of-war camps, housing an aggregate of 330,000 German prisoners all over the country, were beseiged with applications.

Here, at No. 57 P. W. Camp, 15 out of 800 prisoners went immediately to their commandant, Lt.-Col. A. C. N. Rowland.

"Many more would have applied," Col. Rowland said, "had we not explained that no definite plan has yet been laid down or approved by parliament."

A tour of this camp, set amid the rolling Surrey Downs, indicated that at least 15 per cent of all the Germans now working on farms would like to settle here provided they could go home first.

"There was a time when we believed the British were a decadent people, no longer fit to govern their great possessions," said tall, clean-cut Hans Klaus of Hamburg. "The war proved we were wrong. Today when life is so hard for people in England they are as courageous as ever. Yes, I think I would be proud to be British."

German prisoners throughout Britain are being repatriated at the rate of 15,000 monthly, but as many as seven per cent have volunteered to spend a further six months working on English farms.

Court Reserves Judgment On Judge's Appeal

Toronto, April 5 —(CP)— The Ontario Court of Appeal Thursday reserved judgment on the appeal of 57-year-old County Judge J. C. M. German of Cobourg, Ont., from convictions in Cobourg last Dec. 14 on charges of drunken driving and dangerous driving. Argument by counsel took 2½ days.

Defence Counsel A. S. Greer of Oshawa, Ont., said the accused was entitled to the verdict of a jury properly charged as he resumed argument for a new trial on the grounds of misdirection and wrongful admission of evidence. Judge German was sentenced to 30 days for drunken driving and fined $250 for dangerous driving.

Mr. Greer described as improper the admission of testimony given by lay and expert witnesses for the Crown who were permitted to express opinions on the defendant's state of sobriety and his ability to drive a car before and after the accident in Cobourg Sept. 3 which resulted in injuries to Mrs. Jeanne Taylor. He charged that admission of sach evidence was usurping the function of the jury.

Easter

Again with the returning spring the joyous time of Easter comes to the world with its message of power of life over death. Lent, the season of penitence and preparation for the season of the celebration of the Resurrection has been an apt picture of the human soul striving towards the truth and the light.

Man marks the great events of history with anniversaries for it is in the nature of humanity to pay respect to the spirit that moves behind the events which make their mark on the world's calendar or have enshrined themselves in the heart and soul of humanity. No events have been so enshrined in the hearts of Christians as the Birth and the Resurrection of Christ because of what His life has meant to mankind the world over. Christmas is the great festival of His birth, it becomes as well the festival of the family life and of good will to all mankind. Easter is intensely spiritual in its appeal and marks the triumph of that Life that was lived in Galilee and His victory over the tomb itself. It is the culmination of His ministry.

Easter is the cornerstone of the Christian faith, the event which it memorializes crowned the sinless Life of Him who spent Himself in the service of His fellowmen. More than nineteen centuries afterwards hosts of millions follow His teachings and profess and proclaim their faith in Him as Master and Lord. His precepts and parables, His converse with His disciples and the people have been potent in all subsequent history in molding the individual and the world. No one has ever walked the earth who has exercised influence for good as He did. His teachings are helping to transform this earth into a place where all mankind may dwell in peace and brotherly love. They are eternal and basic as life itself and the spirit. He taught the love of God as the Father of mankind.

The white radiance of that spotless life has influenced man for nineteen centuries and is still exerting what Christians believe is the only way—that of brotherly love in bringing the world to an everlasting peace and a true brotherhood. Mankind has been slow to learn the full power of the leaven of His principles. Twice in a generation, tyrant leaders and aggressor nations have plunged the world into two armageddons of bloodshed and suffering by their hatred of others. Yet in the midst of these greatest clashes of humanity in all history, there was still shining the Light of His teaching, whose principles if put to full test and practice would end war and all wasting rivalries and crown life with love.

Easter teaches the eternity of the principle of right and love and of triumph by sacrifice as Jesus taught. All about man are the evidences of light and truth and of eternity.

Man has tried throughout the ages to pay full tribute to Him with all that is true and good and beautiful in words, thoughts, in music, in color, and in devoted human lives and in the spirit of adoration. At this season the message is of hope that springs eternal in the human breast, of assurance of personal immortality beyond this pale of life. In the centuries since the first Easter morn the spread of His Gospel and faith and assurance has been one of the great marvels of human experience, And that Light is still shining with all its first radiance and will shine until the consummation of this world.

Britain And Trusteeship Council

Britain is deeply interested in the future of the Trusteeship Council which held its inaugural meeting at Lake Success recently.

Britain's interest is general and particular. General because the United Nations is the cornerstone of United Kingdom policy, because the United Kingdom Government considers that the United Nations and its specialised agencies should be even more for the positive policy of peaceful cooperation between nations, and because the Trusteeship Council, last of the principal organs of United Nations to be created, is pre-eminently designed, like the Social and Economic Council, to further such a positive policy.

Britain's particular interest in the Trusteeship Council results from, firstly, her position as administrator of three Trusteeships duly approved by the United Nations Assembly; secondly, her unequalled experience of peoples in all stages of evolution and her record in promoting their development up to the point of self-government and independence—the basic objective of the Trusteeship system as defined in the Charter; thirdly, the predominant part played by United Kingdom representatives in originating and drafting the Trusteeship section of the Charter.

The Trusteeship Council is composed of representatives of Australia, Belgium, France, New Zealand, Britain administering countries; China, Russia and the United States as permanent members of the Security Council and Iraq and Mexico. The two latter were elected to conform to the rule of the charter that the number of administering and non-administering countries represented on the Council must be equal.

Eight trusteeship agreements have been submitted to and approved by the United Nations Assembly, namely New Guinea by Australia, Ruanda-Urundi by Belgium, the French Cameroons and French Togoland by France, Western Samoa by New Zealand, and the British Cameroons, British Togoland and Tanganyika by Britain.

This comprises all the territories held under the so-called Class B mandate under the League of Nations. New Guinea and Western Samoa were Class C mandates.

Of the Class A mandate territories, Transjordan, Iraq, mandate held by Britain, Syria and Lebanon, mandate held by France, have all become independent. There only remains Palestine, the case of which is being submitted by the United Kingdom mandatory to the United Nations Assembly.

The inaugural proceedings, which were opened by a welcoming address by Mr. Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the United Nations were marred by the absence of any Russian rpresentative, although Russia is a statutory member of the Council. It may be recalled that Russia has been consistently critical of the terms of the Trusteeship Agreements submitted to the Assembly, contending that they are incompatible with the Charter. When the transfer of the eight mandates to the Trusteeship system came up for a vote in the Assembly on December 14th, Russia and five other Slav States voted against the motion, which was supported by 34 votes and therefore carried by a large majority.

Hoppicopter Ahoy!

It's described as looking like a kiddie car with an overhead fan attached to an outboard motor. It bears the same relation to an airplane that a motorcycle bears to a limousine. It's of the helicopter family, with the trade name of Hoppicopter. It can travel at 90 miles an hour up to an altitude of 12,000 feet, comments Christian Scinece Monitor.

What will they get up to next? This is almost as good as those portable wings we used to dream about. But we'll probably have to give up our favorite sport of mountain climbing now to avoid the holiday crowds whizzing gaily from peak to peak. That's the trouble with mechanical "proress." It gets in the poor pedestrian's hair.

We can just picture the tired businessman relaxing in the sun and remarking sadly, as something buzzes and whirrs about his head: :"That's no mosquito. That's my wife."

Luck and Income Tax

It is luckier to live in Canada than in the United States if one is of the chosen few who win large sums of money in the Irish sweepstakes.

In Canada such winnings are classed as an increase in capital, like profits on th stock exchange, and are not taxed as current income—although taxes must be paid of course, on the income from such a windfall. In the United States a person earning $2,000 a year who wins $100,000 in the Dublin lottery is taxed on an income in that year of $102,000, which puts him into a very exclusive bracket.

We do not know that there is any moral to the comparison except, as we have said, that sometimes it is luckier to be a Canadian than an American says Ottawa Journal.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST
(Copyright, 1947, Edgar A. Guest)

GOOD WILL

Good will ,as lawyers oft have told,
By contract can be bought and sold,
Among man's assets, they insist,
It is a product they should list.

Good will, by all the best advice,
Commands a certain market price,
But may the buyer go to court
Not getting what he thought he bought?

Suppose the seller hasn't told
Just how he earned what he had sold.
Will his good will continue on
Or lessen daily till there's none?

Who buys good will must serve as well
As he who had good will to sell,
And keep his title to it clear,
Or shortly it will disappear.

Two Young Girls Knocked to Road By Passing Cars

Two young Belleville girls received injuries in almost identical manner Thursday afternoon when darting out from the curb they were knocked to the pavement by passing cars and were taken to hospital for treatment.

Six-year-old Ruth Rowbotham, 164 Charles Street, received bruises and lacerations to her forehead and legs when at Albert and Dundas Streets she was knocked to the pavement by a westbound car driven by William Dunster of Brockville. Dunster was driving west when two girls darted out from the curb, his vehicle striking the Rowbotham child. The second girl Joy Hicks, Grace Chapel, was uninjured.

In the second accident Barbara Nolan, age 4, 199 Lingham Street, was stated to have darted out from behind a parked car on Bleecker Ave., when she was struck by a northbound taxi driven by Gerald Way, 214 Church St. The little girl was taken to hospital but after treatment for a lacerated nose was permitted to go home.

LIBERAL MEMBER AND DREW CLASH IN LEGISLATURE

J. A. Habel Criticizes Effort of Premier to Court French-Canadian Friendship

Toronto, April 5 — (CP)—The training of cadets in Ontario will not be restricted because of the reduction in federal grants, Premier Drew told the Ontario Legislature Thurs., during consideration of estimates for the Department of Education.

Ontario will pay the per capita grants which Ottawa has withdrawn and will also pay the added cost of instructors.

The Premier, who is also Minister of Education, denounced the Department of National Defence for circulating instructions concerning the cadet corps limitations directly in the schools. The Ontario Department of Education with complete jurisdiction in the schools was not informed.

It was a "prime example" of what would happen were the province to yield its privileges to Ottawa, the Premier said.

Fine Cadet Corps

Aurelien Belanger (Lib. Prescott) said the finest cadet corps in Canada were in a bilingual secondary school operated by the Christian Brothers at Ottawa.

Premier Drew commended Mr. Belanger's remarks to the House and paid tribute to the French-Canadian regiments in the last war. He recalled that one of the Liberal members in an earlier debate said it seemed strange for Premier Drew to show solicitude for Quebec after the things he had said about Quebec's war effort. The premier said he repudiated the charge he had ever said anything reflecting on Quebec's war effort.

"The thing that will help unity in Canada more than anything else will be to fight old prejudices built up by appealing to old ideas," he said.

J. A. Habel, (Lib. Cochrane-North) said it was clear the Premier was referring to him. Premier Drew had used freedom of speech often to say what he thought of Quebec's war effort and he (Mr. Habel) had felt it his duty to say what he had about Premier Drew.

"Let me tell him now that those political somersaults and polite about-faces he is doing now will never be swallowed by the French Canadians or this country," the Liberal member said.

Premier Drew had made certain statements as stepping stones to the leadership of the Conservative party, said Mr. Habel, and as far as French-Canadians were concerned those statements would never be forgotten.

Claims it Federal Matter

Mr. Habel said he had intended to agree with the Premier about the value of cadet training, but he must tell the House that cadet training was a Federal matter with which Ontario had nothing to do.

"I have too high a regard for the French-Canadian people to think the member who has just spoken represents them," said Premier Drew.

"You'll find out," Mr. Habel retorted.

The premier said Mr. Habel showed either complete ignorance or a desire to misrepresent, because ever since Confederation the province, aided by grants from Ottawa had the complete responsibility for cadet training. The National Defence Department had the job of providing military instruction and made a small per capita grant.

"If they are not willing to provide them, we will absorb those costs," said the premier.

Farquhar Oliver, Liberal House leader, protested the premier's tone to Mr. Habel.

"Debate in the Legislature has degenerated to the point where you'd think it was a barroom instead of a Legislature," Mr. Oliver said.

"Well, I'll grant that you're an expert witness there," the premier commented.

Mr. Oliver said the premier's retort was an example of what he protested. As for Mr. Habel he would 'compare and out-compare' any man the government had on the treasury benches."

The minister of education told the members that to counteract any reports to the contrary, statutory grants to schools in the province were not being reduced. He outlined the progress made in building modern schools and paid tribute to the work done by the province's teachers.

Waste of Time

Mr. Belanger said that it was a waste of time and money considering the inadequacy of French teaching in Ontario's high schools and universities. He told of French-teaching specialists who "can't speak French and can't understand French when it is spoken to them."

"They always come back with the old myth that they speak Parisien French while Canadians speak 'French-Canadian.' " he said. "There is no such thing as French-Canadian as far as the educated Frenchman in Canada is concerned. We speak the same type of French as is spoken at La Sorbonne University."

Making an impassioned plea that the problem be studied carefully the Prescott member said it might be his "swan song," but he wanted the department to be aware of the problem so that they might prepare to properly train teachers in French.

Estimates for the department showed an increase of more than $6,000,000 — most of which is included in increased legislative grants to schools. The total estimates are $35,938,900.

NOT A TOOTH FOR A HOUSEFUL

A correspondent purporting to be a dentist studying children's dentistry (pedodontia) with the intention of practising as a pedodontist writes (not on professional stationery, so for all I know he may be just a student kidding me) to criticise (and I am grateful to any physician or dentist who tells me when I am wrong if the doctor is sincere about it) this statement which appeared in an article here:

CLEAN TOOTH DECAYS

Not only persons in their 'teens but infants mature adults and elderly persons are subject to various manifestations of calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D shortage, of which softening and decay of the teeth is one.

The student of children's dentistry said that such "obviously uninformed teaching will lead ignorant people to believe that oral administration of calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D will clear up tooth decay. The profession ,(mis-spells the student) of dentistry has no evidence to support this."

Heaven knows that if I really believed most of you as unknowing as that I'd quit this job and devote my time to something worth while.

I do not believe or teach that "oral administration" (swallowing) any amount of calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D will "clear up" or cure or fill cavities I maintain merely that an adequate daily ration of these nutritional essentials will prevent softening of the teeth and decay. Prompt treatment by the dentist is the only way I know to "clear up" decay of teeth, caries, cavity formation.

There is a familiar saying of the oldwives—"A tooth for every child." If it were literally true, what fine teeth most American women would have! From a cursory survey of teeth and the size of families in Yankeeland I'd say eight teeth for every child would be nearer the truth.

As a matter of fact all of the mother's nutrition is faulty, and thanks to—well, I can't call it ignorance this time so let's call it just failure to teach children elementary physiology and hygiene in grade school, the nutrition of most expectant mothers in Yankeeland (Yankee meaning North American) is faulty, particularly in that the diet of the expectant mother, be she poor or well to do, is usually deficient in calcium, phosphorus and vitamin D, and often deficient in thiamine (B1) riboflavin (B2) and iodine as well, though the first three deficiencies chiefly account for softening and crumbling of the teeth and the rapid decay that the oldwives attributed to pregnancy.

You see, children, the diet of the expectant mother must provide not only her own nutritive requirements but also the additional requirments of the growing fetus. If there is a shortage of any of the essential elements in the diet, the fetus, as a parasite, takes what it needs, and then there is not enough to maintain the host's nutrition. Formerly physicians and dentists regarded bones and teeth once formed and developed, as no longer susceptible to any change in composition. We know better now. We know that the bones and teeth serve as a kind of storehouse for calcium and phosphorus, which reserve may be drawn upon when the nerves, glands, heart and other functional tissues, glands or organs need it and the diet fails to supply enough.

High calcium (and phosphorus) diet and supplementation of the ordinary diet with Ca, P and D are described in practical detail in the booklet "The Calcium Shortage" available on written request if you inclose ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address (please do not say "City"—everyday a number of answers are undeliverable because correspondent are careless about that.)

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Circumcision

I am having our 2 weeks old boy circumcised. My folks seem to think I shouldn't have it done. What is your opinion about it. I have no special reason only I believe it is more sanitary. We are great believers in your teachings and would appreciate your views about this.

(F.L.K.)

Anwer — It is necessary only when there is interference with cleanliness or with voiding. Your physician should decide in case of an abnormality or disease.

How To Breathe

What is the proper method of breathing? Particularly, is it correct to exhale through the mouth or nose? (R.B.)

Answer — Normally inhale and exhale through the nose. During sustained effort open the mouth and breathe through both the nose and the mouth.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Can a foreign-born citizen become Vice President ?

The Constitution as adopted in 1787 carefully prescribed the qualifications of the President, but no corresponding qualifications for the Vice President were prescribed, and there was not a word in the original Constitution about the qualifications of the Vice President.

The reason was simple. Under the original electoral system the electors did not vote for President and Vice President separately. They voted merely for persons to be President. The one who received the greatest number of votes cast, if a majority of all the votes cast, became President, and the one who received the greatest number of votes after the choice of President became Vice President.

Under that system it was not necessary to prescribe the qualifications for the Vice President because the electors could not vote for anybody not qualified for President. Article II, Section 1, of the Constitution says: "No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States, at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States."

Strictly speaking, it is not quite correct to say that George Washington was elected "unanimously." In those days each elector voted for two persons, but when he voted he had no way of knowing whether he was casting a particular vote for a President or a Vice President. Washington actually received only half of the total votes cast. Every elector who voted for him also voted for another person for President. In effect, Washington was the first choice for President of every elector, although there probably is no way of proving that such was actually the case. Some electors may have preferred John Adams, who got the second largest number, or one of the other candidates.

This system was changed in 1804 by the 12th Amendment, which requires the electors to vote for President and Vice President separately. The change was due to the tie between Jefferson and Burr in 1801, when Burr got as many elector votes as Jefferson, although the electors never intended to elect him President. This change made it necessary to prescribe qualifications for the Vice President also. The 12th Amendment provides, "That no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice President of the United States."

Although in the early days of the Federal Government it would have been possible for a foreign-born citizen who had been "fourteen years a resident within the United States" to become President or Vice President, none was chosen, and that provision is now a dead letter.

CZECH LINGUIST PRAISES CANUCK DOCTORS' SKILL

Diplomat's Wife Associated With Eleanor Roosevelt in Work of International Women's Conference

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa. (CP)—While the wife of the latest arrival to Diplomats Row has nothing but praise for the skill of Canadian physicians, at the same time she would have preferred meeting them on a less professional basis.

Two days after Frantisek Nemlec, Czechoslovak minister to Canada, arrived here with his wife and 16-year-old step-daughter, Eva Sichrova, the latter was rushed to hospital with appendicitis.

"But in eight days she was back home again," said Mrs. Nemlec, in a recent interview. "On the continent it would have meant at least two weeks in the hospital for her."

Blonde Elizabeth Nemlec does not look old enough to have a 16-year-old daughter. Nor does that ready smile of hers betray any of the bitter hardship of those early war days before she and her young daughter fled from Czechoslovakia in 1939 to escape the Germans. And it was about that time her first husband died in Dachau concentration camp.

In England young Eva was sent to a boarding-school just outside London.

"It was there she picked up her English accent," laughed her mother. "She is always mistaken for an English girl."

Returned to Prague

As soon as the continent opened up again Mrs. Nemlec headed back to Prague, the city she had known from childhood. A brilliant linguist, she soon was working for U.N.R.R.A., and travelling throughout war-torn Europe.

A year ago she was in New York representing Czechoslovakia at the international conference of women, arranged by Eleanor Roosevelt. She also attended U.N.R.R.A. meetings last year in Geneva, Trieste and Venice.

And, as for Canada, Mrs. Nemlec is sure she is going to like it. Already she has found the people friendly.

However, there has been one disappointment. She and her daughter, both expert skiers, won't be able to venture out on the Laurentian hills this year—at least Eva won't be able to go, because of her recent operation.

"But wait until next year," concluded Mrs. Nemlec, "I know it will be every bit as exciting as skiing in the Alps."

Transvaal Farmer Keeps up Search For Missing Link

Unearths Several Truck Loads of Valuable Fossilized Remains but Elusive Skull Still Lost

Johannesburg —(CP)— Equipped with a few sticks of dynamite, and aided by some native helpers, a Transvaal farmer, who, for 44 years has lived within a seven-mile radius of Sterkfontein, is conducting a search which may any day place him in the international limelight.

He is L. T. van der Nest, and each day he spends searching for something which many scientists consider of more importance than the rich gold reefs situated around the Koppie where he works.

He is looking for a skull, the most elusive skull in the world—the "missing link."

Van der Nest has been digging and blasting among the layers of stone on the Kromdraai koppie for three months, and already he has unearthed for Dr. Robert Broom, South African scientist, several lorry loads of valuable fossilized remains.

Recently a blast of dynamite unearthed a slab of stone which contained a perfectly preserved skull. There was great excitement among the few men who have now got the "fever" of wondering what the next rock will hold.

Although Dr. Broom handled the skull as carefully as the man who found the Cullinan diamond, it was not the "missing link."

The present research is the result of the accidental discovery of a skull by a European boy on the farm on which the koppie stands.

Mr. van der Nest is not particularly interested in justifying Mr. Darwin or exploding the beliefs of the learned men who are looking for the "link." All he knows is that the work is interesting and important to science.

WINTER BLITZ SEEN BOON TO WEST'S CROPS

Unprecedented Snow Storms, Heavy Fall Precipitation May Pay Dividends to Prairies

(By The Canadian Press)

Autumn rains coupled with unprecedented winter snow storms have combined to form an advance moist bulwark against dusty drought, Western Canada's grain and stock men's bane, precipitation statistics show.

The Department of Transport, meteorological division, reports precipitation throughout all major grain areas of the west far in excess of last year. During the period Aug. 1 to Feb. 28, precipitation in Alberta showed a 50 per cent above normal peak was The increase in Saskatchewan was 40 per cent and in Manitoba 16 per cent.

Twice the normal fall was registered in southern Alberta during the seven-month period while southeast Saskatchewan marked up a 60 per cent increase. Northern sections of the latter province received a 35 per cent boost. In north and central Alberta and southwest Saskatchewan, a 25 pe rcent above normal peak was reached.

Smallest departures from former averages occurred in Manitoba with western sections receiving 20 per cent more and eastern areas, slightly over 10 per cent.

Manitoba's August rainfall was practically normal, as was southern Alberta's. High marks of 10 to 20 per cent were reported in north and central Alberta as well as in north and southeast Saskatchewan. Southwest Saskatchewan was more fortunate with an excess of 25 per cent.

September rain took an upward climb in all districts. Smallest increases were 10 to 20 per cent in northern Alberta, north and southwest Saskatchewan and western Manitoba. However, it was 30 to 40 per cent over normal in central and south Alberta and eastern Manitoba— while southeast Saskatchewan zoomed up to 70 per cent above average.

Severe snow in Alberta during November, with somewhat lighter falls across southeast Alberta and southwest Saskatchewan, brought several record precipitation marks. Four times the usual amount fell in southern Alberta, and two to three times the normal in central Alberta and southern Saskatchewan. Smaller increases ranging from 20 to 60 per cent were registered in northern areas of Saskatchewan and Alberta. Manitoba reported small deficiencies.

Record-breaking snow-storms during December, January and February greatly boosted averages in southern sections of the grain region. Jumps of 50 to 80 per cent occurred in north and south Alberta and north and southeast Saskatchewan. The three month registered 30 to 40 per cent leaps in central Alberta and western Manitoba.

PLA-MORS NEED GAME

(By The Associated Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors were within one game today of a clean sweep of the first two playoff barriers between them and the United States Hockey League playoff champions, having defeated Fort Worth Rangers 7-3 at Kansas City last night.

The victory was the Play-Mors' second against the Texas team in as many starts and leaves them needing only a victory Friday night to wind up the best-of-five series and qualify to face Omaha for the playoff title.

AUSSIE TAX SLASH TO BENEFIT LABOR

Million Modest Wage-Earners to Gain from $100,000,000 Cut

By WILLIAM STEWART
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Canberra —(CP)— Australia's 1,000,000 modest wage-earners will receive substantial relief from heavy taxation next July when the Labor government's proposals for reductions amounting to $100,000,000 become effective.

The Parliamentary Labor party has approved the cuts, as well as increase rebates for dependents, and pension increases for widows, invalids, disabled servicemen and returned men maintained by the government while they study.

Relief from taxation whose wartime level was probably not exceeded even in Britain has been sought for several months. Two cuts in the past year were given by Prime Minister J. B. Chifley who is Australia's treasurer but neither was regarded by labor unions as sufficient.

Under the latest proposals men earning salaries of $15,000 or more a year will receive a reduction of about 10 per cent and still pay more than half of their earnings to the government. But men and women earning between $640 and $1,600 a year who make up about two-thirds of the country's taxpayers will get a real benefit.

The proposed $100,000,000 tax reduction amounts to 28 per cent of the federal government's revenue from income and social services taxes which are collected jointly.

Aid Single Persons.

The social services tax starts at the rate of 1¼ per cent on salaries lower than those subject to income tax and under the proposed scale it will continue to take affect on a single man's earnings of more than $335 a year. However, income tax paid on earnings more than $640 for a single person will not be collected until earnings reach $800.

At present a single person receiving $1,000 pays $128 income and social services tax, compared with $176 at the wartime peak and under the proposed scale will pay only $90. A man with wife and two children earning $1,000 now pays $38 compared with the wartime peak of $55 but will pay nothing under the new scale.

A man with wife and one child will pay social - services tax when earnings are $900, instead of $560 at present and his income tax will not start until his earnings are $1,640, instead of the present minimum of $1,100.

An Australian with wife and two children and receiving $3,200 now pays $700, comparrd with $900 during the war, and will get a cut to $500.

The Australian system of rebates for dependents differs from the Canadian system of dependents' exemptions. In Australia, the wage-earner's tax is calculated on his full income and then rebates worked out according to amounts specified for the different categories of dependents are granted.

At present, rebate of the tax on $320 is granted for a wife. This amount will increase to $480 under the new plan while the amount for first child will rise from $240 to $320 and for other children from $95 to $160.

Amount of the pension increase decided on is 80 cents weekly. It will apply to old age and invalid pensions at present $5.20 weekly, widows pensions now $4.20 to $6 weekly, and living allowanc to student servicemen amounting to $5.20 a week.

GIRL CRIMINALLY ATTACKED

London, Ont., April 5 (CP) — Provincial and city police were co-operating today in a hunt for a man who criminally attacked a 12-year-old girl Wed. night on the outskirts of the city.

It was the most serious case to date in a recent series of attacks on women by night prowlers.

City police have arrested a few suspects but none were held.

CAT CLIMBS LADDER

Welland, April 5 — (CP) — Firemen coaxed a cat to climb a ladder along the wall of the Welland ship canal recently after it was noticed swimming by a pedestrian. The feline, after three tries, climbed the 16-foot ladder and once on dry land dashed off without ill-effects.

GIRL WEARS DIAMOND, LOSES IT IN LINING

Ann Arbor, Mich, April 5 — (AP)— Seven-year-old Allison Brown wore her mother's $2,200 diamond and sapphire ring to school to show it to her young friends, but it was missing when she got home.

Police and Boy Scouts searched for it until Allison's mother, Mrs. B. Gatz Brown, reported everything had turned out all right.

Stop 'Raking' for Georgian Bay Fish

(An Editorial in the Midland Free Press Herald)

That the fish of Georgian Bay are rapidly being exterminated, and the tourist business of the area seriously threatened, are alarming statements made by Gregory Clark, well known newspaper writer and summer resident of Go Home Bay, in a letter to the Free Press Herald.

The things he says are startling. New fangled methods of fishing being practised at some summer resorts are destroying game fish faster than they are growing to maturity. The inevitable result within a few years will be that there will be very few such fish left in Georgian Bay and consequently very few tourists.

The system which owners of motor launches have devised to make money for themselves by ensuring fish catches for their customers is described by Mr. Clark. Old fashioned trolling in rowboats has given place to power trolling. Motor boats are throttled down to their slowest speed drag anywhere from three to eight lines behind them, literally raking the bottom and securing large catches of fish.

There is at present nothing illegal about this method of fishing. It is hard on the fish, however, and if nothing is done to stop it the end of fishing for sport will come in this part of Ontario. Mr. Clark should know what he is talking about, for he is one of the most enthusiastic and best informed anglers in the whole of Ontario.

Midland Chamber of Commerce, Penetang Board of Trade, summer hotel proprietors and others interested in conserving game fish should unitedly and severally bring pressure upon the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries to outlaw fishing from moving engined craft. That sort of thing may be all right for the Atlantic Ocean where the supply of fish seems to be illimitable, but it is apparently having a disastrous effect upon sport fishing in Georgian Bay. The proposed restrictions may interfere with the cottager who trolls from a rowboat with an outboard motor, but if any loopholes are left in any regulation that is passed it will be of no service whatever. It is more important to conserve fish than the rights of tourists to destroy them.

Mr. Clark has opened our eyes to a real peril. If we wait too long in taking action we shall be too late. Once the commercial fisheries of this section of the Georgian Bay area were important. Many carloads of fish were shipped weekly to big city markets. The fish hogs "raked" the whole area with their nets, and commercial fishing long ago ceased to exist. The same thing has happened in the Meaford area, and the fish pirates have now moved on into Lake Superior to repeat their spoilation.

Do we want the same fate to befall our game fish that has been the lot of the herring, the lake trout and the white fish? Are we anxious to say goodbye to the tourist fisherman? If not, let us stop power boat trolling for once and all.

Odd Trains And Queer Passengers

(By Norman Hacking, In The Vancouver Daily Province)

I've been timid about railway trains, ever since I arrived one dark and stormy night at Brockville, when I thought I was at Belleville. Apparently I had overlooked a little matter of changing at Smith's Falls.

Any distinction between the two towns is hardly apparent anyhow, so I accepted my fate with fortitude, remembering the example of the oldest inhabitant of Medford, Oregon.

That aged philosopher hobbled aboard the train one day while I was bound from Sacramento to Portland. In one asthmatic breath he told me that he was 94, that he used to drive mules through the mountains, that he didn't hold with religion, cigarettes or women, and that he was going to California for a visit.

"But this train is going in the wrong direction," I protested. "We're going North to Portland."

"North or south, who cares?" said the old gaffer. "When a man gets to be my age, it don't matter which direction he travels." Then he happily settled down with a fresh cud of tobacco and a movie magazine.

I've never been able to feel the same detachment about travel; although I know a railroad in Ireland where most of the passengers are unconcerned about reaching a destination.

The Londonderry and Lough Swilly Railroad, which runs the 12 miles between Derry and Buncrana, is a joy in itself, even without its passengers. A toy engine and toy cars tear merrily back and forth on a three-foot narrow gauge, while pigs squeal and school children cheer.

It runs on peat, dug up from the fields bordering the track, and frequent stops are required to refuel. The refuelling points are always astonishingly close to a pub, so it's natural for passengers to stumble out for a glass of Guinness.

The railway company owns the bars in the various stations en route, so the Londonderry and Lough Swilly has never failed to pay handsome dividends. The system is simple, the longer the stops the higher the profits.

• • •

Sunday is the great day for travel, for half the population of Derry, where the pubs are closed, migrates to Buncrana, where the pubs are wide open.

The railway runs on an obliging principle. As long as there is a thirsty customer in the bar, the engine will wait. Not until the bar-tender serves the last passenger will the engineer blow his whistle. So then the train chugs along for another three miles, until it is time to restoke with peat and Guinness.

There is no such consideration for the passenger on Canadian railroads. Many are just as slow, but none is so thoughtful.

• • •

It once took me nearly a day to travel from Halifax to Shelburne. As dusk fell, an old man with a long white beard passed the train, lighting the lamps with a wand. I asked him why we stopped at every third telephone pole.

"It's Friday," he explained gruffly. "We got the meat car on. All the women are flaggin' the train to buy their week-end roasts."

WEDDINGS

CHAMBERS—FOX

On Saturday, March 29, a very quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. F. Walter Wentworth, when Wanda Doreen Fox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fox Mimico, became the bride of George Raymond Chambers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Chambers, Alderwood.

The bride looked charming in a lime green dress with corsage of American Beauty roses and sweetpeas.

Miss Wilma Fox was bridesmaid for her sister, wearing a mauve dress with corsage of sweetpeas and roses.

Mr. Clarke Chambers was the groomsman.

FURMIDGE—BUDREAU

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Cannifton United Church parsonage on February 17, 1947, when Marie Budreau, of Belleville, became the bride of Alfred Ray Furmidge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Furmidge of Corbyville.

The bride wore a floor length gown of coral taffeta with finger tip veil caught in place with gardenias. She carried an arm bouquet of ophelia roses. Mrs. Elgin Harris attended the bride gowned in a floor length model of baby pink with veil to match and wearing a shoulder bouquet of carnations. The groomsman was Mr. Elgin Harris.

After the ceremony a reception for the immediate relatives was held at the groom's home. Mrs. Furmidge received the guests gowned in navy faconne crepe with corsage of carnations, assisted by her daughter, Miss Flora Furmidge of Ottawa gowned in aquamarine with corsage of carnations.

The bride's table was centred with a large wedding cake flanked with tall pink and white tapers and bouquets of roses. The color scheme of the rooms were carried out in pink and white.

Later amid showers of confetti and best wishes the bride and groom left on a short trip.

The happy couple will reside in Corbyville.

Guests present were, Mr. and Mrs. W. Slingerland and Mr. Fred Harris of Roslin, Mr. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Harris, of Belleville.

NOYES—HORN

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mrs. Clayton Gilroy, 15 Brassey Street, on Saturday March 22nd at 4 o'clock by Mr. David Kirk of Stirling, Ont., when her brother Charles H. Noyes was married to Miss Bernice Horn of Alliston, Ont., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Horn of Alliston, Ont. The ceremony was performed under an arch of pink white and silver bells. The bride looked lovely in an Ocean blue suit matching hat and black shoes. She wore a corsage of sweet peas.

Miss Betty Aikens of Alliston, Ont., was her bridesmaid in pink dress, black hat and shoes. She wore a corsage of sweet peas. Harvey Noyes acted as groomsman for his brother. After the ceremony a reception was held by Mrs. Gilroy and Mrs. Stapley, after which the bride and groom left on a short trip. On their return they will reside in the city.

CHRISTENING AND PARTY

On Saturday evening March 29th the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Coxon was christened at Christ Church by the Rev. G. Sparling. It also being the occasion of the wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Coxon and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Coxon. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coxon, Charles St., entertained at a delightful party. The evening was spent playing euchre and bingo. The hostess served delicious refreshments. All voted Mr. and Mrs. Coxon ideal hosts. Guests present were Mr. and Mrs. W. Slingerland and family, Roslin, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Howell and family, Demorestville, Mr. G. Weese, Trenton and Mr. and Mrs. Johnston, Napanee.

W. Huntingdon Pastor Honored By Congregation

West Huntingdon —(Special)— A large number of the members of the West Huntingdon United Church and citizens of the surrounding community assembled at the church on Thursday evening to tender to Mr. Kenneth Stewart (the minister for the past eight years) an appreciation for his most efficient services. A short program was enjoyed with some old fashioned hymns being sung. A duet by Mrs. Clifford Green and Mrs. W. J. Fitchett (a former member). Mrs. J. C. Sills addressed the gathering on behalf of St. Andrew's Church; Mr. Barton Haggerty represented the community in a fine address and Mr. Philip Carr spoke concerning Mr. Stewart's work as minister of the United congregation. The Mission Band was represented by Gerald Cooke and Geo. Post. The Young People's Union by Alex McCurdy and Melbourne Moorcroft. The W. A. by Mrs. John Moorcroft and Mrs. Elmer Post. The congregation by Mr. Clifford Green and Mr. Elmer Post.

Each delegation read appropriate addresses and Mr. Stewart and his mother were remembered with substantial purses and other gifts.

Mr. Stewart gave a fine address and the meeting closed with the singing of "Blest Be The Tie That Binds." Mrs. W. J. Fitchett presided at the piano and Mr. Arthur Wilson performed the duties of chairman.

Point Anne H. & S. Club Holds Meeting

On Thursday, April 3rd the regular weekly assembly of the Point Anne Public School was held in the school auditorium with special Easter hymns and appropriate Scripture reading being provided to mark the closing of the term and the beginning of the Easter vacation.

A special feature of the program was an elimination contest to decide the winners of an amateur show conducted by the pupils at assemblies over a period of several weeks. The winners in the primary room were Lewana Maracle and Donna DeRushe in a song "She'll be Coming Round the Mountain." The prize for room 2 was won by a group of five girls, Beverley Jones, Dianne Whitehead, Donna Loft, Donalda Walkom and Janet Whitehead singing "I Had a Little Nut Tree." They were accompanied at the piano by Glenda Doxtator.

The winners in the senior room were Jean Bennett and Marilyn Hull playing a piano duet "The Bluebells of Scotland."

The Program

The following was the complete program (1) O Canada(one verse). (2) Christ the Lord is Risen Today, by the school. (3) Responsive Bible reading, John 20, led by Carol Jean MacLaurin. (4) The Lord's Prayer. (5) A Hymn "The Old Rugged Cross". (6) Piano duet, Jean Bennett and Merilyn Hull. (7) Song, The Old Lamplighter, Margie MacLaurin and Maureen Bowler. (8) Instrumental Chimes by Joan Cummings. (9) Song, Lewana Maracle, Donna DeRushe. (10) Song by Danny Bennett. (11) Song four girls Room 3. (12) Song, five girls from Grade 3. (13) Song by Donalda Walkom and Dianne Whitehead. (14) Remarks and presentation of the principal Mr. H. O. Walkom of Honor Roll to Miss Burke's room as the class having the highest percentage attendance for the month of March. (15) Closing prayer. (16) God Save the King.

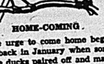
BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

BY WINIFRED E. WILSON



HOME-COMING

The urge to come home began way back in January when some of the ducks paired off and made arrangements for their trip north. Flycatchers also started early in the year, because they combine business and pleasure, which makes their progress slow. Catching insects as they go, their flight is quite unlike that of an arrow. All these birds are in danger of encountering bad weather, which will keep them back. Those that leave the south later often make better time.

No birds attempt to fly their fastest on migration. There is a great variation in the daily rate of speed. Seed eaters have to feed by daylight, which necessitates flying in the dark. The length of a night's flight depends on the proximity of their next "lunch-room"; but the distance covered each 24 hours averages more than that of most birds. Generally speaking, small species manage about 50 miles a day; but the Grey-cheeked Thrush is noted for the rapidity with which it travels: around 30 miles a day.

The Canada Goose is an example of regular migration: moving north at the same pace as the advance of spring. That is, one leaving Georgia February 10 would be near Chicago March 10, on the shores of James Bay by April 10, and settled in its northern breeding grounds, at the limit of trees, about the beginning of May.

Nearly all birds travel in company for protection. Flocks are now continually passing over us if their destination is farther north, or landing near us if this is "home." Mostly the older birds come first, and immediately make for their former territory. Many alight in the very bush or tree, on the same beam or rock, where they brought up a family last year. We are thrilled to find our friends returning: the White-throated Sparrow with the unusually high-pitched voice; then the tiny Wren that occupied a hole under the verandah roof: later our Catbird with one toe missing.

Males of most song birds arrive ahead of their wives. It is the male Robin, Song Sparrow, Rose-breasted Grosbeak and Scarlet Tanger that we see first. They have come to take possession of the territory where thew intend to set up housekeeping. Mr. Robin may not sing while he is house-hunting, but once he has made up his mind you will hear his cheerful voice.

FASHION IS THE NEWS

- Fashion is in a hat: a newly neat little hat that caps closely to the head, or a wide, ribboned and flower-burdened brim.
- Fashion is in a coat: a coat casual as a cloud, loose and easy and palely coloured, or fitting carefully as a dress, adroitly tucked and softly gathered.
- Fashion is in a suit: a suit with a dandy's mien—dapper and dashing, thin through the waist and sharply cut-away.
- Fashion is in a skirt; in a cigarette silhouette or the fluid flaring of pleats.
- Fashion is the new lengthening of a waistline, the new covering of a foot, the new narrowing of shoulders.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

We Can't All be Beautiful

There is a law of compensation. It applies to pulchritude, especially. One girl may have a pretty face, but her figure does not qualify. Another may rejoice in displaying a svelte, graceful frame, but she hates her hair. There isn't enough of it, and the color is nothing to write home about. Perfection of all the many details that form the composition of loveliness just isn't possible. There is usually a flaw somewhere. Or a girl thinks there is.

Nearly all women have some good features or elements of charm. If they are Plain Janes who sit on the side lines, while the good-looks parade marches by, it is because they haven't put their minds on the matter of improvement, or haven't discovered hidden, undeveloped good points. Perhaps the good point is a sweet voice, interesting hands, a graceful curve of the back, pretty ankles or dimpled elbows. It just doesn't happen that Mama nature short changes one to the point of absolute unattractiveness. She may be stingy with her gifts, but she does not overlook a girl completely.

Beautiful eyes are a precious inheritance, but shape and coloring are unnoticed if the eyes aren't sparkling bright with intelligence or good humor. The most beautiful hair that ever grew has no appeal unless it is shining clean and beautifully arranged.

Hands like little white butterflies—that's the kind Juliet had—are a gift of the fairy godmother. Beautiful tapering fingers. Nails like coral, shaped like almonds. Wunnerful! But what if they are neglected, aren't kept white and smooth? A beauty blessing gone to waste. They should move prettily. Knowing what to do with the hands, how to pose them gracefully in the lap or on chair arms, is something of an art. Hands can be vibrant or restful. So, you see, we ourselves make some of our good-looks graces.

There is usually a beauty flaw somewhere

There's many a pretty figure that is disguised by ill-fitting, poorly-selected attire. Or it is not carried splendidly. Or movements are awkward. A girl with a poor figure, but one who has lightness of step and who moves gracefully, appears more attractive than the lassie with the svelte shape who slouches or lopes or lets her shoulders fall forward.

Plain girls should turn their minds toward the acquisition of mental and spiritual loveliness which, after all, outshines physical assets. They can cultivate affability, gracious manners, a gentle voice, thoughtfulness—qualities that endear one to one's family and one's friends.

There are charm elements galore for those who seek them. Every woman can be perfectly groomed, if she will cultivate good taste in dress, keep her hair neatly and becomingly arranged.

Fashion Flashes

SWING VERSIONS of the classic suit is what one cutter calls the one-button classic jacket with long, curved, rippling hemline. Nicely interpreted in colorful gabardines with slim skirts slit at sides or front. Nice, too, with jacket and skirt of contrasting color.

MORE BEAUTIFUL than ever is the word on interior fashions. Termed either a hostess gown or a tea gown, one striking design is of silk sheer in nude pink or sky blue. The tucked yoke of the bodice terminates in a throat-tied neckline. Bishop sleeves have graceful fullness. Skirt is gathered into a wide sweep. Narrow gold or silver kidskin belt.

NEW LINES are forming in the evening dress section of the mode. A sheath of black taffeta is given animation by the slim skirt which is swath-draped and wrapped over to the hip, buttoning with rhinestones at that point. A full flounce of chenille-dotted net emphasizes the spiral line.

THE DOMINANT NOTE of the new spring bridal gowns is tradition, with emphasis on beautiful white silks and fine detail. Silk taffeta in creamy white is used for an effectve yet simple gown made with fitted basque bodice and long, tight sleeves. High neckline has keyhole cut-out and is trimmed with sunbursts of seed pearls.

TAKE A FLING at Spring with one of colorful suits now being shown. Mauve-pink woollen is used for a high-closed, double-breasted jacket teamed up with a light navy skirt. Fabric is wool crepe.

COMING BACK strong is the closed heel pump. New handling of such leathers as calf and calf-suede and new tanning processes assures a cool shoe even on a warm day.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Sensible Woman is Disturbed by Foolish Gossip

One of the most important things for anyone to learn is to ignore gossip. Particularly, when it concerns oneself.

There is nothing easier than to tell another person what to do. It is always a simplier matter to give a casual glance at somebody else's problem, see the solution immediately, and give advice that has not been sought by the person concerned.

Often, when some such unsought advice is given, even in the form of a casual remark, it is disturbing to the person to whom it was offered. It makes her question the soundness of what she is doing and wonder if she is doing right. As, for instance, in the case of the woman who has this problem:

"My family was quite poor and I could not go to high school and have a career like so many girls.

"I married at 15. I adopted a son a year after, and two years after that, I had a son of my own. I have a very good husband and my married life has been a happy one.

"Not long ago, I started going to night school. I want a career in business; that is, I want to be a stenographer. I love shorthand very much and my teacher told me I was very good at it. But last night she made a remark that made me unhappy. She said, 'How could you go to work and leave your two poor children alone?' Well, I wouldn't leave them alone. My baby is 5 and the oldest is 6 going on 7. My idea is to take this course, which will take me three years, and then have a career to help my husband give us a better home. Mother and Dad will be staying with us before long, and I hope to have a home of my own some day and security for my children. My husband does not object to my going to night school two nights a week.

"Do you think it is wrong of me to do this? I keep my house always spic and span and my children never have been neglected for a single moment. When I go to night school, either my mother or my husband stays with the children.

"Should I give up this stenographic course or not? This is the only thing I have really loved to do besides my housework and other things. Or don't you think I should improve myself in any way I can? I left school while still in the tenth grade."

Now this is a case where foolish gossip, in the form of a careless remark, has upset a very sensible woman and made her wonder if she is doing right.

Of course she is doing right. She is very wise to look ahead and plan as she is doing. And since she has an understanding husband who evidently also wants to plan wisely for the future, and since her children are in no way neglected, there is certainly no reason in the world why she should not continue going to night school and training herself for a regular job later on.

I would be the last person in the world to advocate any woman working outside the home when it meant that her children would suffer in any way. Obviously, this will not be the case with this mother, since her own parents would be home to look after the children.

The moral of this story is, as someone else has put it, "Be sure you are right; then go ahead". If you know that you have made a wise decision, don't let anything anyone else may say upset you. No one but yourself can know your own situation, and no one but yourself is in a position to judge what is the best thing for you to do. So have the courage of your convictions and do not be disturbed by what any uninformed person may say about the course you are pursuing.

Easter Card Signature When Husband is Overseas

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband is in the service, stationed in Germany. I have never before sent out Easter cards, but this year I feel an urge to do this, and I am wondering if it would be proper for me to include my husband's name when I sign these cards. (The cards will be sent to his relatives and mine, and to our mutual friends.)

M. N.

Yes, it would be proper for you to include your husband's name in the signature to these cards, and this would give the cards an added welcome as a greeting from your husband too. Naturally he would want to be included if he were at home. And, to make your cards even more personal, I suggest you add a message of explanation and greeting to the signatures: for example, "From Mary and Donald. Although Donald is far away (he is stationed in Germany) I know he will want me to include his Easter greetings with mine. So. . . .warmest greetings and dearest love to you all from both of us."

Special Wedding Problems

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Recently I had published the announcement of my daughter's engagement, and some of my relatives have reproved me for not having mentioned to the parents of my daughter's fiance the fact that I was going to make this public announcement. Was it necessary for me to make a point of talking this over with them? I don't know them very well, but they are very nice people, and of course I don't want to do anything that is not right.

2. It is to be a church wedding. Do I send invitations to all relatives of the prospective groom?

3. I suppose the wedding would be considered formal, as the bride is to wear a floor-length gown. At this type of daytime wedding, should I wear a street-length dress." I would like to wear a dressmaker suit, probably in black.

M. H.

1. There is no justification for your relatives to criticize what you did. . .it was not necessary for you to make a point of talking over with the family of your daughter's fiance the fact that you were planning to announce the engagement in the newspapers. They would probably take for granted that you would make this announcement.

2. The groom and or his mother give you the names and addresses of the relatives and friends they wish to have invited to the wedding, and you send invitations to these relatives and friends. Also the usual courtesy is for the bride-to-be or her mother, when the invitations arrive from the engraver, to send at once to the groom's parents a packet containing several of the invitations, for the parents to see and to save as keepsakes.

3. If the bride wears a floor-length dress, with no train, and a short veil, her wedding is considered semi-formal, and "the mothers", the bride's mother and the groom's mother, may wear either floor-length dresses or, if preferred, street-length dresses. But it is not considered proper for either mother to wear a black dress.

After the Brush-off, Shall She Write Him?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a girl of 19. About a year ago I had quite a few dates with a boy, for about two months. After a while, and for no reason that I could figure out, he stopped seeing me. Recently I learned through some friends of his that he is in the Army and is overseas. Would it be proper for me to obtain his address through some of his friends and write a friendly letter to him?

D. L.

Since this boy stopped seeing you and with no explanation and since he didn't even get in touch with you before he went overseas, I think you will have to be realistic and face the fact that he doesn't wish to continue the friendship. Even if you haven't his address, he has yours (I judge) . . . and he'll use it if he wishes to.

Here's something new and different. The merchants advertising on this page are co-operating in a contest which gives its readers an opportunity of winning a weekly prize of $5.00. Here's how you win: Each week in one of the advertisements a word will be "Scrambled." Read the advertisements, find the scrambled word, unscramble it, and send it with the name of the advertiser in whose ad. it appeared to the "Contest Editor," Ontario Intelligencer, Box 190, Belleville. All answers must be in by the THURSDAY following publication, and winner will be announced the next week in the Business Directory. The winner will be drawn from among the correct answers, and a cheque for $5.00 mailed promptly. No member of the staff of the Ontario Intelligencer or their families are eligible for a prize.

THE WINNER IN LAST WEEK'S DIRECTORY CONTEST IS:
CHARLES BRADY
MARMORA - ONTARIO

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

by SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

He has no one with whom to play. The reason does not strike him. He has no enemies. Okay. But all his friends dislike him.

Any player with a grain of sense will agree with friends in a bridge game. After all, what are friends for if not to have someone for whom you can enjoy making sacrifices.

Some of their ideas are positively revolting. Agreeing with them goes against the grain. So what. It is more important to win friends than to influence a few tricks in a card game.

Your partner in the south opens with a heart. West comes in with a defensive bid of two diamonds. Find yourself with this north hand:

♠J 9 5 3
♥Q 6 5 4 2
♦7 4 3
♣6

What is your response? Should you pass or bid two hearts? You have three tricks; a queen and two short cards in clubs. Your hearts certainly are good enough for support in that suit. What about it?

A responding bidder shows three tricks inclusive of two high cards. You have the three tricks. But not the two high cards. Thus, you do not have the correct requirements for a responding bid.

Even with such strong heart support, you should pass. Your pass may not please your partner. If he ends at too low a final contract, he may criticize you for not bidding.

Are you going to disagree with him? Are you going to pull out your book to show that it is not a bid? If you do, he may dislike you for it. It isn't worth it.

What to do about it? Simply say "I'm sorry." It will be the truth. You are sorry. What you are sorry for is that he does not know that you were correct in passing.

In the midst of a bridge game is no place to teach a partner. No player thinks much of advice unless he pays for it.

WOMAN BRUTALLY BEATEN

St. Catharines, April 5 (CP)—Mrs. H. K. Woodruff, elderly St. Catharines widow was brutally beaten last night by a man who stole an undetermined amount of money from her Ontario Street home. She was taken to St. Catharines General Hospital where she was treated for a possible fractured jaw and face and ear lacerations.

LAST OF NINE CAPTURED

New York, April 5 (AP)—The last of nine convicts who escaped Raymond Street jail in a mass break January 2 was captured yesterday, nonchalantly standing on a busy downtown Brooklyn Street corner. The convict, scar-faced Anthony Adello, 36, a convicted slayer, was identified by fingerprints.

AT THE CAPITOL—Gary Cooper, star of Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Adventures of Marco Polo," and supported by Basil Rathbone, Lana Turner and Sigrid Gurie, opens Monday at the Capitol. On the same program James Oliver Curwood's "Neath Canadian Skies," stars Russell Hayden and Inez Cooper. Matinee daily all this week.

AT THE CAPITOL — Russell Hayden, well known western and feature star, portrays the role of a Northwest Canadian Mountie in the Golden Gate Pictures film "Neath Canadian Skies," opening Monday at the Capitol. On the same program "The Adventures of Marco Polo," starring Gary Cooper and a cast of thousands. Matinee daily all this week.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Clark Gable, on vacation between "The Hucksters" and "The Homecoming of Ulysses," is in Canada on a hunting trip. The "The King's" noted ability for keeping his holidays secret that is all the information that has leaked out.

The bet is that he has headed back to the Prairie Provinces where he has been in the past.

N. F. B. Lists 142 Films.

The National Film Board lists 142 films in its new catalogue, of 16 mm. movies, the largest number they have had on tap to date.

They range from a four-reel documentary in color about the life in a French-Canadian village, "Alexis Tremblay, Habitant," to a series of one-reelers on how to prevent accidents in industry. In between the films cover Canadian industry, scenery, arts and sports, business and the services.

The Hollywood Lot.

Irene Dunne is being considered for the lead in "Britannia Mews" . . . and Jimmy Stewart is the likely one to play the "young man" in "Young Man With a Horn," Dorothy Baker's story about jazz.

The musical screen version of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court" will star Bing Crosby against a background of the Richard Rodgers-Lorenz Hart music of the stage version produced in Broadway in 1943.

John Garfield, who has just finished "Body and Soul," will be starred next in "Volpone, the Fox," an adaptation of the 16th century comedy by Ben Jonson.

HORNETS SQUARE SERIES BEATING HERSHEY BEARS

Only One Minute and 18 Seconds to Play When Winning Goal Scored

Hershey, Pa., April 5 (CP)—The fighting Pittsburgh Hornets came from behind to upset Hershey Bears 3-2 Thursday night and even their best of seven American Hockey League playoff finals at one victory each.

The Bears took the lead in the first period, lost it in the second and then tied the count in the third period. With less than two minutes to play Wally Wilson, N. S., got the puck and, with the entire Hershey team caught down the ice, skated deep into Bear territory to rifle the winning goal into the net.

Late in the second period, Gordie Bruce, Bears' star left winger was carried from the ice unconscious when he crashed into the goal posts.

He returned in the third period to score the Bears' goal that tied the score.

The Bears took the lead in the first period when big Babe Pratt smashed through the Hornets defence and passed to Don (The Count) Grosso who drove the puck squarely into the centre of the net.

Stan Kemp was banished at the start of the second period. The Hornets responded with a drive and, despite their manpower shortage, tied the count when Bill Benson fired from behind the Bears' net. The puck struck Gordie Henry's skates and bounded back for the goal that gave the Hornets their first goal of the series against Hershey.

Jackie Hamilton put the Hornets in front when Henry cleared a long shot badly. Two plays later a free-for-all fight sent Frank Mario, of the Bears, and Kemp to the penalty box. Dutch Hiller drew a penalty for tripping and banged the ice with his stick in protest. That was good for a misconduct penalty.

The Bears struck hard at the opening of the third period and deadlocked the count at 9:52 on Bruce's goal. With one minute and 18 seconds to play, the Hornets neatly trapped the Bears down the ice. Wilson, standing unguarded took a pass and with a few quick strides was in position to fire the winnig shot.

FORT WORTH WINS

(By The Associated Press)

Fort Worth Rangers called on a tight defence to stop the Kansas City Pla-Mors 2-1 last night in the United States Hockey League playoffs. The series resumes at Fort Worth Sunday night.

Freddie Weaver knocked in a rebound shot in the first period and Vernon (Wimpy) Jones chalked up the second goal for the winners in the second stanza.

The victory left Kansas City with a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series to determine the opponent for Omaha Knights in the league final playoffs. If the Rangers make another game necessary by winning Sunday night the series will conclude in Fort Worth Tuesday.

CANADIENS READY FOR CUP FINAL, BEAT BRUINS 4-3

John Quilty and Rocket Richard Heroes of 37-Minute Overtime Victory

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Apr. 5 (CP). — The world champion Montreal Canadiens, National Hockey League champions four years in a row and Stanley Cup winners two out of the last three years, were all set today for the cup final again, though it took them nearly 97 minutes of hard, bruising hockey to subdue Boston Bruins 4-3 in overtime Thursday night and sweep their semi-final, best-of-seven series by four games to one.

Canadiens' victory, before a roaring hometown crowd of 12,658, sent them into the Cup final against either Toronto Maple Leafs or Detroit Red Wings, who are still battling in the other semi-final bracket.

Johnny Quilty, a Calder trophy rookie award winner with Canadiens six years ago, sniped the winning goal at the 16.40 mark of the second sudden-death overtime session, smashing home a rebound from the post after Jimmy Peters and old Murph (Hardrock) Chamberlain took whacks at the rubber.

Richard Gets Three Points

He shared stardom with Montreal's Rocket Richard, whose two goals in the third period—one with two minutes to go—deadlocked the game twice and sent it into extra time. He also collected an assist.

Veteran Toe Blake, one of the standout players on the ice despite his aging legs, gathered a goal and two assists, his goal putting Canadiens into the lead in the second period.

A pair of counters by Joe Carveth and Milt Schmidt, the Boston jack-of-all-trades who played practically every position except goal last night, put Bruins ahead within a span of 22 seconds in the middle frame.

Then Richard's first counter tied it up, Kennedy Smith put Bruins ahead again, and the rocketing Frenchman tied it again with his third score of the series.

Thursday night's game was the second overtime session of the series, the round duplicated last year's cup final when Canadiens trounced Boston by the same 4-1 count.

A Tense Struggle

While Thursday night's game was not the longest overtime session on record, it was a tense struggle from beginning to end. The longest playoff game on record was played in the Forum here March 24, 1936, when Detroit Red Wings and Montreal Maroons battled 176 minutes and 30 seconds. Mud Bruneteau scored the winning goal, and only goal of the game, at 16.30 of the sixth overtime session.

Though Canadiens are in the final again, Coach Dick Irwin of Canadiens wasn't any too happy about it all.

"It's going to be tough any way you look at it," said the glum skipper, pointing to Kenny Mosdell's broken arm and Kenny Reardon's severed tendon that may keep him out of the first games of the final if not the entire series.

The Canadiens players hadn't much choice about the team they'd meet in the final. "They'll both be tough," said Bill Durnan, Vezina trophy winning goalie of the Canadiens.

Battle To Last Ditch

Though tiring badly toward the end of the gruelling overtime session, Bruins battled to the last ditch and for a time looked as though they would send the series back to Boston for a sixth game Saturday.

Goalie Frankie Brimsek, the pre-war Mr. Zero of the N.H.L. sparkled for the beantown crew as he kicked out 54 shots and took plenty of punishment, in pile ups and scrambles.

In the third period, Roger Leger of Canadiens came swooping in and slashed Brimsek over the shoulders, breaking his stick, Terry Reardon piled into Leger and Brimsek came out swinging at the husky defenceman.

Leger and Reardon drew penalties and as they entered the penalty box Reardon started to send a few choice cuss words at Leger. Referee Bill Chadwick skated over and warned him, "It'll cost you $25 if you open your mouth."

Reardon subsided.

BASKETBALL

New York, April 3 — (AP) — The Basketball Association of America playoffs started off in upset fashion last night with Chicago Stags' 81-65 triumph over Washington Capitols the biggest surprise of the three opening-round contests.

At Cleveland, the Rebels came up with their best game of the year to wallop New York Knickerbockers 77-51 in the inaugural of the best-of-three third-place playoff. Philadelphia Warriors with Joe Fulks turning in a new unofficial pro scoring record of 1,406 points, turned back St. Louis Bombers 73-68 as the best-of-three series of the second-place finishers got under way.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

Canadian sport suffered a keen loss the other day when death wrote the last thirty to the life of J. P. Fitzgerald, revered sports editor of the Toronto Evening Telegram. While we had only a speaking acquaintance with the late dean of Canadian sports editors, we, in our niche "in the sticks" so to speak, stood afar and respected his written opinions. He was not the flamboyant type of writer so popular today, but his theme was common sense. He was beloved by his staff. That is easy to understand. And he will be missed not only by them but by sportdom as a whole. The Fourth Estate, especially in his chosen sphere, can ill afford to lose men of the type of the late J.P.

* * *

It is altogether fitting that baseball and its followers should join in honoring Babe Ruth with a special day on Sunday, April 27, and Commissioner A. B. Chandler is to be commended for proclaiming this tribute to the Bambino, says the Sporting News.

* * *

The focus of the Ruth festival will be the park he built, and the field he made famous—Yankee Stadium. It is hoped that the Babe will be able to attend the ceremonies in the Stadium, which will feature a coast-to-coast broadcast honoring him that will very likely be hooked up with all other ball parks, major and minor.

* * *

However, there is a chance to make Ruth Day something more than a mere expression of good wishes to the Babe and the occasion should be turned into an event signalizing opportunities for other boys who, like Ruth, started as under-privileged lads.

* * *

Every league or club could select, in highlighting the occasion, an orphan youth, with diamond talent, who wants to make a career of the game. The selection could be made through a contest, or through some other type of award, and the boy or boys could be present at the ceremonies on Babe Ruth Day in each park. An announcement that the lads thus selected would be sent to a baseball school, or taken on a training trip of the local club next spring, would strike a responsive chord in the hearts of all fans, and would represent an appropriate tribute to Babe Ruth, the orphan who became a diamond hero.

* * *

If only one future star were discovered by this method, then Babe Ruth Day in 1947 would long be remembered as a fitting memorial to the man who, more than any other, proved that any boy, no matter how humble his origin, can win notion-wide action.. on the basis of ability alone.

* * *

The Border League will play a 120-game schedule this season, four more contests than originally planned, as a result of action taken at a meeting in Ottawa March 22. The season was extended to September 10, instead of ending o. Labor Day, with playoffs starting September 12. Play will start with Watertown at Auburn, Geneva at Kingston and Ogdensburg at Ottawa, May 14.

For once the Peterborough Omemees and the Belleville Reds are in harmony. Mental, that is. For the Petes bowed to the Georgetown squad 4-3 the other night in a heartbreaking battle that the Crowe-Kingdon crew had in the bag until the dying minutes. Which recalls the battle here a few weeks ago when our Redskins and the Petes, town goals down with minutes to go, and then lost the brawl in overtime. Ah, 'tis a sad, sad feeling. How different when it "happens to you"'. However the Petes were a starry squad that lost only one game during the season, and that one, a playoff joust.

So cheer up, little Peters,
don't you cry,
You'll win a title bye and bye,
So pack the gear—and stop

Jackie Robinson, striving to win a promotion to the Dodgers, boasted a cool .519 average in exhibition games as the Montreal Royals arrived in Havana, Cuba, to resume training following their Panama jaunt. The Negro infielder, now cavorting at first base belted four bingles in five trips, March 21, as the Royals wound up their seven-game series with a 25 to 7 win over the Canal Zone All-Stars. Infielder John Jorgensen contributed two homers and Mike Sandlock one to the heavy assault. Robinson's blows gave him 28 hits in 54 official trips, including two homers and seven doubles. He also scored 15 runs and stole five bases.

Cornish Knight And Windfields Start at Jamaica

(By The Canadian Press)

Two Canadian-owned horses will help usher in the 1947 New York racing season today when 50,000 fans assemble for the start of the 189-day campaign. The two are Windfields and Cornish Knight, both owned by E. P. Taylor of Toronto. Windfields, Canadian-bred son of Bunty Lawless, is entered in the $16,000 six-furlong Paumonok, feature race of the day. While Cornish Knight, an American bred, is entered in the co-feature, the Cedar Manor.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 5 — (CP)—After thumbing through a magazine piece by Jim (Globe and Mail) Coleman on honesty in professional hockey, Mike (Kingston Whig-Standard) Rodden, comments: "If games have ever been fixed or thrown Jim was not informed about goings-on before or after and thus he has elected to carry the torch in a noble cause."

In Mike's view, few sports enterprises have escaped the inroads made by the gambling gentry "but only a minimum of scandals has reached the light of exposure." The paying public believed what it desired to believe and "relative to charges of chicanery demands to be shown — or else."

Get-rich-quick wagering Wallingfords have become a bit "Caponeish" in modern sport, Mike holds. These "obnoxious individuals are not eveh honest gamblers because they bet only on sure-things." They have no higher social standing "than that allotted to common thieves."

In his article, Coleman mentioned the case of the late Lorne Chabot, one of the greatest goaltenders of all time, who when approached by a sure-thing gambler in New York immediately exposed the scheme to the management of the New York Rangers.

Says Rodden: "Chabot, in thus being honest, was applauded but in the evening of his life when he lay dying in a Montreal hospital and his family financially distressed, he was practically abandoned."

As a player and honest man Chabot left a lasting mark "but the wealthy N.H.L. owners did not keep pace with him relative to the important matter called 'gratitude.' "

Unchanged by Time

Remember how the fans used to boo Gordie Drillon when he refused to backcheck as a member of Toronto Maple Leafs? Well, their still hooting the big fellow for the same reason, only in Charlottetown they don't pay as much for the privilege.

But Alex (Halifax Herald) Nickerson reveals that the lazy-skating right winger still has the knack of pumping goals into the nets, even if the opposing goalies are only of intermediate calibre.

"These days, if a puck carrier comes within reach, Gordie will swing his stick. but Nickerson says if the player is a scant six inches "beyond his rocking-chair position, Drillon is not interested in going after him."

JOE PAGE DIES

Montreal, April 5 —(CP)— Joe Page, who came to be known as Canada's Mr. Baseball although he was born in Chicago, died here Thursday night after a lengthy illness. He was about 80.

A former Major League catcher wiht Indianopolis in the old National League, Page came to Canada in 1889, settling in Montreal. He worked with the Canadian Pacific Railway from 1892 until he retired in 1937.

South Porcupine Kiwanians Win First of Series

St. Catharines, April 4 (CP)—South Porcupine Kiwanis Hockey team, juvenile "A" champions of the N.O.H.A., last night defeated St. Catharines Lions by a 6-3 score in the first game of the playoffs for the Ontario championship.

Outstanding star of the game was Ivan McLelland, goaltender for the Northerners who stopped almost anything pumped at him. St. Kitts failed close in around the nets in contrast to the performance of the Porcupiners who had precision to burn when close in.

Dusty Blair, younger brother of Huck Blair of the Oshawa Generals and Gord Hannigan, brother of Ray of Toronto St. Michaels showed a lot of power on the attack for the visitors. Buck O'Hearn and Meloni scored for St. Kitts.

Leafs Score Twice on 7 Shots To Defeat Detroit Red Wings In Fourth Game of Playoff Series

Final Score 4-1 and Toronto Can Take it All by Winning Saturday Night

Detroit, April 5 — (CP)—Barring a miracle, it's Toronto Maple Leafs against Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup final.

Canadiens entered the final by beating Boston Bruins for their fourth win out of five games, and Toronto Leafs walloped the Red Wings here by 4-1 in the fourth game of their semi-final. That result here game Toronto a lead of 3-1 in games, and if Leafs win Saturday night in Toronto the final is all set.

The Detroit team battled an unusually methodical and cool Toronto outfit in the fourth game here Thursday night. A crowd of 14,577 saw Leafs score twice on only seven shots on the Detroit goal in the first two periods, then add two easy goals in the final. Meantime Detroit's only goal was scored in the second period.

The Wings travel to Toronto for the fifth game Saturday night. They can prolong the series, but to win it they'll have to take 3 straight victories.

It was a comparatively tame encounter here Thursday night in contrast to the earlier Toronto-Detroit play-offs. On four occasions an advantage affected the scoring was in the second period when Roy Conacher tallied Detroit's only goal. Jimmy Thomson and Bill Barilko were in the cooler at the time.

Meeker Scores Two

Howie Meeker scored two of the Toronto goals, one being the only score of the first period, and the other coming midway of the final frame. Ted Kennedy scored in the second, and Captain Syl Apps scored on a solo effort in the finale.

Sample of the calculating play served up by the visitors was the fact that Red Almas had only 14 saves in the Detroit net, while Toronto's goalie Turk Broda turned aside 21 shots.

The Wings were handicapped by loss of star centre Sid Abel, who was suffering from pleurisy. Detroit used defenceman Bill Quackenbush sparingly, he having suffered a twisted knee in Tuesday's game. Leafs were at full strength.

Leaf defenceman Garth Boesch was cracking up the ice in the 1st period and was awarded an assist, with Mortson, on Meeker's first goal. It was Boesch who had the first shot on the Detroit nets after eight minutes of the first period.

WINNIPEG WINS EASILY

Regina, April 5 —(CP)— Winnipeg St. Andrews easily defeated Regina Vets 82-46 here last night in the first of a two-game, total-point senior men's interprovincial basketball series. The second game will be played here tomorrow night and the winner proceed into the next round of the Western playoffs.

HAMILTON TIGERS HOLD GAME EDGE OVER HOLLINGER

Win by 2-0 Shutout but Goalie Childs Sustains Five-Stitch Cut Over Eye

Timmins, Ont., April 5—(CP)—The old Hamilton Tigers had the edge over Hollinger Greenshirts today as the teams prepared for tonight's fourth game in their best-of-five series for the all-Ontario senior hockey championship. Tigers won last night's game 2-0, taking a lead of 2-1 in games.

Veteran Art Childs in the Hamilton nets earned his shutout the hard way, sticking his head in front of a fast-travelling Hollinger puck and requiring five stitches to close a cut over the right eye.

The Greenshirts were always on the aggressive but they lacked finishing power around the nets. The Tigers meanwhile seemed content to let the play come to them and capitalize on breakaways.

Bert Peer got the first Hamilton goal at 2:09 of the second period on Swat Mason's assist, and the other came from Clarence Shillington, with assists from John Conick and Laurent, at 11:17 of the third period.

Although the game got rough at times only four penalties were awarded, two minors to each side.

If Hollinger can tie up the series tonight, the fifth and deciding game will be at Hamilton Monday.

Strange Procession Toiled Thru Dark Streets of Athens

By FRANK O'BRIEN

Athens, April 5 —(AP)— A strange procession toiled through the dark streets of Athens early this morning, in sad rehearsal for the funeral tomorrow of King George II.

To the lonely, measured beat of a single drum, Greek sailors slowly tugged a 5½-ton gun carriage — which Sunday will bear the body of the dead monarch—to the outskirts of the city.

Harnessed to the carriage by stout Manila ropes were 102 Greek sailors, while 56 others were similarly harnessed to drag lines in the rear. The procession continued exactly 101 minutes.

The officer in charge said it was a dress rehearsal for the funeral march Sunday morning from Athens Cathedral. After the service inside the cathedral, King George's body will be placed on the gun carriage and, while a 101-gun salute is fired at one-minute intervals, the sailors will draw it about five miles to a point at which a hearse is to meet the procession.

The hearse will carry the body to Tatoi, about 15 miles north of Athens, for burial. The late King, who died unexpectedly Tuesday, was born at Tatoi.

Rocky Graziano Will Apply For Reinstatement

By SID FEDER

New York, April 5 — (AP) — Rock-a-bye Rocky Graziano, who had his New York boxing licence revoked for not reporting a "fix" offer he didn't accept, is back in training again, and there's a chance a movie camera, as well as another fellow's fists, may be taking shots at his chin before long.

It is two months now since the New York State Athletic Commission ruled him off, so he's taking it easy as he starts back up the road. He had the book thrown at him for virtually the same offence which drew only a 30-day suspension for another fighter — welterweight champ Ray Robinson.

Even Rocky, who admits he hustled and finally made the 4th grade in grammar school, figures that doesn't add up. So some time in the next couple of weeks, he's going to ask the commission to make him a member in good standing again.

Meantime, once Rocky gets the feel of nose-smashing again, he'll have three or four warm-ups around and about to get heated up for middleweight champion Tony Zale. If that bout blows up, though, he'll campaign around the countryside, all the way to California — which is where those movie cameras come in.

A week or so ago, a Hollywood agent, Jack Beekman, said he was interested in having Graziano make a picture.

Sports Roundup

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 5 —(CP)— One of the few things it's safe to say about the 1947 Kentucky Derby at this early date is that the province of Alberta is almost sure to get a piece of publicity out of it somewhere along the line . . . With the running of the Blue Grass classic just a month away, two jockeys who were born and raised in Alberta appear certain to have mounts that will carry a lot of support at Churchill Downs when the band plays "My Old Kentucky Home" . . . Doug Dodson, a native of Westlock who learned to ride in Oregon, is contract rider for the powerful Calumet Farm owned by Warren Wright of Chicago and will have his choice between fervent and faultless, both right up there with W. G. Helis' Cosmic Bomb as early favorites in the winter book.

Current and Choice.

The other Alberta-grown pilot is 27-year-old Al Snider of Calgary, finally getting the breaks after nine years in the saddle . . . Currently leading rider at Gulfstream Park in Florida, Snider has given Wright first call on his services and thus may ride either Fervent or Faultless, depending on Dodson's choice . . . If only one of the Calumet pair starts, Snider will be aboard either Phalanx or Bastogne, owned by C. V. Witney . . . Phalanx, a distance-loving son of Pilate-Jacola, is touted by many horsemen as the "solid" choice for the Derby.

Into the Past.

It's hard to get off the subject of jockeys and Alberta without a nostalgic reference to the late Georgie Woolf, of Cardston, Alta., killed in a spill in January, 1945, at Santa Anita . . . Some racing men didn't like "The Iceman," as Woolf was called, but none questioned his courage and his fire . . . Only the other day in Aiken, S.C., horseman Ed. Christmas was talking about Woolf and he had this to say: "Man, he could ride! People didn't like him, a lot of them didn't, but they didn't understand him. He was a sick boy . . . He had diabetes. Why, when we'd drive out to the track in the morning he'd sit there, with his head down like this, and I'd say, 'Georgie, you all right.' 'Yeah, he'd say, I'm all right.' His wife carried insulin and he'd take that and he'd be all right. But people didn't understand him . . ."

BELL TO HAND DOWN DECISION ON TWO PLAYERS

Filchock and Hapes Will Have Cases Decided by Commissioner

Philadelphia, April 3 (AP) — Bert Bell will rule today on the disposition of Frank Filchock and Merle Hapes, two New York Giants football players involved in the biggest sports scandal since the 1919 baseball world series.

The National Football League Commissioner's pronouncement of the fate of the two Giant backfield aces follows by one day the sentence of three men for their part in the attempt to fix the league's championship game last December.

Sentenced to prison terms by Judge Saul S. Streit in New York were David Krakauer, Harvey Stemmer and Jerome Zarowitz. They had been convicted of testimony of Alvin J. Paris of scheming with Paris to offer bribes to Filchock and Hapes.

Streit sentenced Krakauer and Stemmer to terms of five to 10 years and gave Zarowitz an indeterminate sentence with a three-year maximum. Paris, who also has been convicted, will be sentenced Monday.

Testimony at the trial disclosed that Filchock and Hapes were offered bribes of $2,500 and $1,000 bets in their names as well as lucrative off-season jobs if they would "lay down" in the Giants' championship game with the Chicago Bears.

Both Filchock and Hapes testified they refused the offers. Filchock was permitted to play in the Giants-Bears game but Hapes was ordered suspended. Since that time Bell has placed both men on the suspended list.

TWO CHILDREN BURNED

Columbus, O., April 5 (AP)—Two children perished Friday and seven others were burned, four critically, in a flash fire swept through a crowded, five-room foster home.

Mrs. Vivian Thompson, 30, and her husband, Harold 36, who operated the boarding house and charged a weekly fee for the children's keep, were injured. Mrs. Thompson's condition is serious.

The State Welfare Department declaring the couple had violated the law by housing more than the two juvenile boarders their licence permitted, launched an investigation.

Q.A.S.A. ELECTS PRESIDENT KING FOR SECOND TERM

G. H. Campbell of Oshawa Named Chairman of the Sub-Committee

St. Catharines, April 5 (CP) — The 25th annuadl convention of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association, at a meeting here yesterday lifted the suspensions on Pat MacKean, Roy Hickey and Jack Brick, all of Hamilton, Manager Bruce Fairley of Hamilton and reduced the suspension of Ernest Pelango of Hamilton from three years to one.

O. H. King, of Simcoe, Association President, announced 55 affiliations and 33 associations were under jurisdiction of the O.A.S.A., and that 80 delegates were present at the convention.

In a four-hour session the association handled 44 amendments to the constitution, chief of which was the request of the Northern Ontario Association to have control of all Northern Ontario territory and Northern Quebec. The request was referred to the incoming executive, elected later in the day.

The new executive, raised in number this year from three to six, will also decide resolutions on the reinstatement or professional softballers as amateurs, and will supervise expansion of the association in Ontario. The sub-committee is to be raised from five to seven, making the parent executive 12 in number.

A motion from the Sarnia delegation to have the secretary-treasurer appointed instead of elected was defeated.

Rulings Accepted

Other rulings made at today's meeting include: In future 15 players can be signed to a team, and a manager and coach; O.A.S.A. rules committee will hereafter meet by Nov. 1 to draft rules for next convention; a Toronto request to have bantam and midget classes added to O.A.S.A. affiliation was granted; no smoking is to be allowed on the bench at league games; the association will pay $50 expenses for all minors travelling more than 100 miles one way to a game in semi-finals and finals; the protest committee is to be headed by the president and secretary; office aides are to be remunerated $400 a season; Hamilton's request to raise the age limit of 21 for junior and 19 for juvenile was refused; cities of 150,000 or more were ruled to be metropolitan areas.

The association is operating on a solid basis and in a progressive manner, it was stated in report presented to the meeting. F. P. Feaver, Secretary, and W. L. Alguire, Treasurer, said 1946 was a year of "amazing progress and remarkable growth of the organization."

Officers Elected

Election of officers was held with the following results: Hon. President, S. H. Armstrong, Toronto; Hon. Vice-President, H. S. Briggs, Hamilton; Immediate Past President, G. H. Spooner, Galt; President, O. H. King, Simcoe (re-elected); First Vice-President, E. A. Simpson, Kingston (re-elected); Second Vice-President, G. H. Campbell, Oshawa; Secretary, F. R. Feaver, Hamilton (accl); Treasurer, W. L. Alguire, St. Catharines (accl).

Executive Committee: D. G. Smith, Toronto; J. R. Brush, Sarnia; H. Winter, Brantford; C. S. Lewis, Toronto; E. Wilkin, Hamilton; J. Garrett, Simcoe. Executive appointed by President; O. Pierce, Trenton; F. Griffin, Peterboro; B. M. Clarke, Fort Erie; J. E. Thomas, Meaford; J. Brew, London; A. F. Tissington, Orillia.

Auditors: R. Horning and A. C. Webster, Hamilton.

Sub-Committee: G. H. Campbell, Oshawa; Chairman, D. G. Smith, Toronto; H. Winter, Brantford; E. Wilkin, Hamilton; J. Garrett, Simcoe; F. R. Feaver, Hamilton; W. L. Alguire, St. Catharines.

Rules Committee: C. S. Lewis, Chairman, Toronto; J. Brush, Sarnia; G. H. Spooner, Galt; F. R. Feaver, Hamilton; W. L. Alguire, St. Catharines.

The age limit for bantams was set at under 14 and midgets under 16, both on May 1 of playing year.

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 8

Look straight at Carol ,she said, "It was bound to happen. And as soon as people get used to the idea they won't think any more about it. Just now they have elastic in their necks, the fools! But if you can stick it out tonight ...It's like licking a fever, darling. You've got to. You are not going to let her drive you out."

Scott said, "Let's dance, Carol. Maybe they won't stay."

She did not look at anyone, but she knew that everyone was looking at her as she got up and left the dining-room and crossed the hall to the ballroom. Shaking and hot, she put her hand on Scott's shoulder and held it tightly.

"Take it easy," he said.

She nodded. Was there ever a dance like this before? Was there ever a moment like this before? Dear God, let me live through this and I can live through anything! Put a smile on my face and strength in my body. Hold my heart together, for it is turning into tears...It's as if I were naked ...Emotionally I am...Nothing is as cruel as stripping someone into emotion nakedness...It's cruel...cruel...If you can hate, you can laugh and fight back... But when you are too hurt to hate...

Scott said, "It's the lousiest."

"Don't. That doesn't help..."

"It still is. He's crazy to pull a thing like this. He's lost all sense of juctice and decency to—to humiliate."

"He belongs here. He has a right to come with his wife. Have they—have they stopped looking at me, Scott?" Everything was so blurred.

"Most of them Ian and Freda have just come in and they've gone to a table. Would you..."

"Yes, I would."

When she reached the table and sat with her back to the dancers, Ian and Freda and Scott tried to make conversation. It was pitiful, their attempts to appear casual and normal and to divert her. She did not know how long she sat there stiffly with the music pouring over her.

And after what seemed an incredibly long time of sitting in one position she moved slightly and, turning her head, saw Bill dancing with Evelyn...There had been other moments which she had thought could not be surpressed in pain and hurt...But this surpassed them all...She saw Bill first..Saw his lashes flicker to cover his shamed eyes and the pained smile that made his expression a wry grimace.

Carol didn't smile. She sat there hurting all over, and looked at Evelyn, wearing the black chiffon dress which did not conceal the long lovely lines of her, at her sleek dark head and at the beautifully rounded shoulder touching Bill's. Evelyn, vivid, exotic, a smoldering sort of girl, incredibly lovely, understandably desirable.

She looked at Bill again and a series of pictures flashed...Bill, boyish, tender, ardent...Bill who could not bear to have an enemy ...Bill sometimes selfish and at other times unselfish beyond all reason...Bill who liked blue shirts and blue pajamas and brown tweeds, who liked scrambled eggs for his breakfast and who was still childishly addicated to ice cream...Bill who permitted minor issues to upset him terribly, but who met major ones with strength and often with humor... And their young love and their young passion and seven years of marriage had brought them to this.

She lowered her eyes and looked away, but presently when she had to see him again, she saw him and Evelyn stop at Dee and Johnny's table. Dee was her friend, Carol's friend, but Johnny worked for Bill's company though in a lesser capacity than Bill. What other course had Dee than to be extremely cordial to Evelyn Bill could have Johnny fired if he chose.

Carol said, and there was bitter humor in her voice, "If I've successfully passed my examination, I'd like to go home. I'm sorry for putting you all through such a miserable time."

Scott said, "That's okay. I'm ready to leave."

Freda said, and it was one of the few times she had ever seen Freda look defeated, "I'll call you tomorrow."

Ian said, "You're a good sport, Carol. You can take it."

When Carol and Scott left, Freda said, "it was cruel—cruel. I didn't think Bill was cruel."

Ian said gently, "He doesn't think he is. Being a man and a practical one, he thinks that Carol, young and pretty with plenty of money, should be sensible. There is nothing quite as dead as a dead love."

"You call that love?" Freda asked, dark eyes flashing. "You men..You're always talking about being practical and about its being your world and look at it ...Just look at it."

Ian smiled and stroked his chin. "It's a mess. Since we agree, we can't argue, honey."

"Let's go home. I've had enough of this."

"Always my sensible little mama."

In Scott's car Carol said, "You're embarrassed, I don't blame you. She has driven me out, Scott. I'll have to resign my membership. Either do that or continue to go out there and be thrown with Evelyn socially. I could do that, but it isn't worth what it would cost me. I don't want to be hard and callous. If I did that, I'd have to be. And everyone would have a dreadful time keeping the two Mrs. Strutevants straightened out. 'Which Mrs. Strutevant?' they would ask. No....Our divorce doesn't make Bill less of a good golfer and a good fellow people like. His men friends will still want to have luncheon with him and play poker with him and have him out to dinner. Evelyn is new, and new people in a tight little community such as ours are always exciting."

Scott said, "It's rotten."

Carol said, "It's divorce, Scott. It's divorce that happens to a good many marriages. I saw the statistics but I've forgotten the exact figures. But the statistics never tell you about ugly little scenes such as happened tonight or what happens to the children. It's such a thin line that holds marriage together."

"You're swell."

"Oh, I'm not. I'm jealous of her and I hate her. I'm human. I hate what belongs to me taken away even though I know that Bill was completely sane when he married her. He wanted her more than he wanted me."

They rode in silence until they reached th apartment house.

Outside the door of her apartment Carol turned to Scott. "It isn't late, and I'd like to ask you in but—but it suddenly occurs to me that my conduct must be above suspicion. Else...Bill could withdraw the alimony. I must live as a Puritan while he lives quite legally with Evelyn...That's the law. That's what they call justice.." She thought, "I don't want to talk like this. I don't want to think like this. I don't want to be bitter, tearing to pieces with my mind and tongue the principles and ideals I've always lived by."

"I understand, Carol."

She held out her hand. He took it and said, "I want to help, but I—I don't want to trespass."

"I've put you through a miserable evening."

"It's all right. Stop worrying about that. I—I want you to count on me, Carol. I admire you more than."

"Thanks, Scott."

"I'll call you. We'll do something. We'll—"

"Of course. Good night."

She went in and closed the door quickly and stood against it. The series of pictures flashed again... She and Bill coming home from the club on Saturday night...She always opened the garage doors for him and went in first and turned on the lights. Then Bill would come in and take off his coat and say, "I'm hungry. Got anything good to eat?" And she would make sandwiches and they would sit on the kitchen stools and talk...Then they'd go upstairs together after Bill locked up...and nearly always they were lovers...And Sunday mornings were delightfully lazy times at their home..The Sunday newspapers...Bill reaching first for the comics, saying, "My intellectual diet for the day." Nothing dramatic about their lives that had run together like smooth water...Nor had there been any particular intellectual bond between them. Often she had wished secretly that he liked better books and better music.

The pictures ceased. The camera was shut off. There were so many pictures of those seven years of marriage...All at once she felt nothing...nothing except an immense weariness.

April and May came and went, bringing and spending the Spring. There were times when she was playing bridge in her apartment or in the home of a friend or reading in the afternoon or sitting beside Freda at a matinee when it seemed that her life was as it had been since she had married Bill. But those times were brief and the shock of loneliness more acute when she realized that it would never be as it had been before.

She shopped with the dread hanging over her that she would encounter Evelyn or perhaps find herself standing at a counter in a store beside one whose charge accounts had been changed to Mrs. William P. Sturtevant after Carol had had hers changed to Mrs. Carol Brandt Sturtevant. She was Mrs. Sturvevant only by permission and courtesy.

Bill and Evelyn had taken a house in the country. Freda had told her. It was a house Carol knew, a low, white clapboard one with a picturesque picket fence around a vast and velvety lawn. Evelyn and Bill were entertaining constantly, not only the local people but Evelyn's out-of-town friends as well. From whom Freda got her information Carol did not question, knowing that a good many of her former friends had made a choice and that their choice had been Bill and Evelyn, partly from curiosity and partly from practical reasoning. It was more fun to know Evelyn and Bill. And it was no doubt these former friends had told Freda that Evelyn's parties were lavish and unusual, that her out-of-town guests included actors and actresses and that Evelyn was a poised and gracious hostess with Bill proud and worshipping.

There was indeed little need for Freda to tell her of Evelyn's social success since there was scarcely an edition of the paper which did not include an item of the goings and comings of Mr. and Mrs. William Sturtevant, their guests. Frequently there was a photograph of Evelyn, languid, striking, her beautiful hands usually in evidence. Carol had studied the face, finding it only that striking, exotic beauty. There were neither vitality nor enthusiasm nor passion in it.

Reluctantly Scott had admitted that he had been to see Bill and Evelyn. Looking as a little boy looks who is confessing a wrong, he said, "Bill called me up and asked me why I hadn't been out. So I went out to dinner. I wanted to meet that gal. She...she's all right, but nothing special." But Scott wasn't honest, Carol knew. For her sake he did not say what he thought and everyone thought Evelyn was very beautiful.

In June she came in late one afternoon after a picnic with Freda and little Ian and a score of other children. Bessie, the diminutive, trim, quiet little colored maid, met her in the foyer and took from her the large basket fill with wild flowers. When the telephone rang, Carol said, "I'll take it in my room," and went to her bedroom thinking that it was Scott who always telephoned on Friday evening.

But it wasn't Scott. It was a voice that deepened her color and pulled her mouth into an odd little smile. A voice she had never heard on the telephone, but one she recognized instantly— the voice with the satin finish, deep sardonic, memorable.

REJECTS PROPOSALS

By JOHN LANGLOIS

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, April 3 — (CP)—The Nova Scotia Legislature was out for Easter recess today after the government, acknowledging a rejection by the Dominion of its most recent proposals for a taxation agreement, went ahead and presented a budget which, without recourse to Federal subsidies or any increase in taxes, forecast a surplus of $122,635 for the year ending Nov. 30, 1947.

The House adjourned yesterday until April 8 after Premier Angus L. Macdonald disclosed a reply from Finance Minister Abbott had indicated that "the Dominion's position . . . remains as it has been for some time."

However, he said, "we never closed any doors . . . I still hope for a fair settlement."

Exceeded Expenses Allowed And Fined $12,000

London, April 5 — (CP) — Britain's efforts to conserve her dollars had a sequel in court Thursday when David Clore, general manager of a British piece goods manufacturing firm, was fined £3,000 ($12,000) and sentenced to three months imprisonment on charges of violating currency regulations during a business trip to the United States.

The case was among the first of more than 100 planned by the government against travellers breaking currency regulations.

Clore was alleged to have exceeded his limit of £10 ($40) a day for expenses by £1,250 ($5,000) borrowed from Phillip R. Turnbull, New York business man, which resulted in £125,000 ($500,000) worth of orders for Britain.

He was convicted on the charge he had made a false statement that a cheque for £1,248 ($4,952) was for payment of gambling debts incurred while playing poker aboard the Queen Mary en route from New York to Southampton. Instead, the prosecution said, Clore repaid Turnbull in London in pounds sterling.

The fine was specifically imposed for issuing the cheque as a bill of exchange to a person outside the sterling area.

Clore, it was stated, had stayed at the most expensive hotels purely for prestige. A party to influential business men cost £200 and another cost more than £100.

Without that lavish expenditure, it was stated, the large orders Clore obtained would not have been obtained for Britain.

Clore filed notice of appeal.

Educational Notes

As a measure to promote educational publicity and to assist in the stimulation of community interest in education and to give the public correct information regarding education both in Belleville and throughout the district, the Belleville Teachers' Council each week will contribute a column to appear in the Ontario Intelligencer under the heading "Educational Notes".

The Belleville Teachers' Council is an organization representing teachers of the four public schools and the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School.

THE MODERN SECRETARY SCHOOL

Editor's Note: The article which follows was prepared by Mr. G. E. Currie, principal of Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School.

Since the ultimate purpose of all education is to produce citizens who will be socially useful and individually well-adjusted personalities—who will find their happiness tied up with the welfare of all society, all educative agencies must of necessity realize that they have a moral undertaking. The principal educative agencies are the home, school, church and community. The first mentioned is the earliest and most important in the life of the child. It is in the home during those first two years of his life that the pattern of the child's personality is laid down. His subsequent adjustments are to a large extent the outcome of what has gone before.

Next in importance is perhaps the school because the child spends such a large proportion of his wakeful hours in the school, because all children of at least normal ability must attend school, and also because of the skilled and highly educated teaching personnel guiding the child's environment there.

In Ontario when a child passes his High School Entrance he is eligible to attend a Secondary School. This occurs normally at the age of about fourteen years.

• • •

Secondary Schools, which existed originally for only the priveleged few and offered a limited, rather rigid curriculum heavily weighted with the classics, have gradually evolved until at the present time through their diversified curriculum they seek to serve the masses rather than the classes. The emphasis has also shifted from the subject to the child. Before the time of Rousseau the child was regarded as an immature adult. We do not still regard little children and adolescents as immature adults, nor their minds as "voids" to be filled. Rather we take the psychological view that immaturity at any age is a stage or condition in a total process.

A child may be a mature child if he accepts the responsibilities expected of a child of his age. Likewise, an adult is only mature in so far as he accepts the responsibilities expected of an adult of his age. Nearly everyone is to some extent immature in some way. Only at death, after living a full life, does one reach the maturity of his personality. With this in mind all immaturity becomes an oportunity for further growth so that education is a continually evolving process extending from the cradle to the grave.

• • •

Dr. Charles E. Phillips, professor of History of Education, at the Ontario College of Education stated in his recent booklet entitled "New Schools for Democracy," "The growth of the High School is the most notable educational achievement of the present century." He stated that over a period of the last forty years in Ontario when the population increased by about 60 per cent the Secondary School enrolment increased by over 500 per cent. Almost everyone is agreeed that Secondary Schools should not be merely University preparation institutions since only a very small proportion of young people go on to University. According to Dr. Phillips the ideal is the composite school. It seeks to offer a program related to the broad needs of people as individuals and citizens, and not merely as workers. There is no fanatical insistence on either a completely academic or a preponderantly Vocational curriculum.

Our curriculum is premised upon the principle that individuals have different kinds of abilities. Some are able to think with their heads and are adaptable to abstract learning. These students as a rule are capable of doing well in an Academic Course. Others think with their hands, being capable of transmitting the patterns in their minds to their hands so that they are skilful in working with things—they have clever hands. These students as a rule do well in a Vocational Course.

A careful screening of the abilities, aptitudes and interests of students entering High School enables the student as a rule to make a wise selection of his course.

• • •

The following Vocational Courses are offered:

(1) Commercial (2) Industrial (3) Home Economics (4) Vocational Agriculture.

Although a wide selection of courses and options is most commendable as a means of supplying the real needs of most of our students at the same time it pre-supposes wise guidance and sound judgments on the part of both the home and school.

Every student should be engaged in a course that is within the limits of his abilities. If the course is too easy he tends to coast along and so may become educated in habits of idleness. If the course is so difficult that he has not a reasonable chance of succeeding he will become discouraged and the school is giving him only a sense of failure. The course must be a real challenge that engages his energies and captures his interest. If an able student is permitted to evade the challenging courses and take only those that come easy to him he is getting an education in escaping from difficult situations rather than facing up to them and mastering them. Many personality difficulties in post-school years can be traced back to failure to face up to difficult situations.

Habits of punctuality and regularity in attendance as well as intellectual honesty and industry build the fibre of a student's character through their daily practice in his school community.

The modern Secondary School aims at being education centred. Teachers and students are partners in the educative process. Both are learners. However, because of his greater degree of maturity and extensive training the teacher gives leadership to his program. The ends of true education cannot develop in a school unless ample opportunity for student participation is provided. Neither can it develop in a school where the student is not amenable to suggestion and direction. The child centred school produces a self-centred adult unable to co-operate with his fellow-men.

Activity may be said to characterize the entire program. In this connection we strive to be ever mindful of the fact that the greatest realm for activity is in intellectual thinking. Students are continually encouraged to undertake intellectual adventuring in the solution of their problems. We strive to keep the students' education on a broad foundation so that they may be adequately prepared for whatever the future has in store for them and we also try to develop in them ideals and character that will enable them to play their part in moulding that future along sound democratic lines.

LONDON, CHATHAM SUFFER GREAT FLOOD DAMAGE

10 Per-Cent Increase in Rental Ceilings

Owners Must Enter Into Renewal Lease For Two-year Term

Hotel Accomodation Free Of Controls Immediately

Ottawa, April 7 (CP)—Finance Minister Abbott announced today a maximum increase of 10 per cent in rental ceilings on self-contained housing accommodation provided the landlord is prepared to enter into a renewal lease for a minimum term of two years.

He also announced that hotel accommodation becomes control-free immediately.

The increase allowed in housing accommodation would become effective upon the expiration of the present lease.

If the tenant refuses the proferred two-year renewal lease he may be required to vacate at the end of his present lease.

In such a case, the landlord may put the 10-per-cent increase into effect in renting to another tenant.

Tenant Has Thirty Days

If the landlord is not prepared to offer his tenant the two-year renewal lease, the tenant may remain in occupancy after the expiration of his current lease as a tenant from month to month at the previous ceiling and will continue at the same time to enjoy protection from eviction.

The tenant has 30 days in which to make up his mind whether or not he wants to accept the landlord's offer. If he does not accept the offer, it acts as a notice to vacate at the end of the lease subject to provincial law.

If the tenant accepts, the two-year renewal lease may be terminated by the tenant at any time on 30 days' notice but is binding on the landlord for the full two year term.

1944 Housing Out

Mr. Abbott said the two-year renewal lease and the 10-per-cent increase will not apply to housing accommodation built since Jan. 1, 1944, and this includes dwellings created by structural conversion or reconstruction since that date, because the rentals of such dwellings have been fixed at higher levels related to costs of labor and materials.

Present regulations of the Prices Board specifically provide that the rentals of all housing accommodations built and completed since Jan. 1, 1944, shall be fixed "at an amount which in the opinion of the rental appraiser or of the Court of Rentals Appeals, will yield a fair return based on prevailing costs of land, labor and materials."

Appraiser Can Add Increase

In the cases of houses that have not previously been rented and have not a fixed maximum rental, the rentals appraiser will add the 10-per-cent increase when setting rentals.

In such cases, the landlord will not be required to offer the tenant the two-year renewal lease but rather the landlord and the tenant can agree on a lease for any term.

The new changes also provide for an extra 10-per-cent increase in rentals in cases where the tenant is sub-letting three or more rooms—in other words, operating the accommodation as a rooming house. To obtain this extra 10-per-cent, the landlord must apply to the Rentals Appraiser for this adjustment in rental before offering the tenant the two-year lease.

Phone Strike At-a-Glance

Washington, April 7 (AP) — Here's the telephone strike in brief:

Strikers — The National Federation of Telephone Workers and 39 of its affiliated unions called the strike against the Bell System. The N.F.T.W. claims 287,000 members, with an additional 50,000 in unaffiliated unions affected.

Issues — Strikers demand wage increases of $12 weekly. The government says average weekly pay is now $43.19. Union also asks union shop and other concessions.

Negotiations — The union proposed arbitration of all issues on a country-wide basis. Management proposed arbitration only on wages and on a company-by-company basis in the Bell System.

Seizure — Attorney - General Clark has ruled that President Truman has the power to seize the telephone companies. Top administration officials were reported against taking any such action immediately.

Kent County Town, Dresden, Under Water

Toronto, April 7 — (CP)—The Canadian Red Cross reported today that all of Dresden, Kent county town of 1,662, was under water and that three-quarters of Wallaceburg, whose 4,986 population is also in Kent, was under water. Both towns are on the flood-swollen Sydenham river.

Commissioner John Marsh said that so far all local branches of the Red Cross had been able to handle the situation but the Ontario division stood by ready to move in with food and clothing where needed.

At Wallaceburg a local hostel was taken over and 100 residents were being housed and fed there.

DENIES CHARGES

Nanking, April 7 (AP)—Defence Minister Pai Chung-Hsi today denied charges by John W. Powell in the China Weely Review that the government adopted retaliatory measures against Formosans after Pai's arrival in Formosa March 11.

Powell wrote that 5,000 Formosans were slain by government troops after Formosans rioted against the Chinese Administration.

40,000 Britains Weary of Post-War Hardships Seek New Life in S.A.

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, April 7 (CP)—Forty thousand Britons, weary of post-war hardships, are waiting for the chance to begin life anew in South Africa. While they await passage hundreds more queue daily at the union's busy immigration office in Kensington, anxiously inquiring into prospects of work.

"Do you need acetylene welders?" "Are there any vacancies for accountants?" "How is the bookbinding trade?" "I am a qualified dentist—is there any shortage of dentists now?"

Replies are generally encouraging, for South Africa needs all kinds of skilled craftsmen to help build up her secondary industries. Builders are urgently needed to remedy an acute housing shortage. Many types of professional men also are in demand.

To speed their arrival, the government has obtained the liners Winchester Castle and Carnarvon Castle exclusively for immigrants, and, starting in April, 1,000 priority workers will be shipped from Europe every month.

Non-priority workers, people of independent means and casual visitors are less fortunate. On booking a passage at any London steamship office, would be travellers are told they may have to wait 12 or 15 months.

"The government is not contemplating assisted passages at present," an immigration official said, "but if a man has an offer of employment in South Africa he is immediately given priority."

Wives and families of these men are also granted priority, he said, but because of the housing shortage they are advised to travel out later after accommodation has been found for them. Where possible vacancies are found for the immigrants before he sets foot in South Africa "because we do not want men tramping the streets looking for work."

Workers needed for the building industry are bricklayers, carpenters, draughtsmen, joiners, plasterers and plumbers; for the clothing and textile industries, cutters, designers,, spinners and weavers.

The catering trade needs chefs and cooks; the engineering industry, boilermakers, diesel mechanics, draughtsmen, electricians, fitters and turners, oxy-acetylene and electric welders.

PARLEY MAY END WITH DISPUTES STILL UNSETTLED

Ministers Will Likely Meet in London In July to Continue Main Discussions

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, April 7 (CP)—The Foreign Ministers Conference here will probably wind up within about 10 days without agreement on the keystone German questions of reparations and economic unity and the ministers will likely have to meet again in London in July to continue the struggle to bridge the division between east and west.

Some decisions are expected to be made this week but they will not be really important ones, and until disputes are settled on economic unity and reparations work on drafting the German peace settlement cannot get properly under way.

After a steady, encouraging start, the conference faltered at the end of the third week when the ministers got to grips with basic problems and prospects for agreement here deteriorated rapidly after that.

Depends on Stalin

Now the conference cn practically be written off so far as important decisions are concerned, although some delegates don't rule out a dramatic 11th-hour intervention by Prime Minister Stalin, possibly in a Kremlin interview with State Secretary Marshall whom he has not yet seen, which might salvage something constructive out of these weeks of comparatively fruitless work.

But without a marked change in the Russian attitude, failure cannot be averted here and Germany will remain as divided as ever, which also means the east-west division in Europe will harden still more.

Britain and the United States have made earnest efforts here to obtain Soviet adhesion to a common policy for Germany. Foreign Secretary Bevin's blueprint for Germany offered by far the most constructive plan and while Russia is in agreement on some points she cannot accept the fundamental British-American premise that vanquished Germany should cease to be a burden on the victorious powers.

Out For Exploitation

The Russians believe Germany is a territory to be exploited, primarily for the benefit of Russia as a country which suffered from Nazi aggression. But if Russia won her point you would have the ludicrous situation of Britain and the United States in fact paying reparations to Russia through Germany.

PARLEY MUST END—Page 3

Gromyko Demands U.S. Scrap A-Bombs at Once, Asks General Arms Cut

(By LARRY HAUCK)

Lake Success, N.Y., April 7 — (AP)—Andrei A. Gromyko today renewed Russia's demands that the United States scrap its atomic bombs immediately. The Soviet deputy foreign minister declared that such a step plus a general slash in armaments would "remove mutual suspicion and lack of confidence" throughout the world.

Delivering the long-awaited Soviet policy speech to the United States commission on conventional armaments, Gromyko ripped into assertions of the Western Powers that iron-clad international security measures must precede actual disarming.

In asking again for a convention to outlaw atomic weapons now, Gromyko said:

"The conclusion of such a convention would present a serious contribution to the strengthening of international peace and security. It would bring an increase in mutual confidence between the peoples of the world and would strengthen the faith of the people in the U. N."

Gromyko then indicated that Russia was not ready to compromise on the long-fought atomic issue as he said sharply: "Without such a convention that would forbid the use of atomic weapons it would be difficult and perhaps it would be impossible to successfully solve the question of establishing international control of atomic energy."

Gromyko took the floor in the arms commission, speaking Russian, less than four hours before his scheduled speech in English to a security council meeting (3 p.m. EST) on President Truman's $400,000,000 unilateral program of aid to Greece and Turkey.

Gromyko was the last delegate to speak before the newly-created arms commission. This delay was noted with interest by other delegates, who recalled that Foreign Minister Molotov dumped the surprise arms slashing proposal into the general assembly last October with a call for speedy handling.

In their statements, the United States and Britain said in effect that arms reduction now was premature. Both agreed to go to work on the program, but cautioned that international security must first be established.

This was in opposition to previous Russian assertions that arms reduction should come first and would pave the way for such security.

With the policy speeches over, the arms body planned to adopt rules of procedure and then formulate a work program. The group was expected to function in much the same manner as the atomic energy commission setting up a working committee to meet in closed session and in turn farming-out tasks to specialized committees.

SUPREME COURT UPHOLDS DEATH SENTENCE GIVEN

Palestine Authorities Refuse Plea to Carry Case to Privy Council

Jerusalem, April 7— (AP) — The Palestine Supreme Court rejected today a plea that the death sentence imposed on Dov Bela Gruner, convicted member of the Jewish underground, be set aside as contrary to the terms of the British mandate in the Holy Land.

The plea was filed last week by the Jewish community of Tel Aviv after the privy council had refused to consider an appeal filed by Gruner's uncle.

Gruner, a 33-year-old Hungarian Jew and veteran of the British army, had refused to take any action in his own case, maintaining he is a prisoner of war and should be treated as one.

Immediately after the court's decision was announced, Attorney Max Kritzman, who appeared for the petitioners, asked leave to carry the matter to the privy council, but the court ruled it had no jurisdiction to grant the request.

Kritzman then said he would cable immediately to associates in London and ask them to take the matter up directly with the privy council.

May Hang Tuesday.

Denial of Kritzman's request raised speculation in some quarters that Gruner might go to the gallows tomorrow — Tuesday being the traditional day for executions throughout the British-controlled prison system. Irgun Zvai Leumi has threatened "immediate and violent" retaliation if he is hanged.

The court noted that there was nothing in its decision, however, to "prevent Gruner himself from appealing in his own behalf for alleviation of the death sentence."

Gruner, who was wounded five times in the face and head during the Ramat Gan attack, has steadfastly refused to sign a power of attorney permitting an appeal in his own behalf.

BANK VICE-PRESIDENT NAMED CONSTABLE

Tuscola, Ill., April 7 (AP)—The vice-president of the Tuscola National Bank has been elected a township constable although he wasn't a candidate.

Robert Bundy and Fred Trout were the only candidates on the ballot to elect three constables, so they were named automatically. The name of George Flesor, the banker, was written in on 18 ballots. He hasn't decided whether to take the job.

TRUMAN FIRM ON U.S. POLICY TO FIGHT COMMUNISM

Must Aid Free Nations to Maintain Freedom by Gifts of Money, Personnel

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, April 7. (CP) — President Truman's Jefferson Day address reiterated and widened his declaration of a month ago that the United States would send money and personnel to fight totalitarian influences in free countries abroad.

In the most candid acceptance of his country's unique position of world responsibility, the President declared the United States must adopt a policy of "aiding free nations to maintain their freedom" and of keeping the country militarily strong for that purpose.

His unequivocal address to Washington's annual Jefferson dinner Saturday night made clear the President's view that the United Nations is "man's hope of putting out and keeping out the fires of war for all time."

But, he added, "in supporting the United Nations we must, when necessary, supplement its activities."

"We must act in time—ahead of time—to stamp out the smouldering beginnings of any conflict that may threaten to spread over the world. . ."

Rounding out his second year in office, the President spoke with a confidence and bluntness that prompted old Democrats to declare at once that he would be the unanimous choice of the party for re-election in 1948.

On March 12 the President startled his own people and the world with his request for congressional authority to help with money and personnel the Greek and Turkish government resistance to communism.

The policy, still hotly debated in Congress, seems sure of approval but has had the effect of putting the few remaining isolationists in the same boat with the communists on this particular issue.

Saturday the President widened the policy to include all countries where freedom is threatened—the enlargement of the Monroe doctrine to world-wide scope.

MAY OPEN SANCTUARY

Sault Ste. Marie, April 7 —(CP) — The opening of a migratory bird sanctuary in the Sault area, similar to the Jack Miner sanctuary at Kingsville, will be discussed in the fall, Dr. C. D. H. Clarke of the Department of Lands and Forests revealed Saturday.

340,000 WORKERS IDLE AS PHONE STRIKE HITS U.S.

Feverish Efforts Made To Postpone Strike For 48 Hours By Govt. Officials

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, April 7 (AP)—A strike by an estimated 340,000 workers today crippled the United States' telephone system after Union leaders spurned a dramatic, last-minute government plea for a 48-hour postpostment.

The walkout began in eastern cities and spread progressively across the country as clocks ticked off the 6 a.m. deadline in each time zone.

The tieup—first of its kind in American history—was complete when West Coast workers left their jobs.

Some employees halted work a few minutes in advance of the general signal and in many cities picket lines were promptly thrown around telephone company properties.

They were striking in support of demands for $12 a week pay boost, plus nine other contract revisions.

Government sources said weekly earnings of the telephone workers average $43.19.

Other demands include the union shop, to require all new employees to become union members; narrower pay differentials between cities; five-year instead of eight-year advancement to top pay rates; more exact definition of supervisors' duties; four-week vacations after 20 years of service; and a minimum pension of $100 a month for retired workers.

Each area also has its own local demands in addition to these.

Toll calls, information and local operator service were the first to feel the effects of the strike, except where supervisory and other non-union personnel were able to carry the load.

Dial systems were not affected. Completely automatic, they presumably could operate for a long period without maintenance work.

It was Joseph A. Beirne, president of the Independent National Federation of Telephone Workers who announced at 5:55 a.m. that the strike was on.

Appeal Unanswered.

A last-minute appeal by Labor Secretary Schwellenbach, who had pleaded for a 48-hour postponement of the strike, was left unanswered by the policy committee, summoned from bed to hear the secretary's request.

Beirne made no comment on Schwellenbach's request for 48 hours more in which to gain a possible compromise in the dispute.

He said merely that "we recessed the policy committee until 2 p.m. this afternoon."

"At that time we can take up any matters that are before us."

Schwellenbach appeared before the sleepy-eyed members of the union's policy committee at 5:45 a.m. He said he spoke not only as secretary of labor but "as a proven friend of your organization."

'River of Woe' Flows After 9 Years, Superstitious Folk Fear Disaster

London, April 7. (AP)—England's "River of Woe", a stream that appears mysteriously and just as mysteriously disappears, is flowing again for the first time in nine years —to the terror of superstitious folk who believe the river's appearance is a warning of disaster.

Sometimes known as the Caterham "Woe Water" and sometimes simply as Croydon Bourne, the river last coursed through the Caterham Valley near London in 1938—just before a typhoid epidemic claimed 43 lives in the region.

Earlier appearances were recorded during the great plague of 1665 and during the First World War, when each of the streams three "rebirths" preceded Allied military reverses.

But L. V. Gordon, Caterham urban council surveyor, today scored the lingering belief that there is anything supernatural about the "woe water", and asserted that it is merely the result of unusually heavy rainfall.

"The chalky subsoil of the North Downs is just like a sponge," he said. "It soaks up the water and gradually becomes saturated until the underground water rises above the valley floor and becomes the Bourne. This time it will flow for about a month before it disappears."

5 Deaths Caused By Flood Waters In West Ontario

Thousands Evacuated From Homes; Heavy Crop Damage

(By The Canadian Press)

Five deaths and damage running into possibly millions of dollars was the toll of Ontario's severe Easter floods today as hundreds of residents in the southwestern part of the province were evacuated from their inundated homes.

Heaviest loss was seen in towns along the swollen Sydenham River in Kent county and the rampaging Thames which forced 4,000 Londoners from their homes during the weekend, gave Red Cross workers heavy work in dozens of communities and poised a disastrous threat to already-flooded Chatham, a city of 17,000.

Chatham Completely Isolated.

Isolated from the rest of the province because all main highways were flooded, Chatham today became a community of river watchers as the stream, 16 feet and nine inches above normal, neared the record height of the worst flood ever to hit here — in April, 1937. The crest of the flood is expected Tuesday morning and already many city districts are inundated.

Many buildings and homes were chilled by doused furnaces in flooded cellars as colder weather was predicted. The Canadian Red Cross set up an emergency station to care for evacuated families.

The tale was the same at other centres along the Thames. At Thamesville, 16 miles up the river, water covered the business section two feet deep with the flood peak still to come this afternoon. Most merchants had moved their stocks to higher levels but residents appealed for boats to leave their surrounded homes.

The city of London believed the worst was over, but not before 4,000 persons had hastily evacuated homes in the low-lying western part of the city Saturday night as the Thames reached its height. The water came within inches of the tops of breakwaters before the crest tore downstream past the city.

These were the flood deaths Sunday: Mrs. Jeanette Mack, 65, and Mrs. Margaret Rulett, 64, swept off a make-shift wooden pathway into the swollen Oshawa creek; William Oldridge, 78, drowned in a foot of water in his London home after suffering an attack; Willis Bowers, 50, who fell from a punt into the flood waters at Wallaceburg.

The whole province had suffered one of the heaviest springtime blows since the great floods of 1937. Heavy rains of Friday and Saturday were followed by winds of gale force that lashed flood waters into high waves Sunday. There was snow at several points and as much as five inches of snow at the lakehead.

Spend Anxious Hours

River watchers spent anxious hours again today at Chatham as the Thames there was 16 feet above normal late last night and still rising. Red Cross organizations went into action to care for hundreds of families forced from their homes.

Situation Eased

At Wallaceburg, once reported three-quarters under water the situation eased with the Sydenham River dropping about 18 inches. Other towns, including Dresden where the water in the business section was 10 feet deep, made similar reports.

Other danger spots in the Ontario flood picture were Brantford where the Grand River forced residents from their homes south of the city, Paris, north of Brantford where the Nith flooded out dozens of farm homes, at Wasaga Beach on Georgian Bay where the Nottawasaga damaged wharves and summer cottages and was still rising, and in Waterloo County where Galt and Ayr were threatened.

The worst flood in 20 years hit Ayr with some houses in outlying sections surrounded by water from the swollen Nith.

Other cities reported an easing of the situation, notably Stratford where the Avon River dropped sharply overnight leaving a few flooded cellars.

An additional death was reported today from Collingwood, where nine-year-old Gordon Eccles of that town slipped off a bridge over the flood-swollen Underwood creek. His body is believed to have been carried out into Georgian Bay.

German Prisons Centres for Black Market Operations

Munich, April 7 (Reuters) — Germany's crowded prisons have become centres for black market deals and meetings where German "business men" make useful contacts for transactions after their release.

The prisoners are in touch with their friends outside, who take into the prison not only food but cigarets, shoes, watches, and other articles as well as money.

In spite of threats of severe punishment many guards assist the prisoners in their black market dealings, the usual remuneration being a half share in profits.

COIN BOX STOLEN

Rockland, Mass., April 7—(AP) —When little Irma Santos lost both feet as a result of long exposure in nearby Cranberry Bogs, the townsfolk got busy. They set up, among other things, contribution boxes in local stores. Now police would like to find the person who stole one of the boxes.

FLOODLIGHT EQUIPMENT IN CITY AND READY FOR INSTALLATION

Complete equipment for the installation of floodlights in the Exhibition Grounds is now in the city, Parks Board chairman Cleo Colling stated today, and the lights will be installed as soon as contracts are secured, and favorable weather presents itself. It is expected, the chairman added, that the lights will be in operation some time in early June. Negotiations are now under way for installation. The poles are some 85 feet in length, ten feet of which will be underground. Eleven poles with accompanying lights will constitute the battery.

H. & P. E. REGIMENT TO RUN COURSE FOR N.C.O.'S

While no great activity has been planned for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment company here, it was stated today that a course for non-commissioned officers will get under way shortly.

Practically all reserve army units will not start regular training until the Fall, but in the meantime they are training qualified officers and non-commissioned personnel in readiness for a full program later in the year.

CERTAIN TIRE TYPES NOT AVAILABLE

While supplies in various tire lines are good at the present time, certain other types are not so plentiful a dealer said today. Motorists using 600 x 16 type tires can be satisfied, but the heavier more rugged type are not as plentiful as they might be. Tires and material are now decontrolled but prices thus far have remained unchanged.

CANADIAN LEGION OBTAINS OPTION ON CITY PROPERTY

Officials of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Legion stated today that the Collacutt Bus Company is definitely interested in the location of a bus terminal in the new Legion structure proposed to be erected on Dundas Street.

The bus company, it was stated, will take over lunch rooms and ticket offices. Co-operation with other bus lines has been promised.

Options on the property have been secured, and plans for construction of the new building are under way.

It was intimated that the Collacutt Bus Company will be given a long-term contract in its connection with the terminal and club house.

ONLY TWO FIRE CALLS OVER THE WEEKEND

Despite Sunday's high wind the local fire department, was comparatively free of calls over the weekend with only two alarms, both for minor blazes, being received. Sunday afternoon firemen were called to 84 Yeomans St., where small loss was reported as result of bedding fire, while the only other alarm answered was to Dunbar Street where furnace pipes were reported afire.

Kiwanis Club May Form Key Club in City

Kiwanis Club officials are seriously contemplating the formation of a Key Club, a junior service club for boys in collegiate or high schools. The club will have the same officers and types of committees as does the parent club. Boys, to be eligible for membership must be in good standing at school.

Objects of the club are, to develop initiative and leadership, provide experience in living and working together serve the school and community; co-operate with the school principal; prepare for useful citizenship and to accept and promote constitutional objects of Kiwanis.

The Key Club Committee has done much careful investigation into the possibilities of such an organization in Belleville. It plans to invite eight students from the Collegiate Institute and St. Michael's Academy to the club luncheon on two successive weeks in April and at the end of the month ask all student guests to meet with the committee, and if keenly interested and willing to accept the responsibility of forming such a club, then organization will be proceeded with, according to the by-laws of Kiwanis International.

Campbellford Fire Chief Dies

Campbellford, April 7 —(CP) —Fire Chief C. B. Williams died yesterday after an illness of some months.

Chief Williams, a veteran of the First World War in which he served with the 4th Canadian Infantry Battalion, was a past president of the Campbellford Rotary Club, a member of the Midland Regimental Band and of the Canadian Legion.

He is survived by a step-daughter, Mrs. Stewart Anderson of Campbellford and by a step-son, Everett Thomas of Brockville, Ont.

TWO ARE KILLED

Swansea, Wales, April 7 — (Reuters)— Two men were killed and six injured yesterday in a colliery explosion. Cause of the accident was not known.

Veterans of Two Wars Attend Divine Service

Veterans of two wars on Easter Sunday paid tribute to the memory of Canadian soldiers who in World War I sacrificed their lives at immortal Vimy Ridge as members of the Army, Navy and Airforce Veterans and members of the Canadian Legion marched to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for Easter morning service.

Assembling at the Armouries the veterans fell in at the command of Robt. Brown, parade marshal, and marched to the church behind the Belleville Pipe Band under the direction of Piper Jamie Clark. Colors of the two veterans' associations floated in the breeze with members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Army & Navy Veterans also taking part in the parade.

Following the church service the parade reformed to march back to the Armouries by way of Victoria Ave., and Front Street.

Taking the well-known story of Easter and the resurrection of Christ as the theme for his Easter morning service, Rev. J. G. Hornsby applied the lesson of the tomb to present day living asserting that there are still many stones to be rolled away.

"God is waiting to do His part in the troubled world—is waiting to roll away the stone. He has waited because we humans have waited a long time for a change in other people rather than setting about to make the change in ourselves."

The current strife in industry, in industrial and social relations and the international differences which today have the world in a turmoil were declared to begin with the individual. "The stone will not roll away until we proceed with Faith and Love," concluded Mr. Hornsby.

Ice Still Firm In Bay of Quinte West of Bridge

Although the Moira River is running open practically all the way back to Foxboro, the ice in the Bay of Quinte still remains for the most part unbroken with open stretches extending eastward from the two gaps in the bay bridge. The open stretch of water now extends from the bay bridge east past the government dock and beyond the hospital.

Ice west of the bay bridge still remains unbroken, but north of Massassaga there is an open stretch which extends to the shore at Point Anne.

As snow in the northern reaches of the Moira watershed melts, the current in the river increases each day with a rise of about six inches being noted over the weekend.

Royal Family Takes Plane Ride

Salisbury, Rhodesia, April 7 — (Reuters) — The Royal Family landed at Salisbury airport, Southern Rhodesia, this morning after a flight from Pretoria. The Queen and Princess Elizabeth went into the pilots' cabin during the trip.

Princess Margaret flew with the King, and Princess Elizabeth with the Queen, in Vikings of the King's flight, which took two hours and 40 minutes on the 800-mile journey.

The King and Queen talked to each other by radio during the flight, and conditions were so steady they were able to write letters.

Suggests Accounting Of Nazi Gold Cached In Foreign Lands

Moscow, April 7 — (AP) — Pravda commentator Yuri Zhukov said today that there should be a full accounting made of what has become of Nazi gold cached in foreign countries—especially in Argentina, Spain, Turkey, Switzerland and Sweden. Zhukov declared that Russia's allies had not published official figures on how much gold Hitler plundered and asserted that United States authorities had given no information on how much had been discovered in Germany.

FOUND DEAD ON CLIFF

Bangor, Wales, April 7— (Reuters)— Alan Kerr of Liverpool, missing since Saturday, was found dead yesterday on a 3,000-foot, gale-swept mountainside in Northern Wales.

His 18-year-old companion, Lillian Richards, was taken to hospital suffering from exposure.

The two became separated from three other companions while on an Easter mountain-climbing holiday.

Belleville Scouts Activities

The Kingston Eastern Ontario Boy Scout Conference is being eagerly awaited by Belleville's committeemen, Scout leaders and Cub leaders.

The purpose of the conference is to discuss general problems of Scout groups and to demonstrate proper meeting procedures.

Arrangements have been made to charter the new deluxe Rawson Bus for transportation to and from Kingston.

It is anticipated that a party of 40 will be making the trip, the bus leaving the Armouries at twelve noon Saturday, April 12, and returning from Kingston at the conclusion of official activities Saturday night.

Appointment Made.

At a special executive meeting of the Belleville Local Boy Scout Association held at the Kiwanis Centre Wednesday it was announced that Mr. R. L. Brown had been appointed Acting District Commissioner for the Belleville Boy Scout District filling the position left vacant when Col. B. C. Sisler moved to St. Thomas. The appointment was made by the Provincial Commissioner at Scout Headquarters in Toronto.

To Hear Bob Goldham.

The Boy Scouts of the 4th Belleville Troop have been invited by their sponsors, the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, to attend, as guests of the club, the entertainment being given in honor of the 1946 Kiwanis Junior baseball team. The team is being honored for having reached the Ontario Junior semi-finals last year when they were eliminated by Wrightville only after several sensational games.

The speaker of the evening will be Maple Leaf hockey player Bob Goldham. The party will be held at the Kiwanis Centre, Tuesday, April 8 at 8 p.m.

Attempted Bribery Brings Year-Term For Alvin Paris

New York, April 7 — (AP) — Alvin J. Paris, convicted in January of attempting to bribe to New York Giants professional football players to "throw" their Dec. 15 championship game with Chicago Bears, was sentenced today to one year in the city penitentiary.

Paris, 28, a florist and novelty concern operator, was sentenced by Judge Saul Streit after District Attorney Frank S. Hogan requested he be shown leniency because he had given valuable service to the state and made possible the convictions of others involved in the bribe attempt.

Paris was the state's principal witness at the trial of Davis (Pete) Krakauer, 44; Jerome Zarowitz, 32, and Harvey Stemmer, also convicted of attempted bribery in connection with the same case. Krakauer and Stemmer were sentenced last week to five to ten years in prison, and Zarowitz received an indeterminate penitentiary sentence with a maximum of three years.

Paris was convicted of attempting to bribe Merle Hapes and Frank Filchock, New York backfield players, in an effort to get them to throw the game.

Hapes and Filchock were suspended indefinitely from playing professional football by Bert Bell, National Football League commossioner.

HUNTING SEASON WILL BE SHORTENED

Ottawa, April 7 — (CP)—The Canadian duck hunting season will be shortened and the bag limit reduced from last year in the light of the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service survey that there are only 54,000,000 ducks and geese on the North American continent, an official of the wild life protection division of the Mines and Resources Department said last night.

Lad Severely Bitten by Dog, Taken to Hospital

Severely bitten in the groin of the right leg when attacked by an airdale dog near his home Claude Bandy, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Bandy, 54 Evans Street, was admitted to Belleville General Hospital over the weekend. The dog was also stated to have chased two small girls, Barbara Barriage and June Thomas, both of the same neighborhood.

City Pound Keeper Thomas Thorne investigated the incident and reported the dog was owned by Mrs. W. B. Colden, 66 St. Charles Street. When the officer investigated the dog had been tied up and an examination of the animal was ordered. It was reported that boys in the neighborhood have been in the habit of throwing stones at the building in which the dog is housed.

Two Marysville Residents Hurt In Car Accident

Two Marysville residents, Maurice Sine, age 26, and Arthur Pearson, Saturday night sustained cuts in their foreheads when the car in which they were riding went out of control two miles south of Plainfield and overturned several times.

Police stated the two men were proceeding north on Highway 37 with Mr. Sine at the wheel when the car angled off the pavement and went out of control after the wheels sunk in the soft shoulder of the highway. The car was completely wrecked in the accident.

PRINCE TAKES PART

Tokyo, April 7 — (AP)—After 20 months in which photographers snapped him from every angle, 13-year-old Crown Prince Akihito yielded to an uncontrollable impulse yesterday — he bounded out of his chair and snapped a picture of a cameraman who was focussing on him.

With a satisfied smirk the moon-faced prince then resumed his seat.

The cameraman had no come-back.

Work Stoppage Continued By 400,000 Miners

Pittsburgh, April 7 — (AP) — Thousands of American coal miners, demanding that their mines be made safe, remained idle today following the six-day mourning period they observed for the Centralia, Ill., mine tragedy.

Some mines were operating in Pennsylvania and West Virginia, but all Eastern Ohio pits were reported closed. Early reports did not estimate the portion of the 400,000 soft coal diggers who continued the work stoppage.

The work stoppage called by John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers (A.F.L.) president, in memory of 111 miners killed in the Centralia, Ill., blast, was over at midnight last night. Reports from the field, however, showed wide confusion and uncertainty as to what mines were scheduled to reopen.

Loath to Comment

Industrial sources were loath to comment on what the effects of a prolonged work stoppage would be. Plants, generally, got through the mourning period with little disruption because of adequate stockpiles. But a continued lack of the vital bituminous fuel would be a different matter.

The troubled situation in the coal fields sprang from Lewis' determination not to send his men into mines he branded unsafe. He demanded all but two of the 2,531 soft coal mines be closed until Federally inspected. Interior Secretary Krug refused.

That exchange largely halted the orderly process by which the 518 mines the government called unsafe were being certified safe by joint agreement of operators and union safety committees. Union district leaders took the position that only Federal inspectors could pronounce the pits safe.

NOT ABLE TO BREAK ICE

Kingston, April 7 — (CP) — Ferry Wolfe Islander made an unsuccessful attempt to break harbor ice and reach Wolfe Island Saturday. The vessel reached a point off Garden Island and was forced to return to the city on account of the heavy bed of ice between Wolfe and Garden Islands.

Wolfe Island residents were forced to use aeroplanes to reach the city. Landings were made at the Norman Rogers Airport.

Sidelights On the Floods

(By The Canadian Press)

Here, in brief, are some of the sidelights of the disastrous weekend floods in Ontario:

London — Five tons of salt, bought as water softener, carried out its function in one full sweep. Water flooded the boiler room of the engineering plant where it was stored and the salt dissolved.

Sarnia — Only valves remained above water when floods invaded the Union Gas Company's distributing centre here.

London — Surgeons at St. Joseph's Hospital used emergency lights to carry out an operation when power failed.

Chatham — When their boat sank while cruising down Kendall Street as they moved household belongings, Norman McDonald, Kenneth Knornik and John De Wael towed it ashore to salvage a washing machine.

London — Cats in flooded areas went wild as hundreds of field mice were forced from their nests. Other victims were skunks —a whole family sighted riding a log on the Thames River.

Wingham — Water reached the window sills of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Finley as the couple and their baby daughter were trapped by the flooding Maitland River. A rescue party evacuated the family.

Windsor — Essex County was pretty well dried out today except in the northeast, the Tilbury area and a number of low-lying spots in the south. Hundreds of home owners were cleaning up muddy basements, stoking new furnace fires and repairing damaged electric motors on oil burners and stokers. Five bridges in Mersea township were called unsafe for traffic.

Chatham — The porch light still burned today on F. Ayres' small white cottage on O'Neil St. The family forgot to turn it off when rising waters forced them to vacate in a hurry Saturday night.

Dresden — When Mrs. Chris Atkinson died in Camden township north of here her body had to be taken to a funeral home by boat.

Chatham — The sizzle of extinguishing furnace fires sounded through Chatham today as the crest of the Thames flood neared. It is feared every basement in the city will be filled.

London — Londoners eyed swirling floods in their cellars dubiously as the public utilities commission urged them by radio to conserve water.

Thorold—The staff of the public works department were on a sit-down strike today rather than work in the rain after being called out when main sewers became blocked and cellars started to flood. Officials had to bring in outside help to meet the emergency.

Grand Valley — Steve Palmer, East Luther township farmer, won $12 or 300 pounds of poultry feed Sunday when he came closest to judging the actual time of the ice breakup of the Grand River which runs near this Dufferin county village. Once a year everyone takes a chance on the sweepstake.

Stayner — Snow-blocked roads kept Bethesda United Church closed for 10 weeks — but on Easter Sunday it was different. Members of the congregation arrived in their Easter finery which included high rubber boots because of flooded roads. Some members came by boat to skirt flooded bridges across the Nottawasaga River. The minister, Rev. Robert Graham, arrived by jeep.

340,000 WORKERS

He said he could not promise new concessions from the Bell System, but told the committee that "there has been considerable progress made today.

This progress, he said, came not only "with reference to one of the companies here, but in the attitude of representatives of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company."

"As a result of this change of attitude it seems that we had enough assurances during the night that I should call you and ask whether or not we could get a postponement for perhaps 48 hours to give us further time. It will be extremely difficult however, if the strike proceeds at 6 o'clock.

Seizure Frowned On

How long it would last was a big question. Immediate government seizure was frowned on by several top' administration officials.

Some officials were bitter at the Union's refusal to heed Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach's solemn plea for 48 hours more in which to "be of assistance" to the Union.

"They seemed determined to strike," one told a reporter.

Yet, Union officials explained privately, there had been plenty of time—since last January when negotiations started with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company subsidiaries—in which to achieve that "change of attitude" which Schwellenbach reported in management.

The Unionists said that a 48-hour postponement just as the strike was scheduled would have created widespread confusion among the workers and would have imperilled future discipline by the policy committee.

At the end of 48 hours, they added, it might then have been more difficult to win complete co-operation of the N.F.T.W. membership and the independent Unions whose aid the N.F.T.W. is counting on.

LOST HAT HELPS TO CAPTURE PROWLER

Chicago, April 7 (AP)—Just when detective John McCarthy was giving up the search for a reported prowler at a housing project his hat blew off.

Flashlights of three fellow officers probed the darkness until the beam of one finally centred on the hat in a corner of the building. Also standing in the light was the prowler.

"That was a brand new Easter hat," said McCarthy. "We just had to find it."

Fashion Parade on Fifth Ave. Biggest and Brightest Ever

New York, April 7 (AP)— A young cop on the steps of St. Patrick's Cathedral surveyed a sea of women's hats as they passed in the Easter parade yesterday and remarked:

"They look like you'd like to take a bite out of them."

He meant that the hats, masses of pastel tulle, reminded him of the cotton candy he used to get at the circus.

But inadvertently he summed up the styles in the fashionable parade along Fifth Ave.—feminine, colorful and becoming, and with hats that even to the men—looked like hats.

Over Million Paraders

The traditional show drew a record house—the police estimated 1,250,000 paraders—topping the previous mark of 1,000,000 set a year ago.

But back to the styles: Gene Tierney for instance, tripped down the steps of St. Patrick's with her sister, Pat, and Elliott Reed, in a costume so simple she almost went unnoticed—severe black suit with a long, buttoned-hem skirt, tiny white straw bonnet and white orchid corsage.

In front of St. Thomas's Church, radio's Shirley Wolff, in a navy suit of nylon, Napoleonic beige felt hat with a matching chiffon veil and transparent plastic box purse, helped Lord Carnarvon, sportsman and Esquire's Fashion editor, O. E. Shoeffler decide who was the Easter parade's best dressed man.

Obolensky's Old Suit

Lord Carnarvon, in his grey and black Cheviot, checked tie and black Homburg could have qualified. So could Shoeffler in blue pin stripe, wine carnation and black Homburg. But they gave weighty consideration to Col. Serge Obolensky, who admitted his grey flannel with the wine broken stripe was 10 years old.

At St. Bartholomew's hundreds jammed steps and sidewalks to watch in vain for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, who went to the country earlier in the day.

The weather incidentally, turned into the hottest day of the year—74 degrees.

The big show had plenty of the lighter side of life.

Three-year-old Lynn Francis Dehand of Flushing got tired of lugging a stuffed bunny as big as herself, so her father carried it looking embarrassed.

Carried Live Rabbit

Designer Robert Lawrence paraded Mrs. Lawrence in a huge flowered hat, while he carried a live white rabbit, wearing a replica of the bonnet.

Gale Spoils Easter Parade And Damages Roof, Power Lines

An Easter Sunday gale which caused treetops to sway violently and which sent waste paper flying down alleys and around street corners put a damper on any intentions of the local younger generation to stage an Easter finery parade on Sunday.

Sweeping in from the west the gusty wind which at times rose to near gale-like proportions, picked up loose and movable objects and sent them scurrying along the pavements, while at times the streets were taken over by miniature sandstorms.

In any event any possibility of an afternoon Easter parade was spoiled with wearers of new finery having to be content with the showing of new hats and spring ensembles during regular attendance at church services.

Limbs Fall on Wires

Public utilities officials reported some trouble as result of broken limbs fouling hydro wires to temporarily disrupt service, although there was only one major break in the city. This occurred on Moira Street late in the afternoon when a hydro line in some manner was shorted and burned off resulting in power disruption of more than an hour in the Moira-Coleman Street district.

Power disruptions in the rural districts were more frequent as heavy limbs dropped across lines, it was stated. Interruptions were brief with servicemen quickly restoring power.

City roofs covered with roofing paper took a beating in the heavy wind with exposed portions in several instances being torn loose and blown away. In fact part of the tar and gravel roof on a Front Street business block came loose and together with the roof flashing crashed down onto the pavement.

Snow fence in the King George School grounds was blown across North Front Street, the public works department being notified to clear it away.

Splendid Talent To be Presented At Rotary Show

The cream of district amateur talent will grace the footlights at the Collegiate Institute on Wednesday night when the Rotary, Sunday Evening Hour will be presented and broadcast over the local radio station from 8.30 to 9.30.

The All-Star Show will be under the supervision of Rotarion Clayton Maxwell, master-of-ceremonies who has been in charge of the weekly shows in Trenton during the winter months. He will be assisted by Lenna Alexander at the piano.

The show will be composed of the best amateurs from Belleville, Trenton, Brighton, Corbyville, Wooler and other parts of the district, and is being sponsored by the Rotary Club here.

PARLEY MAY END

This is the issue on which the conference has foundered more than anything else.

Bevin and Marshall have been resolute in defending their positions on this issue. They will accept failure here rather than give way and agree to Soviet claims for $10,000,000,000 reparations from current German production. But they will keep working on the problem of seeking to bring Russia into a compromise which could settle the issue at the next meeting of the foreign ministers.

This conference is likely to agree to parcelling out the main questions to councils of deputy foreign ministers and special committees of experts which will carry on the work after the close of discussions here, but this would not be treaty making. It would simply be a continuation of efforts to establish a basis for work on the treaty.

WHISKY OUTPUT UP

Washington, April 7 (AP)— Whisky production in the United States took a 43 per cent spurt during February with an output of 21,461,881 gallons, compared with 14,984,183 in the same month of 1946. A treasury report which disclosed this today also showed that stocks in bonded warehouses have been built up from 359,000,000 gallons at the end of February, 1946, to 424,000,000 gallons this year.

QUEEN'S TO HONOR PUBLISHER MAY 17

Kingston, April 7 — (CP) — Senator W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig-Standard, and J. M. Farrell, K. C. prominent Kingston lawyer, will be among those receiving the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Law at Queen's University Spring Convocation May 17.

The degree of L.L.D. will also be conferred on Donald Gordon, retiring Prices Board chairman.

OWNERS MUST

The order also permits the correction of anomalous cases, the yardstick being the level of "rentals generally prevailing on Oct. 11, 1941, for similar accommodation in the vicinity or in a similar residential district in the same municipality."

For example, if a landlord believes that the maximum rental is substantially less than rentals generally prevailing in the vicinity for similar accommodations he should apply to the rentals administration to have the maximum rental adjusted before offering the tenant the two-year lease.

In all cases, the landlord's offer of the two-year lease must be in accordance with a special form. These forms have been prepared by the Prices Board and now are available at all board offices across the country.

Statement Issued

Referring to the release of hotel accommodation from control, Mr. Abbott said:

"The abnormal amount of travel caused by the movement and demobilization of our armed forces has ended and during recent months the total daily occupancy of Canadian hotels in most places has shown a sustained downward tendency.

"The point of equilibrum between demand for and supply of hotel rooms is in sight and the time now has come when the normal forces of competition between hotel keepers and their need for good will and good public relations can be depended on to protect the travelling public."

Buildings Affected

Ottawa, April 7 — (CP) — Prices Board officials said today "self-contained" accommodation, the rental ceilings of which now may be boosted 10 per cent, include generally such dwellings as apartments, flats, duplexes and one-family houses.

However, they added that the category also could cover literally scores of "borderline" cases ranging into the field of shared accommodation. Doubtful cases would have to be determined by the rentals administration.

WILL OPPOSE CHURCHILL

Hastings, Sussex, England, April 7 — (Reuters) — Winston Churchill, leader of the Conservative party, will be opposed in the next by-election for his division — Woodford, Essex — by the Commonwealth party candidate, R. N. Chesterton, a member of a London tailoring establishment, it was announced yesterday following the party's annual conference.

RACE TIGHTENS FOR LEADERSHIP OF SOCCER LOOP

Stoke City, Manchester and Liverpool Maintain Triple Tie for Third

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 7. (CP)—Hundreds of thousands of British soccer fans turned out in Sunny weather this Easter Monday to watch topflight games which tightened the race for leadership of the English football league.

Five first division teams were bunched within three points of one another after today's games. The leading Blackpool squad lost 3-0 at home to Everton and the second-place Wolverhampton Wanderers bowed 2-1 at Derby County. Stoke City, Manchester United and Liverpool maintained their triple tie for third place by winning home games.

Liverpool beat Preston North End 3-0, Manchester United pushed Leeds farther into the cellar with a 3-0 defeat and Stoke City whipped Grimsby town 3-0.

This left the Wolves still one point behind Blackpool with five games in hand over the leaders and moved the three third-place clubs to within 1 1-2 games of the top.

Struggling to avoid the relegation to the Second Division, Huddersfield Town held Arsenal to a scoreless draw while Brentford took a 3-0 drubbing from Portsmouth to fall four points behind Huddersfield and remain five points above Leeds at the foot of the table.

Burnley Creeps Up Notch

Burnley crept a notch nearer the top of the second division by beating Southampton Town 1-0 while the leading Manchester City drew 0-0 with Luton Town to see its margin whittled to three points. Sheffield Wednesdays moved temporarily out of relegation danger by downing Fulham 2-1 while Swansea Town lost to Coventry City 3-2. Newport County beat Barnsley 2-1 but still was seven points behind Swansea and nine points behind the Wednesdays.

The struggle in the southern section of the third division also grew closer with Queen's Park Rangers beating South End 2-1 and moving within one point of the leading Cardiff City who drew 1-1 with Bristol City. Cardiff has played one game less than Rangers.

Doncaster and Rotherham each won in the northern section, leaving the Rovers still six games in front. Doncaster beat Oldham 1-0 while Rotherham defeated Southampton 3-1.

In division "A" of the Scottish League Glasgow Rangers—tired from their victory in the league cup final over Aberdeen Saturday—bowed to Heart of Midlothian by 2-1 but retained a 10-point lead over Hibernians who did not play today. At the other end of the table, Hamilton Academicals lost their 18th game of the season 2-1 to Third Lanark.

Airdrieonians beat Raith Rovers 2-1 in the only division "B" clash affecting the standings and moved within one game of idle Dundee, the leaders.

PENGUINS TAKE SICK

Seattle, April 7 — (AP)—Scarred and rust-streaked from weeks of battling Antarctic ice-packs, the Coast Guard cutter Northwind was back in home port today for the first time in nearly a year. Among the passengers were three Rockhopper Penguins destined for the city park zoo. One was too seasick to raise its head. The Northwind led the way for the Byrd Antartic Expedition.

DROWNED IN SHALLOW RIVER

Stewiacke N.S., April 7 (CP)— Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for two-year-old Brian Stewart MacKay, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward MacKay, who was drowned yesterday in the shallow Stewiacke River only 50 yards from his farmhouse home. It was believed he had fallen from a bridge near his home.

FORCED TO FLEE

Toronto, April 7 (CP)—Four persons with a nine-months-old baby were forced to flee from their homes in suburban Scarboro last night after fire gutted the dwelling belonging to Len Scott and damaged two adjoining houses. A high wind fanned the flames beyond control and three alarms were sent in before firemen had the blaze under control.

"Be Kind To Animals Week"

This time is being observed in Ontario as "Be Kind to Animals Week." The Humane Society which sponsors it has issued an appeal to children to be kind to their pets and has also asked that all cases of cruelty to animals be reported to the branches of the society.

Children who have pets and their elders who have the care of animals which they own have a trust of no small importance to treat these creatures of another creation in a way which reflects honor and care on the part of the possessors. Children who have pets are especially favored and their very ownership of pets should make children kind to all animals and birds. Those who love animals and birds have something the very duty of looking after which tends to develop and enrich their lives.

The ownership of the dog or the cat or whatever pet it is calls out the affections of the boy and girl, and deepens their interest in the birds and animals with which civilized man has been brought into close contact.

Dogs for instance render a service of which everyone knows, bestowing their affection even to the event of sacrifice of their lives if necessary. Who has not seen a dog standing near children, seemingly endeavoring to show that his attention is in something afar off, but he is really on guard over his young wards. Mothers and fathers all know that dogs are especially fine animals to have associated with children, not only because of their protective instinct but also because the possession of such pets cannot fail to develop in the child the principle of thoughtfulness and care. This tends to making the child kind and is really a part of the education of the child.

The cat, one of the domestic animals associated with human beings for many thousands of years, as inscriptions on monuments in Egypt and countries in the Orient show, where cats occupied a place in the life of those early nations, is also closely linked with this modern age. There are instances where dogs have ben ill-treated or abandoned and left to their fate by some persons who have failed to appreciate the sufferings of the poor creatures. The cat too comes in for harsh treatment at times. Once in a while one reads of instances of cruelty to cats which surely indicates a lack of feeling and culture on the part of the offender. Thoughtlessness is sometimes seen in failure to provide for these animals food and water and shelter.

In the care of animals the Ontario Humane Society carries on the work of creating a kindly feeling for members of the animal creation or any of the wild creatures that come into contact with humans. Its work is a mission of service, it represents the kindliest feelings that men and women, boys and girls should show to wild or domesticated creatures. One cannot forget the words of Coleridge on this subject of the creatures of earth and sky and sea,

> "He prayeth best who loveth best
> All things both great and small."

and the lines,

> "He prayeth well who loveth well
> Both man and bird and beast."

It is in the spirit of these words that most people treat and regard the dog, the cat, the horse and cow, and other animals and the birds. There are unfortunately cases of cruelty where the law has to act and exact a penalty as a punishment and warning. Wanton neglect of these creatures which are within one's care or keeping is punishable. The great masses of the people look with kindness upon all these creatures and will do everything possible to alleviate their care or condition if it is found not what it ought to be. Many thousands of kindly deeds are done daily by humans, adults and boys and girls, for the wild life and the domesticated animals. Kindly agencies and groups of the young children instil lessons of kindness for all these creatures. How humans regard them, how they care for them, is surely an index of character. If there is a sense of lack of appreciation of the lives of the pet animals and other creatures, something should and can be done to correct that lack of feeling for the sake of the person as well as for the sake of the animals.

Tree-Planting Time Near

With Spring just around the corner, it is a logical time for general farmers and tobacco growers to be giving thought to their requirements in the way of tree-planting, both for windbreaks and woodlots.

We are fortunate to have in our midst the St. Williams Forestry Station, with its almost unlimited quantities of seedlings for distribution in the rural districts of this part of Ontario. No county needs windbreaks more than Norfolk, with its great tracts of light, sandy soil. Tobacco growers particularly will want to co-operate for their own interests in the program of tree-planting. Unless due attention is paid to this task, we are warned by authorities that some day we will have a desert in Norfolk county.

Planting of woodlots is also important to replace the vast amount of lumber cut down indiscriminately in recent years. The County Council has taken timely steps to prevent a continuance of this wasteful practice but it now rests with rural dwellers to lay the foundations for restoration of Norfolk's woodlands.—Simcoe Reformer.

End of Blood And Iron

There is a fateful symbolism in one of the first acts of the Moscow meeting of the Big Four.

The nations which crushed German militarism have agreed to cut out the heart of that militarism—the State of Prussia.

For more than two generations Prussia has been a by-word of violence. It has stood for German Kultur, the cult of blood and iron. It was the land of the junkers, the symbol of those who believed might was right and that the sword was the first and last argument among men and nations.

Now that symbol lies in the dust. The nations have decided to end the brutal, bloody history of the Prussian state. The foreign ministers, with a stroke of their pens, have liquidated the power that glorified the sword above the pen.

Surely this last chapter in the history of blood and iron is a lesson for all nations to read. They that live by the sword must perish by the sword—as Prussia did.—Vancouver Daily Province.

No Spring

Impatience and a passion for argument lead us to an expression of doubt that there is any such season as spring, says The Wall Street Journal. There are some warm days occasionally late in the winter. These encourage people to attempt to play, but by the time the tractor has been fueled, more than likely there will be a snowstorm. If the plowing is done and something is planted, it will promptly freeze.

Some very beautiful poems and prose have been written about spring. It is also true that in the construction of fairy tales people have succeeded in getting one word after another to create a wholly pleasant effect. As a matter of fact, the greatest glamor has been thrown about places which authors never did see and which never existed.

A Shorter Way to Destroy

The hopes and the fears concerning atomic energy troubled the minds of an Englishman and his friend more than 200 years ago. In a book entitled John Ozell's Letters (in the third edition published in 1731) is a letter from one of Ozell's correspondents. This gentleman wrote:

I often tremble for fear at last some invention will be found out of a shorter way to destroy mankind, and to depopulate nations and whole kingdoms.

To this letter John Ozell replied: :

If a fatal invention should be hit upon, it would quickly be forbidden by the law of nations, and the unanimous consent of mankind would crush such a discovery.

In these middle years of the 20th century an invention has undoubtedly been found for a shorter way to destroy mankind. But there seems less ground for John Ozell's easy confidence that the fatal invention will be quickly forbidden by the law of nations. Indeed, the unanimous consent of mankind for the crushing of such a discovery seems extraordinarily difficult to obtain.—Montreal Gazette.

THE CHEERFUL MIND

A fellow's as old as he feels, they say.
  As old as he thinks, say I.
Old age draws nearer with every day,
  But don't let it terrify.

Some grunt and groan 'neath the weight of years
  And under the burden sink.
They frighten themselves with needless fears
  And the dismal thoughts they think.

But the tax of time must by all be paid
  In the full, as we older grow.
On the day it's due is the payment made,
  Whether we smile or no.

It's better to chuckle than sadly sigh;
  To whatever must be—resigned.
For the cares of the years more lightly lie
  On the man with a cheerful mind.

UNDERGROUND BANNERS UNFURLED TO JERUSALEM

Jerusalem, April 5 (AP)—Banners of the Jewish underground organization Irgun Zvai Leumi were unfurled suddenly in the streets of Jerusalem, bidding Holy Day strollers to "come to our help."

The banners, flung over telephone wires by squads of underground members, were quickly destroyed by the torches of British military patrols.

GERMANS SENTENCED

Dachau, Germany, April 7 (AP)—One German was sentenced to death, three others to life imprisonment and six to lesser prison terms for their part in the mob murder of an American flier who parachuted from his disabled plane near Luebeck in 1944.

An American war crimes court assessed the death penalty against Gotthard Parzyk, who shot the flier after the mob had beaten and kicked him.

ONTARIO FLOODS

At Dresden, 15 miles north of Chatham, the small Sydenham river rose 20 feet in less than 24 hours and flooded a fifth of the town of 1,600 persons.

Highways into Chatham from the east, north and west were under water.

Damage was heavy to crops, as well as to property. The gale which blew most of Sunday lashed flood waters into high waves in the southwestern peninsula, toppled signboards and poles, interrupted power and communication lines.

Thousands of acres under water in the counties of Kent, Essex, Middlesex, Lambton, Elgin and Perth. Heavy loss was suffered in potato crops, washed away in floods around Sarnia and other Western Ontario cities. Onion fields and many acres of other products were destroyed.

$100,000 Damage

Around St. Mary's where the flood waters of the Thames reached over wide areas of farmland, damage was estimated at close to $100,000, and this was but on a spot on the flood earea.

Mayor George Wenige of London said he believed the property damage would "not be excessive" but he was comparing it with the great flood of 1937 when the London area suffered a loss of $5,000,000.

Londoners were warned to boil all drinking water as a precaution against contamination through flooding of wells. Citizens were asked to conserve water, an ironic reminder as houses on low-lying streets had basements full of it.

While London's main business area was not endangered the peak of the flood there came at 4 a.m. Sunday with the muddy, swollen stream then reaching a peak of 20 feet above summer normal. At that point it was only two feet, five inches below the record crest of 1937.

Only the fact that about three feet had been added to the breakwaters after the 1937 flood was credited with preventing a disaster in West London with its population of nearly 8,000 persons in that low-lying part of the city.

Fill Sandbags

Shortly before the river reached its peak at London City Works employees and volunteers with truckloads of sand sweated in the light of motor car lamps and flashlights as they filled sandbags to build an emergency dyke between the river and Labatt Park.

As the wind increased it was feared the river would break through at that point but after an anxious period the wind dropped and the stream began slowly to subside.

Londoners in the most-threatened area in the west of the city began leaving their homes Saturday night as police and fire department cars rushed through the streets with sirens screaming a pre-arranged warning signal. Hundreds of beds had been set up in emergency shelters in schools and public buildings and at the Westminster Hospital Many of the 4,000 evacuees found lodging with friends or relatives.

They had previously removed their most valuable furniture.

Late Sunday they returning to their homes in West London as major anxiety travelled downstream with the flood crest.

Fear Trouble at Chatham

That anxiety had transferred itself today to the Chatham area. Chatham itself sits midway of the northern neck of the Essex county peninsula.

Throughout Kent county men, women and children were being evacuated in advance of the greater threat, with many sections of low-lying Kent already under water.

How long it would take the flood crest to reach Chatham and pass along east to Lake St. Clair was unknown, but it has previously been estimated at 60 hours. That would bring Chatham's most critical period around midday Tuesday.

At the tip of the peninsula, from Amherstburg east to Kingsville and north to Windsor, large sections were already under water after almost 24 hours of rain.

In the town of Tilbury there was inches of water in the streets. About a quarter of Wallaceburg was flooded.

Canada's Active Army Organizing Three Bands

Ottawa, April 7 — (CP) — Army headquarters announced today that three bands were being organized for the active army and said musical instruments should soon be available for reserve force units.

The post-war permanent or active army's band strength will be on a reduced scale.

Bands are being organized for the Royal Canadian Artillery at Shilo, Man., the Royal Canadian Regiment at Brockville, and the Royal 22nd Regiment in Quebec City. They will be located to take advantage of existing accommodation, but will be available to any of the service commands.

Officials said "The soldier-musicians will be given intensive training with a view to forming a nucleus of bandmasters and N. C.O.s required in any future expansion of bands in the active force."

Many of the soldiers who played in military bands overseas have now gone to civil life, but are expected to form the nucleus of the regimental bands of the reserve force.

"It is anticipated that instruments will soon be available for reserve force units interested in forming military brass, pipe, trumpet or bugle bands."

Maj. A. L. Streeter of Ottawa has been appointed inspector of bands for the Canadian Army, active and reserve forces. Born in Worthing, England, he is a graduate of St. Andrew's College, Sussex, the Royal College of Music and the Royal Military School of Music.

In 1940, Major Streeter became the director of music, Canadian Army overseas, returning to Canada last May.

MILD TINCTURE OF IODINE

Mild Tincture of Iodine, not just Tincture of Iodine, was introduced "to meet an insistent demand of the 'germ conscious' public for an efficient wound disinfectant for domestic use." In my opinion it is by all odds the very best first aid disinfectant for any wound, cut, scratch or abrasion—one application immediately, best made by pouring the iodine upon the wound without touching the wound with anything. It smarts like the very dickens, but just for a moment, and as soon as it dries the smarting ceases. Then a sterile—germfree, steam sterilized, baked, boiled, freshly ironed—dressing or cover to protect the wound from accidental contamination, is usually the best treatment.

This dressing or cover may be a pad of gauze (cheesecloth) or other absorbent cloth freshly ironed and not touched by anything before it touches the wound; or a ready to apply fold of plain sterile gauze on a strip of adhesive plaster immediately after removing this from the sealed envelope and with great care to avoid touching the gauze with anything before it touches the wound; or simply a strip of unhandled adhesive plaster; or a coating of flexible collodion.

Such first aid treatment is best for nearly all wounds—immediate mild tincture of iodine and, as soon as this dries, a suitable sterile dressing or cover.

But iodine will not prevent tetanus (lockjaw). For any slight scratch, cut, burn or other wound by gun powder, fireworks, cap pistol; or for any slight wound sustained in circumstances or environment where there is any probability of contamination by animal excrement — about stables, farmyards, recently manured field or garden— an immediate application of iodine is all right but not enough for safety; the wound should be surgically treated as the earliest possible moment, and perhaps a prophylactic injection of tetanus antitoxin given by the physician. Any burn or wound in which even minute particles of powder, wadding, dirt or other foreign matter may be embedded is particularly dangerous as a portal of entry for the tetanus germ. The tetanus germ is a natural inhabitant of the intestinal tract of domestic and wild animals and sometimes that of man.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Never Mind Your Blood Pressure

My husband's blood pressure is all that troubles him.

(Mrs. F. L. M.)

Answer—It will be a sad thing if he ever gets caught without blood pressure. It was unfortunate that your husband learned his blood pressure is not what the quack thinks it should be. If you seek a diet, medicine or other remedy for "high blood pressure" I can't help you, Ma'am. My advice in every instance is, never mind your blood pressure—leave it to your doctor what, if anything, to do about it. Now if you still think I'm not daft, send twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address, for booklet CVD—cardio-vascula degeneration. Heart trouble, arterial troubles, valvular trouble, even a chapter on blood pressure.

Slivery Seal Disease

Several years ago I used your diet list for psoriasis and it helped a lot, in fact my skin cleared up and remained almost free from scales for two years and I hope you will send me the pamphlet as before.

(S. J. C.)

Answer—Some simple suggestions about diet in pamphlet. Others who have psoriasis may send stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing (clipping will not suffice) for the pamphlet "The Silvery Scale Disease."

Steady There, Girl

I am a fair golfer and break 90 consistently, but when I get into a tournament I usually "blow"—which makes my husband furious because he is so proud when I play well.

(V. H.)

Answer—Tell him to get to—keep out of there while you're playing. His tension communicates itself to you. Be sure to get plenty of calcium and vitamin D every day. That will steady you as well as anything I can suggest.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How many United States mints are there?

The United States has three mints — Philadelphia, Denver, and San Francisco — and three assay offices — New York, New Orleans, and Seattle.

The first mint in the English colonies was established in Massachusetts in 1652 and the first coins struck off in America were the famous "Pine Tree" shillings.

On March 3, 1781, two days after the Articles of Confederation became effective, Congress resolved that a mint be established, but no action was taken then. In 1787 Congress arranged for the minting of copper one-cent pieces by a private contractor. The Constitution declares that Congress shall have power "to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin," and that "no State shall . . . coin money."

On April 3, 1792, "An act establishing a Mint, and regulating the Coins of the United States" was approved. President Washington appointed David Rittenhouse, astronomer and instrument-maker, the first Director of the Mint on April 14, 1792, and on July 31 of the same year Rittenhouse laid the cornerstone of the new mint building. This brick structure in Philadelphia was the first building erected by the United States government.

The first coins struck off were half-dimes made of silver from Mount Vernon. These coins were not put into circulation but the entire issue was presented to President Washington by act of Congress. The first coins struck off for general circulation bore the date 1793 and were copper one-cent and half-cent pieces. Silver coins were first struck off in 1794 and gold coins in 1795. This "mother of mints" at Philadelphia still makes by far the largest number of United States coins and medals.

In 1838 three mints were established in the South — New Orleans, La.; Charlotte, N.C.; and Dahlonega, Ga. Upon the outbreak of the War Between the States in 1861 Federal operations were suspended at all three of the Southern mints and the Confederate government took them over. Only New Orleans opened after the war, and it was discontinued in 1909.

The San Francisco mint was established in 1854. A mint at Carson City, Nevada, was established in 1870 but discontinued in 1893. Coins were first struck off at the Denver mint in 1906. The main office of the Bureau of the Mint is in the Treasury Department, but contrary to a common notion there is no mint in the Federal Capital. All United States paper money, bonds, notes, bills, revenue stamps, postage stamps and cheques are printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, established at Washington in 1862 when the legal tender notes called "greenbacks" were authorized to finance the war.

Ordinarily coins made at Philadelphia have no mint markings; those made at Denver are marked with a D, and those made at San Francisco, with an S. During the Second World War five-cent pieces made of silver alloy at Philadelphia were marked P to distinguish them from five-cent pieces made of nickel alloy when the making of such coins was resumed. The U. S. mints make coins for foreign governments at cost as a gesture of good will and many governments have taken advantage of this good neighbor coinage policy.

FLIERS' BODIES FOUND

Sydney, Australia, April 7 — (Reuters)—The bodies of Wing Cmdr. B. R. Hoare, Battle of Britain pilot known to his colleagues in the R.A.F. as "Nelson Hoare" because he lost an eye in the Battle of Britain, and Flt. Lt. J. Colvin of London, were found on Sydney Island, off the northern coast of Australia.

Discovery of their bodies dashed earlier hopes that they might be safe after being missing for nine days during a flight across Australia's desolate northern territories.

FIGHT LOSING BATTLE

Shelburne, April 5 — (CP) — Snow-clearing equipment fought a losing battle against the snow-blocked highway through this village 40 miles northwest of Toronto yesterday. With the road still heavily drifted one snow blower was stalled with a broken axle and four bull-dozers quit due to breakage.

GOOD MANNERS

Not Announcements and Reception Invitations Together

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I want to have my wedding reception cards and announcements engraved soon, and would like your advice before I place my order. I am being married the last part of June in the Rectory, with only the members of the two families present at the ceremony. Then I am planning to have the reception from four to si xo'clock in the afternoon.

Would it be proper to send out announcements of our marriage and enclose the small reception cards? If not, how could I plan to announce the marriage and invite relatives and guests to the reception?

Florence R.

It would not be proper for you to enclose the reception invitations with the announcements. These items would have to be sent separately. If the reception you are planning to have is not to be a formal one, it would be proper to invite the guests orally or by telephone or by notes—preferably by notes written by your mother or by you in her name. Then formal announcements could be mailed to those not invited to the reception.

If you are having a large, formal reception, the invitations, engraved on double-sheeted wedding paper of the size that fits unfolded into the envelope, may read:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Alan Robbins request the pleasure of your company at the marriage reception of their daughter Florence and
Mr. Thomas Parish Dane
Tuesday, the twenty-fourth of June at four o'clock
Forty Pleasant Road
Haven, New Jersey

An Easter Buffet Table Blossoming with Hyacinths

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to serve a buffet brunch after church on Easter and I would like to use hyacinths, my favorite flower, as the buffet table decoration. Have you a suggestion as to how I could use them in some way other than just cut and grouped in a centre bowl?

E. F.

I suggest that down the centre of the table you have a "parade" of white-painted flower-pots containing the hyacinths, either all of one color or rainbow-hued. Or, if you prefer to use all white hyacinths, have the flower pots painted delicate Spring-green. If your buffet table is set against a wall, instead of in the centre of the room, the parade of hyacinths could, more conveniently, be along the side of the table nearest the wall.

Plans For Her Second Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a divorcee, in my late twenties, and have one child. Some time ago I met a man with whom I am now very much in love, and who loves me. He wants to give me an engagement ring, but since I am divorced and have a child, do you think I should accept this ring? He also wants me to announce our engagement; he says that would make the engagement "official". Is it proper for me to announce it? We plan to be married in June at a Protestant church. He would like to have me wear white at our wedding, because my first wedding was not in a church and I did not wear white. What is your advice about all these things?

Anxious

Since you are planning to marry this man it is of course proper for you to accept the engagement ring. It is proper too for you to announce the engagement, or, if your parents are living, for them to announce it. It is not correct for you to wear white at yur second wedding.

The Double Ring Ceremony

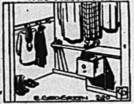
Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance and I would like to have a double ring ceremony. Who buys the groom's ring? And who carries it and gives it to the groom at the altar?

Bride-to-be

The bride buys the groom's ring. The groom's ring may be in charge of the maid of honor who hands it to the bride as the best man hands the bride's ring to the groom; or, if considered more convenient ,the best man may carry both rings.

Wife Preservers



To keep order in a full house, provide a catchall at the door for coats, boots, mittens and outdoor toys. A hall closet will serve, with a low row of hooks for the smallest child. Have a drawer handy for mittens; corral ball bats and umbrellas with a bar across one end of the closet, and install a big chest, or box, if possible, for balls, roller skates and other small toys.

Choose Your New Coiffure With Careful Consideration

Screen Star Marguerite Chapman wears her hair in a practical and becoming style

By HELEN FOLLETT

Some women desire to look pretty, overdo the job, and appear dowdy. They may not be the pretty-pretty type at all, but belong to the tailor-made contingent, the members of which should woo severe smartness of appearance rather than fluff.

The woman with good taste and an observing eye will know her type, will know how to play it up to best advantage. She will never make a mistake when choosing clothes or millinery. She has made a study of line and color. Never will she appear over dressed; that is a sartorial crime and no fair to those who have to look at her. She will have the spirited air of being in tune with her times. She belongs to the modern picture.

The hairdo must be selected with discrimination. It takes a beauty to get away with the plain, unwaved coiffure, the only decorative portion of which is a knob on the top of the tete. It may be all right for some women to have their wool sweetly simple of arrangement, but others should think twice before giving up their undulations and rolls. Beauty shop owners tell your good looks reporter that the majority of women are sticking to the three inch cut or hair a little longer. The shoulder bob is out except for the youngsters.

The disadvantage of the upped hairdo is that it leaves ugly spaces behind the ears. One wonders just how much concession a woman should make to current vogues. If they are not flattering, away with them!

Coiffure styles were never more varied. One has a wide choice. There is no set or standardized mode. Find out what makes you look sweetest and still imparts chic and stick to it.

If you are young, have a pleasing profile, then it is ups-a-daisy with your wool. But, if features are irregular, cultivate soft effects.

BEAUTY

A Beauty Shoy Owner Speaks Her Mind

"I have a high-class establishment, employ experienced, trained operators ,bend every effort to make the customers comfortable and pleased with our work. But there are days when we all have our nerves on edge because of the unreasonableness of a few thoughtless, selfish women.

"We start the day with our appointment books filled. A late patron will upset an operator's schedule. If her treatment is cut short she puts up a protest. She doesn't realize that she is paying for a certain amount of time, that it isn't fair to keep the next customer waiting because of her tardiness.

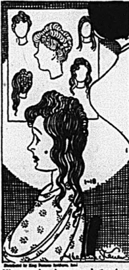
"There is the woman who, in the middle of a facial, will get up to make a long telephone call while the operator stands around and waits. She may be ordering groceries, or just chatting with a girl chum. Often she talks in a loud voice, disturbing others who have come in for rest and relaxation. This type of woman has a few other traits that are not to her credit. She talks down to those who serve her, treats them as menials, which is pretty silly of her since often they have better manners and a better education than she has. A cultured woman is considerate of every one, never says a quick, rude word.

"Some women make it a practice to unburden themselves of their troubles," she continued. "They tell about husbands who neglect them, and the telling is not to their credit. Wise women want to keep such matters secret. Some women dwell on their illnesses, going into all sorts of details as to their aches and pains, what the doctor said, what went on at the hospital, maybe remarking that their families showed little sympathy. Such revelations are disgusting. One feels embarrassed to listen to these women. They are depressing and upsetting, especially if an operator has troubles of her own locked up in her heart.

"Of course, these are the exceptions. Most women fly to the beauty shop as to a sort of haven. Life is pretty exacting and delirious these days; few women have much leasure, and they snatch at opportunities to get away from it all.

"What I can't understand is how the unpleasant women can live with themselves, how they can survive their unreasonable tantrums and complaints. I've seen women tear their hairdos all to pieces after they had been arranged according to their own orders and directions. I've known them to spend half an hour deciding what color of nail polish they will buy. They don't know what they want. They have no compunctions about wasting our time.

"It takes all kinds of people to make a world, but I don't see why. The world would get along better if everyone were nice."



We wonder how unpleasant women can live with themselves.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How to Meet a Perfect Stranger

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The first time I saw him was at a hockey game between a neighboring town and our own. With my first glance at the visiting players, he stood out most of all, and all evening he was the one I watched.

I pointed him out to my companion and she told me she knew him when she lived in the same town that he came from. So now I know his name and address and that he has a good reputation.

We are the same age, and since that game I find myself thinking about him all the time. Should I write to him and tell him about myself and how he interested me that night?

"K. H. S."

Yours is not the first letter I have received asking how it may be possible to meet a perfect stranger, but yours is the first to suggest that you write him a letter and tell him about yourself.

I think that you had better figure out a way to obtain an introduction to him in a more conventional manner than by throwing yourself at his head, so to speak, through the mails. That would be a rather crude thing to do. And while it might gain some temporary attention for you from him, I doubt if it would be the kind that you would care for.

If you have a friend who already knows this boy, why can't you get an introduction to him through her? If she is a good friend of yours, she should be glad to bring this about in some way. Perhaps there will be a return hockey game in his town to which the two of you could go. Then she could find an opportunity to let him know she was there and he would probably come to speak to her and she could introduce you. Or perhaps some time she will be giving a party to which she could invite this boy.

Certainly I would try to meet him through the conventional channels rather than the direct approach you suggest.

A Girl With a Vicious Stepfather

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl 19 years old, have been married and have two children. My husband and I are divorced.

I live with my mother and my stepdad and my stepdad is very jealous about me. I can't go out anywhere without asking him, and I do not want to stay with them any longer. He has made improper advances to me and I have told my mother about it, but she won't believe me, and I don't know what to do. I want to work, but I don't want to just get up and walk out without some advice on what I should do.

"T. N. R."

It seems to me that you should lose no time getting up and walking out, if you can make some provision for your children so that you would be free to go to work. I assume that your stepfather is supporting you and your children, and, if you had to do this yourself, it would of course complicate the situation if you tried to set up a home of your own. However, complicated though it might be to work out in the beginning, I feel sure that it would be much more satisfactory in the end if you left your mother's home, where your stepfather tries to take advantage of you, and went as far away from him as possible.

You live near a large city where there should be some social welfare organization to which you could go for advice and guidances. Or perhaps you have a priest or a minister who could help you. I suggest that you try to find someone nearby in whom you could confide and who could help you make definite plans.

His Girl's Mothers Blocks Their Romance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a boy, 22 years old and I go with a girl who is 21. The girl is not allowed to go out with me. The only way we can see each other is in church or the movies, and then she is never alone; she always has her sister with her.

I love this girl very dearly and would like to go out steady with her, but her mother has warned her to keep away from me. The mother has called me all sorts of names and has even threatened that she will put a knife in me if I ever see her daughter again. Would you please be good enough to advise me?

"Unhappy Boy"

Doesn't this mother give any reason why she opposes your friendship with her daughter? There are mothers, of course, who are just opposed to the whole idea of their daughters' getting married and leaving them, and some are so obsessed with the subject that they will go to almost any lengths to prevent this.

It may be, of course, that this is a woman who is this unbalanced type, and, if so, I am afraid you are out of luck as long as your girl continues to live under her mother's domination. At 21, a girl is old enough to leave her home if she is unhappy there and has reasonable grievances, and make her own way independently. Since this girl has apparently not done this, it may be she prefers to remain under her mother's threatening thumb. Possibly, of course, she may be afraid to provoke her mother's violence, but, if things are as serious as all this, I certainly cannot see any reason why she should choose to remain in such an atmosphere.

There is only one thing I can think of that might possibly help the situation as it exists, and that is for you to try playing up to the mother so that she changes her attitude toward you. Do you think if you took her a little present now and then, and did everything you could think of to make her feel good, it might make her look at you differently? Why not try sending her some flowers with a little note telling her how much you would like to be friendly with her and her daughter; mention a certain night when you would like to invite the girl out and tell the mother just where you would like to take her daughter and the time she could expect her home again; then ask if she wouldn't be good enough to permit this. If you are diplomatic in some such way as this, you may be able to win her over. But if these tactics do not work, then, as I say, I doubt it you will get anywhere until the daughter decides she will be an independent human being.

Fashion Flashes

HERE AND THERE we note an ankle-length evening dress a nice balance between the floor-length skirt and the street-length cut. Floral printed silk, the vivid colors picked up with matching sequins, is used for a handsome ankle-length evening frock made with side skirt drapery, and bowtied bodice. Matching gloves give it added interest.

For those who don't like lots of trimming, one designer shows delightful little half bonnets of white felt or fine straw, edged with pique and finished with little half veils. Demurely charming and fresh looking.

NICE NOVELTY gloves — not overdone and very smart—are on the counters now. A one-button glove of inky black suede has daisy cutouts lining the side right up to the flared top.

THE LITTLE FUR has become a big year-round promotion. Right for Spring is a sling cape of mink, the hem worked in over-lapping scallops, the shoulders worked in miter formation.

PERFECT for travel purposes is a handsome handbag of pigskin patterned after an overnight zipper bag, complete even to gold button feet on the four corners of the flat base. Bag is leather lined.

THE WHOLE GAMUT of color is used for the new suits. Fine wool crepe fashions a handsome suit the double-breasted jacket —with wide, pointed revers—is of a vivid geranium red; the skirt is electric blue.

Now That Spring is Here

Coming events cast their shadows before them, and how true this is of spring. When you see the boys playing marbles, the girls skipping, or hear the first crow, you may be assured that spring is just around the corner. Another never failing harbinger is the appearance of spring foods, rhubarb, maple syrup and leaf lettuce, to name a few. These seasonal newcomers are most welcome, for at this time of year everyone has grown just a little tired of the regular winter foods.

For the first few spring treats of maple syrup, the home economists of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, suggest serving the syrup with hot tea biscuits, Johnny Cake, or muffins. Then follow along with some of the light flavorful desserts made with the syrup.

Grades for maple syrup are "Canada Fancy", a very light colored syrup, mild in flavor; "Canada Medium", darker in color, with a more pronounced flavor. The bulk of the maple syrup sold is of the latter grade. The lowest grade, "Canada Dark", is seldom sold on the retail market. If maple syrup is left in the open container for any length of time, it will ferment. To keep the syrup indefinitely, bring to a rolling boil, in an open kettle and seal at once in hot, sterilized, glass sealers.

The first rhubarb to appear in the shops is hot house grown, with delicate pink colored stalks and pale yellow-green leaves. The garden rhubarb, which comes later, is darker in color, with deep green leaves. The most popular way to serve young, tender, spring rhubarb is stewed, or baked. Like maple syrup, the rhubarb is specially good with hot biscuits or muffins.

Cream Puffs a la Rhubarb

Cases
1-2 cup water
1-4 cup lard
1-2 cup all-purpose flour
1-4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs unbeaten.

Bring water to boiling point, add lard and melt. Sift together the flour and salt. All at once, stirring vigorously. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture leaves sides of pan. Remove from heat and cool. Add eggs, one at a time, beating vigorously after each addition until mixture is smooth. Beat thoroughly for one minute. Drop by heaping tablespoons on a greased baking sheet 2 inches apart. Bake in a hot oven 400 degrees F. for 15 minutes. Do not open oven door during this period. Reduce heat to 375 degrees F. and continue baking for 30 minutes. Cool. Cut small slice from top, fill cases with thick, stewed rhubarb, garnish with Creamy Custard, and replace top slice. Six servings.

Creamy Custard

1-4 cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1-4 teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla
Few grains nutmeg.

Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Heat milk to boiling point in top of double boiler. Add sugar mixture gradually, stirring constantly until mixture thickens. Continue cooking for five minutes. Beat egg yolks, add a little of the hot mixture, and blend well. Return to hot mixture, stirring constantly and cook for 1 minute. Remove from heat, add vanilla and nutmeg. Chill thoroughly. Beat custard with rotary beater before serving. Six servings.

Maple Pudding a la Reine

3 egg yolks
1-2 cup maple syrup
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 1-2 cups milk
1 cup soft, stale bread crumbs (well-packed)
3 egg whites

Beat egg yolks, add 1-4 cup maple syrup, salt and milk. Pour over bread crumbs. Place in a greased baking dish and oven-poach at 350 degrees F. for 1 hour or until well set. Beat egg whites with a pinch of salt. Gradually add remaining 1-4 cup maple syrup, beating until mixture will hold in peaks. Place on top of pudding and brown in a slow oven 300 degrees F. for 20 minutes. Six servings.

WRITTEN OFF AS SUICIDE

Paris, April 7 — (AP) — The mysterious Easter Sunday death of Geza Rac, 40, Czechoslovak Consul, was written off as suicide on Paris police records today.

Police first leaned to a homicide theory after Rac's battered body was found early yesterday in the Palais De Chaillot steps near the Eiffel Tower. Later they reported finding a letter in his clothing addressed to an erstwhile women companion.

Today they said evidence indicated he had thrown himself from a palace tower to the sidewalk shortly after midnight Saturday.

KIDNEY ACIDS Rob your Rest..

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—blame it on "nerves"—when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons and excess acids from the blood. If they fail and impurities stay in the system—disturbed rest often follows. If you don't rest well get and use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's help the kidneys so that you can rest better—and feel better. 134

DYSPEPSIA at the Banquet.. TWO RENNIES give instant aid

Whether it's at a banquet, or when you're out to dinner or if you're eating at home, you want quick relief when dyspepsia makes you miserable; and you can have quick relief if you carry a few RENNIES with you.

Digestif-RENNIES are pleasant-tasting tablets. You dissolve them in your mouth like candies. Their soothing antacid ingredients neutralise excess acidity and quickly help relieve the discomfort of dyspepsia, sour stomach, heartburn and digestive upsets.

Each Rennies tablet is individually wrapped in hygienic waxed paper. Carry a few RENNIES in pocket or handbag. Easy to take—anytime, anywhere. At all Drug Stores—25c and 75c.

If Rennies don't relieve your indigestion, it's high time you saw your doctor.

Maple Grove School Endorses School Area Proposal

The ratepayers of S. S. 4 Sidney met in the school house on the second concession last Monday and voted unanimously in favor of forming a Township School Area in South Sidney. School Inspector R. H. Macklem who outlined some of the advantages of having several schools under one board of trustees said that twenty-five school sections in his inspectorate had voted in favor of school areas showing that ratepayers are increasingly aware of the financial and educational benefits of larger units of school administration.

Mr. Stanley Spafford presided over the meeting. Harleigh Hamilton acted as secretary. John Sargent of Centenary and Alex Vandervoort of S. S. 5 Sidney acted as scrutineers during the balloting. Mr. Fred D. Atkins of Centenary was a visitor and in his brief remarks said that school areas could bring certain definite advantages. Councillor Lee Grills was also present.

The trusees of S. S. 5 Sidney (Harder's School) were present and they decided to have a meeting of ratepayers in their school on April 14 to discuss school areas.

London Women Not Dressed Up For Easter Parade

By ED GREAGH

London, April 7. (AP)—My wife and I took part in the Easter parade along Rotten Row yesterday, but all I can tell you about the Spring fashions is that the British women were not wearing them.

Rotten Row, it should be explained, is not the sort of neighborhood it sounds like. It is a stretch of Hyde Park where people of derby hats ride horses which kick dust all over the new clothes of people who walk along Rotten Row after church to show off their new clothes.

"Let's take a stroll through the park," suggested my wife casually, "and see what the women are wearing." There was no suggestion in her voice that she wanted the women to see what she was wearing—among other items, a blue bonnet brought back from Paris last week.

Well, we strolled, and the bowler hat brigade was out in full force, but if the swirling dust was looking for some new outfits to light on, it is swirling yet. The London woman was not dressing up for Easter.

"It ain't like pre-war dearie," said the woman who runs a news stand at Hyde Park corner. "Women nowadays, they 'aven't the heart to buy new 'ats unless they 'as new clothes to go with 'em. New clothes—hah!"

She hurled a scornful laugh at the whole system of clothing ration coupons, needed for everything from ankle-socks to handkerchiefs.

So we took another lap, and it was just as the woman said—a succession of prim little "sensible" hats, coats that had been through a tough war, and shoes that had been to church on previous Easters.

"You know," said my wife, "I feel definitely conspicuous wearing this. . . ." She did some fumbling with a hatpin and the next thing I knew, the Paris bonnet was under her arm. It was still there, out of sight, when we boarded the bus for home.

FOXBORO W. M. S.

Foxboro—The April meeting of the W.M.S. was held on Thursday afternoon in the S.S. rooms with sixteen in attendance, following a Mission Band dinner.

An Easter Scripture Lesson was read by Mrs. W. Scott and the Scripture story was told by Mrs. W. Hodgen. The last chapter of the Study Book on India was made interesting by Mrs. J. G. Sills. Business was then conducted. Clothing for China was to be sent. Readings were given on Temperance by Mrs. M. C. Reynolds and on Christian Stewardship by Mrs. E. Tummon. Mission Band reported nearly nineteen dollars on hand.

WEDDINGS

STUBBS—BURWASH

Marmora — St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, decorated with Easter lilies, daffodils and iris, was the scene of a pretty wedding at three p.m. on Wednesday, when Audrey, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Burwash, of Marmora, became the bride of James Elery Stubbs, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Stubbs, Sarnia. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. M. Cadigan, and wedding music was played by Miss Ruth Burwash, Toronto, cousin of the bride, who sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Through the Years."

The bride given in marriage by her father, was attired in a gown of imported white satin with dolman sleeves, sway waist line and slight train. She wore her mother's wedding veil of embroidered swiss net caught with a wreath of white flowers.

She carried a cascade bouquet of briarcliffe roses and calla lilies.

Miss Beth Fuller of Halifax, was bridesmaid, wearing a gown of jade green fashioned on princess lines, matching shoulder length veil and white headdress. Her bouquet was of calla lilies.

George Ellsworth of Trenton, was groomsman and the ushers were Donald Hannah of Baltimore, Ont., and Alfred Scott of Brighton.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received the guests wearing a gown of heavenly blue crepe with black straw picture hat, black accessories and a corsage of pink carnations. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing black crepe and a corsage of red and white carnations.

The couple left on a motor trip to Ottawa and Montreal, the bride travelling in a black and white studio style dress with black and white check shortie coat, black and white hat and corsage of red roses. On their return they will reside in Sarnia.

Out of town guests were present from Sarnia, Toronto, Cobourg, Brighton, Trenton, Baltimore and Montreal.

Dionne Quints Bridesmaids At Brother's Wedding

Callander, April 7 —(CP)—While the Dionne Quintuplets acted as bridesmaids and sang throughout the ceremony, their eldest brother, 20-year-old Ernest, was married today to Jeannette Guindon, pretty schoolteacher of nearby Corbeil.

Following a week-long honeymoon in Ottawa and Montreal, it was learned today that the young couple will reside in what was formerly the nursery home of their famous sisters. The 13-year-old Quints now live with their parents and eight brothers and sisters in a mansion-like home near the nursery.

Rev. Rene Lamoureux of Ottawa performed the ceremony in the chapel of the Dionne home. At the bride's request the Quints and their sisters formed a choir to sing "Ave Maria."

Daughter of Mrs. Burgess Guindon of Hammond, Ont., and the late Mr. Guindon, Jeannette was given in marriage by her brother, Joseph, also of Hammond. She wore a gown styled with a bouffant skirt of white nylon net and fitted bodice of white brocadé. A wreath of natural orange blossoms crested her while-silk net veil and a cascade of white roses completed her ensemble.

The Quints — Emilie, Marie, Yvonne, Cecile and Annette — chose frocks styled with black velvet bodices and full skirts in pastel shades. They wore headdresses of silk net and flowers to match their gowns.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Dionne residence.

On their return from their honeymoon the bride will complete the term as school teacher at Corbeil and Ernest will continue to assist his father in operating their northland farm here.

Women's Activities

WALLBRIDGE W. I.

The March meeting of Wallbridge W.I. was held at Mrs. Morley Phillips' last Monday with 14 members present.

After discussion Mrs. H. Phillips moved, Mrs. L. J. Ketcheson seconded, that the W.I. sponsor the girls' club another year if they wish to take the project. Mrs. C. Woods and Mrs. K. Kingston were elected to represent the girls' club in voting for next year's project.

Suggestions and discussions followed for a social evening to be held in the school in the near future. Final arrangements were left to the committee.

Mrs. White gave a very descriptive travelogue of Europe. Their houses, farms, crowded ways of living and deplorable starvation and lack of clothing were very clearly pictured.

Mrs. J. Sine suggested all good usable clothing be salvaged and sent to Europe.

Home and Country papers were distributed. Mrs. H. Ketcheson displayed the Village History Book.

Mrs. Hamann offered to take the April meeting.

Mrs. Sine moved a vote of thanks to the hostess. Mrs. C. Ketcheson seconded the motion. Following, a very delightful lunch was served by the conveners.

Performance Of 'Passion' Music Outstanding Event

Mr. V. P. Hunt, in contributing a review of the performance of the St. Matthew Passion according to the Gospel of St. Matthew with music by John Sebastian Bach by the Mendelssohn choir in Toronto last week, pays tribute to the Presto Musical Club of Belleville on taking thirty seats and attending in a body to enjoy this great musical event last week.

In his review Mr. Hunt says, "The Passion music by J. Sebastian Bach was first performed in Leipzig under Bach's own direction by the choir of St. Thomas' Church of which he was organist and director and has been sung by the Mendelssohn Choir for twenty-four years annually under the direction of Sir Ernest MacMillan. This monumental work is deeply religious in conception, following the events of that tragic week leading up to the betrayal of Our Lord and the Crucifixion according to St. Matthew's Gospel. Bach in this work gave to the world some of his most inspired music. The solo parts, the heart-throbbing chorales, the double choruses simply leave one in amazement and wonder at the immortal genius of the man. For many years after his death in 1750 this and others of his compositions were neglected, but Mendelssohn in 1829 exactly one hundred years after the first performance revived it by a performance in Berlin and ever since Bach's compositions have been heard with ever increasing amazement and delight. His organ compositions, Preludes and Fugues, motets cantatas, and the great B Minor Mass are ever new with each rendering. The writer of this article first heard it in Leipzig. It has been sung in Westminster Abbey for many years but the performance of the Mendelssohn Choir is above all in its approach to perfection and the fact that for twenty-four years every seat has been sold in advance and this year for two nights in succession, shows the interest and love for the work by the people of Toronto and the surrounding district.

Regarding the soloists most of them have been engaged for years, all Toronto singers and they know and sing their respective parts with exquisite taste and expression. Taken as a whole the performance of the St. Matthew Passion is the outstanding event of the musical season."

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

You need not believe this story. When the new maid was ready to serve, she asked the hostess: "Where are the nuts?" Father looked up from his newspaper to remark: "They are already playing bridge."

Four persons with intelligence enough to play bridge can always be found. Names and places need not be fictional. Any resemblance to those you have seen play the game is purely typical.

Such a group will be made up of sound and practical characters. They even have the wisdom to believe in some form of recreation. And this is a healthy sign in anybody.

At home or in business their dealings are sensible. They adapt methods best suited to them. They are determined to understand what they are asked to do. Normal humans, you must admit.

But in bridge a peculiar quirk seizes them. They study a system they are unable to apply efficiently. They follow it without knowing confidently why. And they even put up a fight in its defense.

Learning it after a fashion, they use it with all partners. Even with partners who do not understand it. And when partner fails to understand, do you know what they do? They blame partner.

Bridge players should first learn a system they can understand. Later they may add a few conventions for more expert use, but not with partners who are unfamiliar with such signals.

It seems that south opened with a heart and west bid two hearts with this hand:

♠ A 8 5 2
♥ None
♦ K Q 3 4
♣ A 9 6 4 2

This was the convention signal for showing no heart losers and a powerful mitt otherwise.

East, who was known to be more or less of a beginner, passed. West complained. But west was at fault. No player should use a convention signal without knowing that partner is familiar with it. Talk my language.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The English country-side will be the featured star in four pictures being planned by producer Sydney Box of Gainsborough Pictures, one of the units in the J. Arthur Rank organization.

First of the series will be a racing story, "Becher's Brook," and remake of Edgar Wallace's story, "The Calendar," will be another. Each picture will have scenes calling for brilliant sunshine, some for rain and some for cloudy weather.

Bracken, The Producer

Eddie Bracken, the comedian, is turning producer to make a baseball film "With The Odd Name of .750 Smith."

"The digits in the title refer to the percentages this chap Smith is always trying to figure out," Eddie said. He will play the lead himself with Bill Demarest in the second comedy part.

Around The British Lots

Googie Withers, the British star, got her unusual name from her childhood nurse in India. "Googie" means "crazy" in Bengalese and Googie was always doing crazy things.... Margaret Lockwood, Patricia Roc, Stewart Granger, Jean Kent, John Mills and Phyllis Calvert are on the receiving end of most of the fan mail in British studios.

Loy For Luck

Myrna Loy has earned the flattering reputation of being lucky for a picture.... She is in "The Best Years of Our Lives", it won nine academy awards. William Powell says most of his best pictures, like the "Thin Man" series, had her as co-star and she's in there pitching in "The Bachelor and the Bobby-Soxer" with Cary Grant and Shirley Temple. Now she has been signed for the feminine lead in the screen version of John Steinbeck's "The Red Pony."

Young Married Couple Honored

Roslin (Special)—Miss Marion Fargey of Toronto is spending a short holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Fargey.

Mrs. A. Beattie and Heather Ann of Toronto are spending a couple of weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Carter.

The Women's Association held their April meeting on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. Chisholm.

Over seventy-five friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. White a week ago in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart White (nee Marion Grills) who were married recently. The early part of the evening was spent playing progressive euchre with prizes for the high scores going to ladies, Mrs. Harry Sills; gentlemen, Mr. Arthur Mullett.

Around midnight Rev. Mr. Beazer called the gathering to order and Stuart and Marion were asked to take a place of honor while Mrs. A. Clare read an address and then they were presented with a gift of money, for which they both very graciously expressed their thanks for the gift. They invited everyone to visit them in their new home near Demorestville. Refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart White moved to their new home in Prince Edward County last week.

The regular meeting of the St. Andrew's Helper was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bradshaw. Progressive crokinole was played during the evening with four tables in play. Prizes for the evening's high scores went to, ladies, Miss Hazel Wilson, gentlemen, Mr. Norman White. Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Easter Parade On Boardwalk Held Despite Gale

Toronto, April 7—(CP)—When Mr. P. T. Barnum coined the immortal phrase about one being born every so often, he couldn't have been thinking about this year's Easter parade, but then again, he might have been.

The traditional parade with hundreds of young, and not so young women, displaying their finery, was once more held along Toronto's boardwalk and it seemed everyone had heard about it but the elements.

A wind of gale proportion and rain that spattered down against new chapeau and spring coats, turned participants into shivering icebergs, but the show went on. There was a mixture of fur coats topped with frivolous hats and there were spring coats worn with galoshes.

One man, muffled to the ears with a scarf, overcoat and with his hands buried deep in his pockets, caused a mild titter. He displayed brown and white sport shoes.

As one press writer noted, the most comfortable place to be was in one of the baby carriages pushed by a pretty young mother. The very junior paraders at least looked as though they were enjoying it all.

Russia Lifts Some of the Mystery Of Kremlin to Foreign Correspondents

By ROSS MUNRO

Moscow, April 7 (CP)—Soviet officials lifted at least some of the curtain of mystery which hangs over the Kremlin when they took me and 10 British correspondents on a three-hour conducted tour of this small, walled township with its ancient red brick battlements and towers in the centre of Moscow.

This really is the heart of Russia because from the Kremlin the decisions of Prime Minister Stalin and the Politburo go out to 190,000,000 Russians and to the world. It is here the Supreme Soviet—the Russian parliament—holds its sessions, which last only a few days each year, in "the Grand Kremlin Palace" with representatives from all 16 republics present.

Stalin lives inside the Kremlin and most members of the Politburo work here. Nobody in the party was certain as to whether they saw the modest yellow house of Stalin's for, although we passed a lot of houses, when we asked our guide he took evasive action by saying: "Really, very few people live here."

But we did see one large and fairly modern building near the main clock-tower gate which likely contained executive offices for top officials.

Czarist Jewels

A surprising feature was that there were a lot of structures inside the Kremlin walls which had nothing to do with the running of Russia. There were a cluster of a half-dozen ancient churches and four or five museums loaded with czarist jewels, clothes, couches, thrones, weapons, paintings and extravagant gold and silver dishes and porcelain furniture.

These museums portrayed whole cycles of pre-revolutionary history, complete with the Crown jewels of many Czars.

With a Russian Foreign office representative, we went into the Kremlin through "The Gate of the Forest," through which Napoleon entered in his triumph which turned to bitter defeat.

Only two young Red Army sentries stand with fixed bayonets by the archway of the towers, which has a system of bells and traffic lights to handle automobiles coming in and out. A couple of Soviet officers joined us as well as a guide, who talked as if he had been dealing with Cook's tours of the Kremlin daily for 20 years.

The permission we obtained was exceptional and probably never before has a group of newspapermen such as ours been shown around for three hours. We first walked along a macadam avenue up a slope to what was called Cathedral Square, flanked by a cluster of three churches as old as Moscow's 800 years.

There were three other churches, which were a couple of centuries more modern. All had shining gilt domes like huge Spanish onions topped by crosses. One of them, we were told, contains the tombs of 47 Russian Czars.

Few people ever have been into any of these churches, but our guide led us into one of the older edifices being restored in all the ecclesiastical splendor of the early Czars.

The arched ceilings carried magnificent religious murals and scores of gold and silver ikons were being replaced on the walls. More than 50 priceless Russian paintings dating back to the 12th century, lined the naves like an art show.

Eerie Quiet in the Kremlin

From the church we walked through several more avenues to the centre of the Kremlin near the big executive office building. The roads were practically deserted, and I saw only one section of eight soldiers together by one house. They were unarmed and a non-commissioned officer was reading some order to them. The soldiers took more interest in seeing us than in listening to the order, and the NCO had to call them to attention.

A couple of Soviet limousines whirled past us and some trucks loaded with snow drove by. The Kremlin certainly wasn't a bustling place. There was an almost eerie quiet about it which was only properly broken by the clanging of the traffic bells on the fortress gates.

The guide took pride in showing us a Russian cannon called the "Czar Gun" but to fire grapeshot in defence of the Kremlin a couple of centuries ago. The muzzle of the gun was 2 1-2 feet across. A number of other smaller, ancient cannon were lined up alongside it.

Then we were taken to another showpiece — the 200-ton "Czar Bell." It is a giant casting job, about 20 feet across, resting on another pedestal. It has never rung.

Where Supreme Soviet Meets

The Soviet Government is working on a big scheme to recreate the Grand Kremlin Palace the way it was during the Czarist regime. Bedrooms, the private chapel, dining halls, reception rooms and vast salons are being restored to their original splendor. We saw one magnificently decorated room where Ivan the Terrible held court and a little balcony where court women were allowed to look down discreetly on the spectacle.

None of these rooms, with the occasional exception of a salon, is used. They are called museums, to be viewed by selected groups of foreigners and Russians.

In the private rooms of the Czar we went down thickly carpeted staircases into a part of the palace which is modern Russia. Here we were shown the assembly hall of the Supreme Soviet.

It is a long and comparatively narrow hall sloping downward gently from the rear to the rostrum at the front, backed by a large statue of Lenin. The walls are gleaming white and the balcony stretches halfway up the wall where visitors, foreign diplomats and the Soviet and foreign press sit when the Supreme Soviet holds its shortlived sessions. More than 1,000 persons can be seated comfortably.

We walked out into the rain again and went down the slope through the gate of the forest having seen a bag full of museums and covering more than half the area of the Kremlin, a triangle about half a mile long on each of its three sides. But all of us wondered what really creates this myth of awesome mystery one feels when looking at it from the outside.

AT THE BELLE — Marshall Thompson as a Seabee hero, Clem Bevans as a ranch country storekeeper, and "Bess," M.G.M.'s "wonder horse" as they appear on the Belle Theatre screen in "Gallant Bess." The new M.G.M. picture, filmed in the new Cinecolor process, also features George Tobias in an excitement-filled story of the outdoors.

Point Traverse

Commercial Fishing Starts at Pt. Traverse

Point Traverse — Commercial fishing activities at this fishing colony have commenced, with the clearing of large masses of drift ice from the lake. Numerous fishing crafts from this harbor were on the lake last week. Although the catches of both whitefish and trout are not extra heavy, prices being offered are very high and fishermen are able to operate at a profit.

Commercial fishermen have an optimistic outlook that a good run of whitefish will be netted this coming season. Many yards of new net have been purchased and it is their hope that the summer whitefish catch will be fair, at least.

119-Year-Old Light

Lighthousemen of the False and Main Duck Islands, off here, are preparing to soon leave for their posts, and are expected to have their beacons in operation on or before April 15th.

Kenneth McConnell, Black Creek, will return to the False Duck, to tend his 119-year-old light, and Wesley E. Thomas, Picton, is the present keeper at the Main Duck island. The lighthouse at the entrance of this harbor is automatically operated.

Navigation aids have not been placed in local waters, although the C. G. S. Grenville is due in this area within a few days, as she is westward bound for the upper section of the lake to place summer markers.

Poor Catches Muskrats

The number of muskrats being taken from the marshes in the Black Creek vicinity are very light, according to those who are trapping them. Adverse weather conditions are said to be the blame for much of the poor harvest so far this spring.

26 Tribesmen Arrested For Witchcraft Slayings

Dar Es-Salaam, Tanganyka, April 7 (AP)—Twenty-six tribesmen have been arrested by Colonial police in connection with more than 40 killings attributed to "Lionmen" who dress in lion skins and prowl the villages of this East African country.

Police said investigations indicated that witchcraft and rivalry between witch doctors might have been the underlying cause of the slayings.

Police were handicapped by the refusal of superstitious tribal folk to say whether their relatives had been ripped to death by lions or by the knives of "lionmen."

Eleven of those arrested have been charged with murder.

Forty Injured In Train Wreck At Columbia City

Columbia City, Ind., April 7—(AP) — The Pennsylvania Railroad's Gotham Limited train carrying more than 300 passengers was wrecked early today at a street crossing in South Columbia City, injuring at least 40 persons.

An Indiana State Trooper at the scene said no one was killed outright and none of the injured appeared in critical condition, although "three or four were seriously hurt." There were no Canadians among the injured.

Arthur Jackson, Columbia City policeman, said he was approaching the crossing in a cruiser car as the train approached and "I saw a burst of flame shoot from the locomotive. Then the engine nosed over."

K. E. Berkins of Fort Wayne, the brakeman, said "The train apparently just jumped the track. The only car to overturn was a Pullman.

State police reported there were 15 cars in the train and 13 were derailed. The locomotive remained upright.

(The Pennsylvania Railroad reported in Philadelphia that 35 were injured, and that one person, a mail clerk, was hurt seriously.

The train was en route from Chicago to New York via Pittsburgh.

PLAY WITH GRENADES

London, April 7 (CP)—Searching a dump, three boys found two lemon-shaped metal objects yesterday and showed them to their parents. Police interceded in time and threw the objects into the Thames River—two intact hand-grenades.

Toronto Leafs and Canadiens Will Play for Stanley Cup As Leafs Dispose of Detroit Wings

First Time in 12 Years There Has Been an All-Canadian Final

By WILLIAM H. DUMSDAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 7 (CP)—Youngest team ever to contest for the historic Stanley Cup, the rookie-studded Toronto Maple Leafs today hoped the bloom of youth would be to their advantage when they seek to lift hockey's world crown from the more-aged heads of Montreal Canadiens in the first all-Canadian final in 12 years.

But it was the Leafs' "grand old man" at 33—Nick Metz—who received most of the back slaps Saturday night when they hurdled Detroit Red Wings, first obstacle in their path to the trophy Lord Stanley donated for competition in 1892.

The western wheat farmer came through with his finest hour of 11 years of National League competition when he fired two goals and helped in two others as the Leafs belted the Wings 6-1 in the fifth and deciding game of a best-of-seven semi-final round.

Coack Happy Day scrawled across the dressing-room blackboard that there would be a drill this morning, reminder to his youngsters that the toughest phase of their season's play starts tomorrow night in Montreal — another best-of-seven game series.

Pulled Muscle in Leg

As the Leafs moved onward, the Wings looked back on a series of breaks which helped wash them out of the playoffs. Their worst break came in the first period Saturday when goalie Red Almas retired after pulling a muscle in his right leg.

Cigar-smoking Johnny Mowers, the team's road secretary, who hadn't played since mid-season donned the pads but like his mates, he knew the move meant the end of Detroit's chances. The first Toronto shot flashed past him and four more followed as overweight Johnny Floundered about gamely—"All I could do was try my best."

Value of Nick Metz to his club was emphasized by the fact that he not only killed off penalties while his mates sat in the cooler but he fired his team's first goal during such a session. A great opportunist, Nick helped his brother Don with one goal and also made the play for Gaye Stewart on another.

Apps Gets One

Only Toronto rookie to find the net was Joe Klukay, the final tally going to captain Syl Apps, direct from a face-off to the left of the Detroit net.

Fern Gauthier made Turk Broda look bad on Detroit's lone marker as he sent a shot under the pudgy goalie's stick on a break-away from a Toronto power attack while Wings were shorthanded.

But the Turk was a standout in a game decided by netminding. As players cheered him, Manager Conn Smythe said that "when we played like amateurs a couple of times and opened up, it was Broda who saved the day."

First Detroiter in the Toronto dressing room and perhaps the individual star of the series, was Jack Stewart, bruising defenceman who bounced incoming Leafs till the final whistle. He thought the Leafs "have a little more hustle and should beat Canadiens easily."

Primeau's Squad Ready for Second Game in Montreal

Montreal, April 7 — (CP)—Joe Primeau's power-packed St. Michael's Majors arrived here last night in quest of their second straight win over Montreal Canadiens in the Eastern Canada best-of-five junior final. Montreal was drubbed 11-3 at Toronto Saturday.

Lacking the service of injured Howie Morenz, Montreal are still further handicapped with the loss of "Jolting Joe Lepine," who was forced to give up his rearguard post midway through the contest at Toronto when he suffered a shoulder separation.

Coach Frank Currie of Canadiens held a practice session at the Forum yesterday as he attempted to work out a winning combination around rugged Bob Fryday who has been the king pin of his squad throughout the regular season.

"That first game in Toronto was a tough one and I'm glad it's over," said Currie. "We're one down and three to go. I figure that we can take St. Mikes if our fighting spirit holds. I know they out-classed us but I still think my boys can win."

It is expected that the rink here will be sold out, equalling the 12,000 crowd that attended Saturday's game at Toronto.

The third game will be at Toronto Wednesday and the fourth game, if necessary, at Montreal April 11 and the fifth game if necessary, at Toronto, April 14.

Pittsburgh Hornets Have Edge on Bears

(By The Associated Press)

The surprising Pittsburgh Hornets held a 2-1 edge today as they prepared for their fourth meeting with Hershey Bears in the battle for the American Hockey League championship.

The Hornets came up with a 5-1 victory at home Saturday night to take the lead in the best-of-seven series for the Calder Cup. The Bears took the opener at Hershey but Pittsburgh evened the count before the series moved to Pittsburgh.

Two more games will be held in Pittsburgh and should the Hornets capture these, they will have won the American League title for the first time in history. A victory for Hershey in either game would move play back to Hershey for a sixth and possibly a seventh game.

Kansas City Pla-Mors To Meet Omaha Knights

(By The Associated Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors, winner of the United States Hockey League's second place playoffs, will open a best-of-seven series at Omaha tomorrow night against Omaha Knights, league champions.

This concluding series will determine only the playoff title. Omaha still will be recognized as the season's champion, even if it loses this final round.

Kansas City defeated Fort Worth 4-1 last night to take the runner-up playoffs 3-1. Omaha beat Dallas 4-2 in the championship series, completed last Tuesday.

IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE! — Those two arch enemies of the playoff icelanes, Leafs' Gus Mortson (left) and Red Wings' Ted Lindsay, posed happily together after Toronto's 6-1 elimination victory Saturday night. There is no love lost between the two during games, but they are inseparable pals when away from hockey rinks.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

It's holiday time and Ed. Shortt and his Y.M.C.A. crew are sparing no efforts to make the week an attractive one. Here is the program as from Tuesday on.

Tuesday, April 8th—9:30 a.m. Prep Girls special gym period and swim; 10:30 a.m. — Junior girls special gym period and swim; 9:30-11:00 a.m. — Prep and Junior Boys free bowling period; 7:15 p.m. — Basketball Y Bantams vs. O.S.D.; 8:15 p.m. —Basketball: Y Midgets vs. O. S. D. Seniors.

Tonight in Waterloo the doughty young Madoc Midget "C" squad meets the acid test of the season. They are stacked up against the starry Elmira sextette for the provincial title, and everything depends on tonight's game. The joust should prove a neat one as the Waterloo rink has artificial ice and there should be no alibis as to wet ice, etc. The Madoc squad is in rare condition and managed to get an occasional practice under their belts when the weather man permitted.

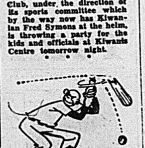
• • •

But they are up against a team that knows a lot of hockey answers. Wickell, the Elmira centre is headed for places in the hockey sun. He scored all six goals his team racked up against Madoc a few weeks ago when the squads tied six all in the first game of the total-goals titular series. Weiner Brown is another outstanding prospect for Madoc and the two should stage a tidy duel. . . . .

• • •

Appreciation tangible and otherwise will be shown the Kiwanis Junior Baseball team, the gallant squad that went to the Ontario semi-finals last year and were nudged out in a do-or-die series against the starry Hull team after a trio of ding-dong battles. The Kiwanis Club, under the direction of its sports committee which by the way now has Kiwanian Fred Symons at the helm, is throwing a party for the kids and officials at Kiwanis Centre tomorrow night.

• • •



The boys' sweethearts will be along as will wives of officials and others. The Sports Committee has left no stone unturned to give the boys a treat and a full account of the proceedings —will be published in Wednesday's editions.

• • •

Allen (Joe) Kelleher will be missing from the show but that lad is busy down in Brunswick, Georgia, with the Albany Senators of the Eastern League. He is cavorting around first base and played last week against the Toronto Maple Leafs. "Joe" is a bit homesick but he is being treated in royal style according to letters received here. He is doing a spot of travelling throughout sunny Florida and is thoroughly enjoying the experience.

Wednesday's leather pushing show at Trenton Air Station is attracting a lot of attention among fight fans in the city. The powers-that-be have lined up an outstanding card that sees such classy mitt slingers as Billy Goulding, Eddie Senos, Glen Dafoe, Johnny Page, Nicky Oneil, Joe Cardinal and other district boys clash. There are four five rounders with Goulding and Page slated as the main bout—and four three round goes. It is by far the most attractive set-up arranged here in some time and it should attract a large crowd.

• • •

One thing that bothers local sports minded folk occasionally is trying to find out where teams play next. It seems that whenever playdown time comes round, we have a team or two in Belleville sitting around trying to find out what to do next.

• • •

Right now, Ed Shortt has two basketball teams which are waiting for such information. Two weeks ago tonight, two teams of boys representing the Belleville Y.M.C.A. won Eastern Ontario basketball championships. The Bantams beat out Kingston, and the Midgets took their series from Napanee. The crests for these Eastern Ontario League championships are sitting on Ed Shortt's desk at the "Y", and the members of the teams are just sitting, waiting. Ed tells us that he was in touch with the League Secretary at Kingston two weeks' ago last Thursday on the phone, wrote letters all the following week and finally on Saturday afternoon, phoned the League Secretary again. And still he can't find out anything. Toronto papers have carried scores on rounds played by other teams in the playdown hunt, Peterboro beating out Toronto in one series and Toronto taking Peterboro in the other. Also, Western Ontario teams are playing off. This accounts for Central & Western Ontario as well as the Toronto representatives, but still the Eastern champions cannot find out who they play or where, or when. Something is obviously the matter with the O.A.B.A., for the Eastern Ontario Secretary claims he has wired and written the O.A.B.A. Secretary but gets no reply.

• • •

In the meantime, Ed Shortt has the Bantoms practising, and Ben Ritchie keeps his Midgets working.

In case you are interested to know who play on these teams, here are the player lists. These boys have brought championships into Belleville without any public acclaim, and without much publicity. Bantams: Don Dolan, captain, Lloyd Faulkner, John Batchelor, Bill Muirhead, Bill Scrymgeour, Bill Strahan, Bill Lazenby, L. Button, Doug Soule.

Midgets: Tom Buchanan, captain, Al Galbraith, Roy MacMillan, Sid Spiegal, Don Dudley, Don Rose, Morris Burke, Ray Scott, Roy Jeffrey, Bob Ketcheson, Ken Trumpour.

If you would like to see these boys in action, drop around to the "Y" on Tuesday evening when they will play games against teams from the O.S.D. the first game being called for 7.15.

EDDIE HARRISON SCORES FIVE AS ST. MIKES WIN

Defeat Montreal Canadiens 11-3 in First Game of Eastern Canada Final

Toronto, April 7 — (CP) — Howie Harvey, a native of Montreal, played a sensational game in the Toronto goal Saturday as the Toronto St. Michaels whipped Montreal Canadiens 11-3 in the first game of the best-of-five eastern Memorial Cup final. The teams play the second game at Montreal tonight.

The Montrealers were much better than the score would indicate and would have had several more goals but for the brilliant work of their expatriate at the Toronto end. The crowd of 12,535 saw the junior Canadiens throwing plenty of rubber at the Toronto net in the late stages of the game, but Harvey was at his best.

In the meanwhile St. Michaels' power-plays were producing goals galore against a somewhat weak Montreal defence. Canadiens lost their ace, Joe Lepine, in the second period when his ailing shoulder gave way as he was body-checked, and he may miss the rest of the series. Howe Morenz Jr. did not dress for the game because of a knee injury and it's doubtful also whether he'll see play in this series.

Anyway St. Michaels rolled up a lead of 6-0 before Trudel got the first Montreal goal. Canadiens' other counters came from Bobby Newton and Bob Fryday late in the last period.

Ed Harrison, St. Mikes' centre who is ticketed for Boston Bruins later, had a holiday as he scored five goals and one assist. Fleming Mackell and Ed Sandford had two each. The other Toronto goals were scored by Winslow and Migay.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 7 (CP)—Chivalry may desert the diamond when the Leo Durochers and Frankie Frischs are around but for the hard-working baseball umpire not even these baiting types can get him down for long. Those little men with the tyrolian hats and the wire legs might easily become daily morning after occurrences if the arbiter didn't have a sense of humor to ease the pain when the going gets tough during the "play ball" days...Larry Goetz of the National League staff has been an umpire for 28 years and he still gets a great kick out of a funny story of ball players' run-ins with the men in blue...For Larry's welter of baseball lore is immense. There was the time when he worked his first N.L. game with Bill Kelm and called a strike on Curt Davis, then the Phillies pitcher, on a bunt attempt..."It's the hardest play an umpire has to call," admitted Larry telling the story to Tommy (Brooklyn Eagle) Holmes..."But I thought I'd called it right. Jimmy Wilson, the Phillies manager, came dashing out and asked me if I would leave it to Klem to decide."

Klem Pleased

Goetz cooled Wilson down and after the game in the dressing room Klem came over to Larry asked: "Young man, why didn't you appeal to me?"..Why should I?" Larry replied. "I was the plate umpire and it was my decision to make."

Klem threw up his hands. "At last," he cried, "an umpire has come into the National League who doesn't ask Bill Klem to help him."

It's baseball stacking tales like these which give the men with the worn whiskbrooms the strength of a trusty excalibur when a Durocher bursts forth with a tirade on a hot summer afternoon in Brooklyn.

Queens of the Diamond

Dan (N.Y. Mirror) Parker, writing on protocol among baseball wives, says that the Brooklyn Dodger wives usually are a regular lot—real rooters with not a prima donna in the lot..."But the question in Flatbush just now is: 'Will Laraine (Day) be a baseball wife or will she be a career woman?'

One Dodger wife summed up the situation this way, says Dan ..."If's she's regular, she's okay with us. But if she tries any of that Hollywood baloney around Flatbush, It'll be the old Dodger war cry—'Everyone for their self and the devil take the hindmost!' "

Sans Dineros

Branch Rickey, the shrewd Brooklyn Dodgers president, never one to throw dineros around needlessly, has learned that there are some baseball lovers in Cuba who are equally frugal when it comes to leaving pesos at the ball park...The venture of the Dodgers in Havana will cost the Brooks more than $50,00...The expected overflow crowds to Havana's grand stadium never came—Rickey usually watched the Dodgers whip the Royals with 39,000 seats around him..Two hundred loyal Cubans watched Brooklyn whip Montreal Sunday and one weekend series with the Royals a total of $934-$134 for Friday, $300 for Saturday and $500 for Sunday.

HAMILTON TIGERS WIN ALL-ONTARIO SENIOR TITLE

Will Play Moncton Hawks in Semi-Finals of East Canada Playdowns

Timmins, Ont., April 7 — (CP) —Hamilton Tigers disposed of Hollinger Greenshirts 6-1 Saturday night to win the all-Ontario senior championship by three games to one in the best-of-five final. Tigers were headed back to Hamilton today to entertain their next opponents in the race to the Allan Cup — the Moncton Hawks, who open a best-of-five series at Hamilton Wednesday night.

The Tigers, champions of the senior O.H.A., and the Greenshirts, champions of the N.O.H.A., split a pair of games in Hamilton, then Tigers won the third here Friday night. Saturday the Greenshirts essayed to tie up the series at two-all, and actually scored the first goal. Pirie beat veteran goalie Art Childs on assists from Clouthier and Wilson at 7:30 of the first period.

But that was Hollinger's first and last score. Tigers worked into a 2-1 lead at the end of the first, 3-1 after the second and added three more in the finals.

Doug Runions and Bert Peer each scored two for the Tigers, Bill Dinning and Pierre Cadieux getting the others.

The rival goalies, Childs and Brownlee, were stars of the game which say very little rough play. Bert Lallo of Hollinger earned two minor penalties in the second period and a misconduct in the third but there were only 3 other penalties.

CANADIAN SPORT SNAPSHOTS

By SYD THOMAS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, April 7 (CP)— This Eastertide the Canadian sport world is a drabber and a sadder scene with the loss in the past few days of three men, who though perhaps not as well known to the average fan as the current idols of the ice and diamond and gridiron, still leave a gap that can't be overlooked.

Jim Fitzgerald, sports editor of the Toronto Evening Telegram for 47 years—a not inconsiderable achievement—died at his home near Toronto, and baseball historians were deprived of many of his unrevealed memories of old-time players and oldtime scenes.

Joe Page, the "father of baseball in Canada," the only man until his death who had seen every world series since the first one, and the only Canadian made an honorary member of the Baseball Writers Association of America, died in Montreal.

And in Wilmington, Del., death claimed Frank (Cosy) Dolan, a trainer of the old Ottawa Senators in the National Hockey League and one of the best known figures in the Ottawa sport scene in the past 24 years.

Sport's Loss

Of Jim Fitzgerald, or "Fitz" as his friends knew him, Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson said: "Jim Fitzgerald was an accurate and fair reporter....and a very definite personality not only in Toronto, but in the entire Canadian sports scene, a real authority, and a modest gentleman who never thrust himself forward seeking plaudits. Sport loses by his passing."

Joe Page, who organized and promoted at least 15 provincial and interprovincial baseball leagues in Canada, who brought the International and Canadian-American Leagues to Canada, then brought the National Hockey League to New York and made the United States hockey conscious as he had made Canada baseball conscious.

Of him, Dink (Montreal Gazette) Carroll, knowing baseball was Joe's greatest love, passes on the remark he made once: "I'm always glad when the baseball season opens and sorry when it goes." Baseball men all over this continent will be sorry to learn that Joe has gone, Dink adds.

PETERBOROUGH MARINES WIN 'A' CAGE CROWN

Defeat London Falcons 64-59 in Overtime to Capture Title in Two Games

London Ont., April 7 (CP)—Led by the high-scoring of forward Ed Nicholls, who counted 31 of his team's 64 points, Peterborough Marines captured the Ontario Basketball Association's Intermediate "A" championship when they downed London Falcons 64-59 in overtime. The visitors won the best-of-three series in two straight games. The score at full time was 53-53.

The high-scoring Marine was easily the game's standout but his finese around the basket only shaded the work of his hard-fighting team-mates. Gordon Burns followed with 11 points and Joe Stewart had nine for the winners.

Chris Hansen led the locals with 14 points. London's scoring was fairly evenly divided with Bruce Wilson adding 11, Sonny Colvin 10, Gordy McMackon 9, Ken Gage eight and Captain Tommy White seven points.

In a preliminary, London Bantams were edged by 26-25 by St. Jerome's College Bantams of Kitchener but the locals captured the two-game round 56-52 by virtue of their 31-26 win the Kraut City. London Bantams will now meet St. Catharines Welland Avenue for the Ontario title. The series opens there next Wednesday with the second game back here next Saturday.

Led by Earl Ford, who counted 16 points, the Kitchener squad took an early lead. They went ahead 14-9 at half hime. London came back in the second half but failed to knot the score as the game ended with the visitors one point to the good.

Don Goddard led the London team with eight points while Larry Dalton and Bill Stephens followed closely with seven and six respectively.

BOSTON OLYMPICS WIN

Boston April 7 (AP)—The high scoring Boston Olympics won their fourth straight amateur Hockey Association of the United States championship as they defeated New York Rovers 8-4 before a packed 13,909 crowd last night at the Boston Garden.

The victory enabled the Olympics to gain first place in a nine-game round-robin series by one point over Baltimore Clippers and the right to meet the Los Angeles Monarchs in the best-of-seven series for the U.S. Amateur championship.

Tobin Denies King Clancy Will Coach Hawks

(By The Canadian Press)

President Bill Tobin of the Chicago Black Hawks has described as "absolutely unfounded" a Montreal Gazette report Saturday that Johnny Gottselig, manager of the Hawk team which finished last in the National Hockey League race this season, would be moved into a front office job and Frank (King) Clancy, league referree, appointed his managerial successor.

Tobin said I have not given a thought" to replacing Gottselig.

Veteran Stan Cutts of Toronto successfully defended his world's professional badmington championship at Stratford Saturday night against Doug Grant of Montreal when he won the match in two straight games.

Shrewd, amiable Paul Haynes, who retired as a player a few seasons back has been reported by a reliable Montreal source to be under "strong consideration" as general manager of the Montreal Forum when Frank Selke relinquishes the post to assume direction of a proposed sport enterprise in Cincinnati.

The eastern Allan Cup playoff between Moncton Hawks and Hamilton Tigers will open April 9 at Hamilton with the second game at Toronto April 12. Further dates in the best-of-five series will be announced later.

P. Taylor's Cornish Knight—sole Canadian-owned horse eligible for this year's Kentucky Derby beat off five other Derby hopefuls to win the Cedar Manor sprint at Jamaica's opening program Saturday.

C.N.R. Bowlers In Close Games For Pringle Cup

The Annual C.N.R. Bowling Tournament for the Pringle Cup was held in Toronto Saturday. Forty eight bowling teams from Central Ontario entered. Teams from Sarnia, Stratford, Windsor, London, Niagara Falls, Mimico, Toronto and Belleville and others were present. Five games were bowled, no handicaps. Belleville, trying hard to win the Pringle Cup sent along 9 teams. Pinning their hopes on the high average team of Martin, Caton, Bellis, Mills and Graham.

London proved to be the winners this year with a total of 5532. Closely followed by Niagara Falls and Stratford.

The first Belleville team was Geo. Bishop's Locos who finished 7th. After the 1st game Locos was placed 2nd. But in the 2nd round fell to 5th place and finished 7th.

Belleville Dispatchers with 5066 was well up. Lionel Train with a total of 1209 for 5 games led the Dispatchers.

The scores of the Belleville Locos:—

Sydney Robinson	1088
Ray Burtt	911
Geo. Bishop	1048
Harry Robinson	1075
Doll Pointer	1049
	Total—5171

PHILADELPHIA WINS

St. Louis April 7 (AP)—Philadelphia Warriors are winners of the first Basketball Association of America playoff series to be completed, thanks to a light defence and mighty Joe Fulks.

The Warriors walloped St. Louis Bombers 75-59 last night before 6,605 spectators to take the series B playoffs 2-1.

In last night's game Fulks topped scorers with 24 points.

BRANDON ELKS HAVE BIG EDGE AGAINST CANUCKS

Brandon Needs Only a Draw to Win Western Canada Junior Title

Moose Jaw, Sask., April 7 — (CP) — Even rabid Moose Jaw Canuck supporters today concede that Brandon Elks were definite favorites to take the Western Canada junior hockey title after their 4-2 win over Canucks Saturday gave them a 3-2 point lead in the best-of-seven series.

Elks have won three games, tied one and lost one in the five games played to date, scoring 21 goals. Canucks have tallied 12 times. Sixth game in the series will be played tomorrow night at Regina, with the seventh, if necessary, scheduled for Thursday, also at Regina.

To take the series and win the Abbott Cup for the first time in their history all Brandon needs is a draw.

Walt Hergesheimer paced the Manitoba titlists to their win Saturday, figuring in three of their four goals. He scored twice and assisted linemate Ray Manson in another to became the series' leading point-maker with seven goals and two assists.

Gordie Watters accounted for the fourth goal, while Viv Kreklewetz and Hal Tarala were the Canuck marksmen.

The score was not quite indicative of the play, with Moose Jaw pushing most of the way. Erratic shooting around the Elks' net, however, coupled with brilliant goal tending by Ray McDermid kept Canucks' efforts from bearing fruit.

JIMMY DEMARET WINS GOLF CROWN

Augusta, Ga., April 7 (AP)—Jimmy Demaret's name is on the list with those of Byron Nelson and Horton Smith today as a double winner in the annual Masters golf tournament here as a result of his two-stroke victory in the 11th playing of the event.

Demaret, posted a one-under-par, his fourth consecutive sub-par round, in yesterday's final 18 hole to finish with a total of 281. Nelson, now retired, had a 70 for a 283, while an amateur protege of his, Frank Stranahan, of Toledo, O., had the day's best round with 68 to tie Nelson's total.

Ben Hogan runner-up here last year finished with a 70 for a 284 and a fourth-place tie with Harlod McSpaden of Sanford, Me.

Henry Picard of Cleveland, O., and Jim Ferrier of Chicago finished in a tie for sixth place with 286, while five others—Ed Oliver of Wilmington, Del.; Dick Metz of Arkansas City, Kas.; Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va. Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago, and Tony Penna of Cincinnati—were knotted at 287.

Bobby Locke South African champion who arrived last Wednesday just in time to play a fast practice round, had rounds of 74-74-71-70 for a 289 total and a 14 place tie.

HOLD LONG LEAD

Windsor, April 7 — (CP) — Windsor Tech Alumni last night defeated Trenton R.C.A.F. 72-35 in the first game of a two game total point intermediate "B" semi-final basketball series.

Second game will be played Saturday at Trenton, the winner to play either Timmins or Sault Ste. Marie for the provincial title.

WIN B. C. TITLE

Vancouver, April 7 — (CP) — Vancouver Meralomas Saturday night eliminated their last British Columbia obstacle in the fight for the senior Canadian men's basketball championship whipping the Kamloops Kilowatts 51-30 in the second game of a two-game totail point series here.

The Meralomas edged out a narrow 60-50 verdict in the first game, to take the series 111-80.

HOLD SENIOR TITLE

Vancouver, April 7 — (CP) — Vancouver Nut House won the senior Canadian women's basketball championship here Saturday night when they defeated Winnipeg Pegs 35-26, winning the series in three straight games. The Nut House club had won the first two games 31-15 and 41-20.

Although it was the first year that the Nut House team had won the title, it was the sixth straight year that the same group of girls had won the crown, the previous five years under the name of Hedlunds. However the mark falls far short of the string marked up by the famed Edmonton Grads.

NO INQUEST NECESSARY

Chatham, April 5 — (CP) — Mike Bota, 83-year-old farmer of nearby Raleigh township, was found dead in a roadside ditch Thursday pinned down by the rear wheel of a tractor. Coroner F. W. Hall said he died of a crushed chest and that no inquest would be necessary.

Women Judges In Soviet Union Very Capable

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, April 5 — (CP)—The courtroom looked like a small hall where a Canadian town council might meet. Behind a red baize-covered table on a low platform sat a buxom young woman in a white sweater.

She fired questions at witnesses, snapped at the accused when they tried to speak out of turn, kept a battery of eager young defence lawyers in line and was a match for them all.

The buxom young woman was the judge in this people's court, one of about 25 in Moscow which hear criminal cases ranging from petty theft to murder as well as divorce cases.

There are quite a few women judges in Moscow. During the war they replaced men in most courts and only now are male judges returning to the bench.

The courthouse itself gave no suggestion of legal majesty. I walked up a muddy alley to get into the building and a gaunt old man took me through a crowd of women, some with babies in their arms, to the back of the courtroom to hear the case of six men charged with robbing a Red Army warehouse of 48,000 rubles — (about $10,000) worth of army clothing.

The six accused sat in first-row benches, their heads shaved in accordance with custom, which decrees shaving for hygienic reasons.

Beside the judge sat two other women, called "peoples' representatives," who can overrule the judge if they agree to do so.

Five of the accused were workmen but the sixth was fairly well dressed in a good coat with an astrakan collar. An interpreter told me the five were charged with stealing goods from the warehouse over a two-month period and with selling the clothing in the black market.

Stealing was suspected and a state inspector, the sixth man charged, was sent to investigate. He was alleged to have entered the racket himself and finally another inspector uncovered the whole scandal.

Allan Cup Survivors

(By The Canadian Press)

Only seven teams were left today in the scramble towards the Allan Cup and the Canadian senior hockey championship, five in the east and two in the west. The survivors:

East—
Moncton Hawks, Montreal Royals, Ottawa Senators, Sherbrooke St. Francis, Hamilton Tigers.

West—
Winnipeg Flyers, Calgary Stampeders.

The rookie defence combination is shown here giving netminder Turk Broda airtight protection, ready to use their bodies to block shots and take out enemy players. The eagle-eyed Broda can be seen crouching low, watching for the puck, behind Barilko.

Briefs From Britain

Edinburgh, (CP) — Princess Elizabeth will accept the freedom of the City of Edinburgh on her return from the royal tour of South Africa.

Lossiemouth, Scotland. (CP) —Six crew members were saved when the Lossiemouth fishing boat Resplendent sank in 30 seconds after a collision.

London (CP)—Many Londoners said a sunspot was clearly visible to them March 13. A Royal Observatory spokesman explained: "Unusually the sun is too blinding to see sunspots but today the mist made it visible to the naked eye."

Newcastle, England, (CP) — Miss Margaret Nicholson, 74-year-old shopkeeper, was threatened with a poker, gagged and robbed of £26 by a masked robber.

Glasgow, Scotland. (CP) — Thirty new factories will begin operation in Scotland soon, C. A. Oakley, chairman of the Scottish Regional Distribution of Industry Panel, announced here.

Sutton, Surrey, England, (CP) —Jack Hylton, London impresario and former orchestra leader, was fined £10 ($40) for speeding.

Maritime Premiers Cool to Proposal Of One Province

Halifax, April 5 —(CP)—The suggestion of a Canadian Parliamentarian that Newfoundland join with the Maritimes in one big province was received without warmth today by premiers of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick.

But a spokesman for the Moncton Board of Trade jumped right in with an unofficial bid for the New Brunswick Railroad centre as a possible capital.

The original suggestion was made in Ottawa by a parliamentarian in close touch with affairs of Newfoundland which is sending a delegation to the Dominion capital to discuss terms of possible Federal union.

This authority expressed the view that the island colony would not be anxious to be a 10th province. His suggestion, however, was that Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia join with Newfoundland and Labrador in one big province that would compare with Ontario and Quebec in importance.

Both Premier Jones of P.E.I. and Premier McNair of New Brunswick indicated they thought the suggestion was an old story.

"Maritime union has been suggested at various times," said the New Brunswick premier. I don't think there is any marked degree of opinion in this province favoring it."

Premier Jones, whose province ships $2,000,000 worth of farm produce to Newfoundland annually, recalled that the matter had been brought up in 1864 when the Fathers of Confederation laid the Dominion's foundations at Charlottetown.

Mr. Jones added, however, that the subject was not likely to become a live issue.

None of the premiers offered any comment on a possible capital but in Moncton Maj. J. H. Farthing, secretary of the board of trade, suggested his city as the logical choice and in fact, the easiest place to get to in these three province's because it is the air and rail transportation centre.

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 9

"Mrs. Sturtevant? Mrs. Carol Sturtevant?" he asked after her rather breathless, "Hello?"

"Yes."

"Clive Holdridge."

"How are you?"

"I'm very fine," he answered calmly, casually," and I take it you are. And now that we have finished with formality, I'm in the station here and whether I take the next train out depends entirely upon you. Will you come in? Or are there too many domestic knots to untie?"

"I haven't any domestic knots."

"Good. How long will it take you?"

"A half hour at least." She was wearing a gray slack suit...

After a thoughtful silence he said with a chuckle. "I may even wait an hour—for you."

At the sound of that superior voice her mind had raced to join him, to be caught up, pulled up, to his high plane of realism and reason mixed with excitement. It was as though he had been only sleeping in her mind. She thought "He makes every man I've ever known dull by companison. Even Bill... yes, even Bill. "My mind and my nature used to be in order. Is the conflict the period of transition from wife to divorcee?"

She had to hurry. A quick shower, her hair brushed to shining fairness, a hasty decision to wear the navy frock with the short pleated bolero and the navy silk turban. Her furs, her gloves, her bag, her car keys. Her heart raced as she told Bessie that she could leave and came downstairs and crossed the street to her car.

But was it for Clive that her heart was beating fast? Was not the hasty dressing and the dash to the station remniscent of the days when Bill had telephoned that he had come home and wanted her to meet him? She had always felt so festive and wanted to look her best. Queer, that at this moment she should think of the dress in which she had been married that hot August day seven years ago. An old dress that had been lengthened and shortened several times...

She thought, "And at the end of seven years I am alone with the distinct, bitter taste that I am a kept woman."

Tonight she would not see Bill waiting in the station, pacing, smoking, lovingly familiar. But Clive...A man who had said after kissing her. "You have lived with love. Do you think now that you can live without it?"

It was dark when she reached the station and parked the car. Red-caps lined the sidewalk and one sprang to attention to assist her. Shaking her head negatively, she got out and went inside.

Although there were possibly fifty people in the station, sitting, standing, moving about, buying tickets, she saw Clive instantly. As she walked toward him she thought that he would be conspicuous in a crowd four times that size. Tall, broad-shouldered, wearing gray clothes, his magnificent head bare, his eyes watched her as she approached him. Yet it was with a distinct shock that she saw that he was quite serious-looking when she reached him. No swift, challenging remark greeted her, but a sober one.

Taking her white-gloved hand he looked at her with surprising tenderness. "You look very lovely, Carol."

Relieved, she smiled. "You always put me in a position where I can say only. 'thank you'."

"Do you object? I might easily be the opposite, you know." While he continued to hold her hand, his eyes searched her face. "You're a very gentle person, aren't you?"

"And you—quite unpredict'able."

He chuckled. Then, "Shall we sit here and talk a few minutes? The next train to New York is in half an hour. I told you it depended on your whether or not I take it."

"If you mean you think you'll find our town dull for a weekend ...As for historical spots."

"I'm a bug for historical spots. I'd drive a hundred miles to see a monument."

But his eyes, amused, puzzled her as they walked across the station to an unoccupied corner and sat down.

Then his smile seemed to envelope her.

He said, "My darling, you don't understand. How sweet of you not to understand. I am asking you to be my mistress."

If Carol appeared outraged, Clive probably would laugh at her. Barbed words came to her tongue, but did not utter them—lest she hurt him. Hurt him? Why should she care if she hurt this man? Because her own sensibilities had been so trampled upon that she had a horror of hurting anyone?

She was conscious of her quick breathing as she glanced around the ugly station where people moved to the authority of the clock. For him to ask her here in a public place, old and shabby and gaunt, for him to be so frank and yet so gentle, was admirable rather then the opposite. Certainly he had staged no nice setting.

She looked at him.

"Clive, what you are suggesting to me is as alien to my nature as divorce." Though she smiled a little, her brows came together. "You...It's like reaching up and plucking a plum from a tree, isn't it?"

He nodded. "The nicest plum. Yes as natural as that. People think I'm harsh and eccentric because I am honest and natural and because I don't tie up my suggestions with promises. When I first saw you, I thought you were attractive not only to look at but because you weren't acting the way the others were. Then I discovered that you were both intelligent and adorable—and I wanted you."

"You don't even pretend to be in love with me."

"I am in love with you, but I don't know if I love you. I'm not asking you to be unfaithful to anyone because you have no one to be unfaithful to—unfortunately for you and fortunately for me. The longer I stayed away, the more desirable you became to me. Do you think I'm crude because I haven't made a pretty speech or touched you or filled you with several potent cocktails? All day I've been thinking of the two of us together somewhere...It's the pleasantest thing I can imagine."

She lowered her eyes. A year ago she'd have walked away, shaking with a cold fury. Now she sat quietly, curious and fascinated by his calm and casual reasoning. To a passer-by they doubtless looked as though they were having a most banal conversation.

Clive straightened, crossed and uncrossed his long legs. He smiled at her kindly. "It's bound to be someone. I won't hurt you, Carl. I'll never hurt you."

"That isn't true. You would hurt me if I loved you—which isn't likely. You'd hurt me as you hurt the girl in New York each time you go away. —One man is enough for a woman, but one woman isn't enough for a man. You wouldn't marry me, would you?"

"I don't want to marry anybody."

She saw him glance at the clock. He smiled again, "Do I take the next train or..."

"Does it matter very much to you?"

"I had a case. I presented it. If you turn me down, you'll be the greater loser."

"You conceit..."

"I understand women. I'm sorry for them. I know the things in which men fail them. I know the futility of the romantic ideal. I know the cursedness of possessive women. Women can't live for a moment, however lovely and complete. They are always thinking of next week or next year. Nothing is ever repeated with the same joy and fulfillment, Carol. That's one thing women can't get through their heads."

She nodded. Then she said, "But you are taking the next train, Clive. I don't know why I'm not angry. But I'm not. Perhaps it's because I'm not surprised at anything. Perhaps, too, because of the way you have said it." She shook her head. "I can't, Clive,(because I'm not good at lying and scheming and saying I am someone I'm not. I'd make a mistake. Beside, I'm still in love with Bill. I'm not possessive about him, but I still feel that I am one of his possessions. Perhaps like something you put up in the attic but which still belongs to you. And all of Bill's possessions heretofore have been as clean and as fortright as he is. That's the way I've got to be.'

"No one can afford to turn down a real devotion and admiration, Carol."

"You are perfectly right. There isn't enough to go around."

"The train," he said and smiled as he arose.

At the gate he said, "It just occurred to me that we haven't had dinner. I'm sorry. You probably are starving."

"I'm not, really. I'd forgotten to."

"May I kiss you?"

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the headlines on his way to the sporting page, and ma said, I'm going to make a telefone call, William, but I'm going to call Bernice Casper. I'm not going to call Sally Jardin, she said.

I hate to be obvious, but only one logical question occurs to me, pop said. Why aren't you going to call Sally Jardin? he said, and ma said, Because I dont care enough about winning the bridge tournament to invite her to be my partner. She may be an expert bridge player, and in fact she is, and she may even give bridge lessens in frunt of a class on a blackboard, and in fact she does, but after all, bridge is only a game. Isn't that so? William? she said.

Theoretically, I believe, pop said, and ma said, So why should I spend an uncomfortable evening just for a little passing glory and a more or less permanent prize? Sally Jardin plays bridge like a perfect dictater, and I have no intention of being the squerming victim of her steely eyes and icy tongue. I'm going to invite Bernice Casper to be my pardner. She may not know much about bridge, but she always tells me how well I'm playing with the most unforced admiration, so at least I'll be sure of an injoyable social evening, whether I win or not. Of course I may mak a lifetime enemy of Sally Jardin for a week or so till it blows over, but I dont care, I believe in rewarding good nature, ma said.

And she went and telefoned and came back, saying to pop, Well of all things, Bernice Casper is playing in the tournament with Sally Jardin. I have a good mind not to speak to either one of them indefinitely, she said.

The result being pop claimed it's a womans werld.

Winding Clock Means Much Work, Little Pay

Middleton, Conn., April 3 — (AP) — The death early this week of George J. Fisher, 71, a former jeweler, who for 45 years manually wound the big clock atop this city's municipal building, has given the Municipal Board of Control a problem that it isn't finding easy to solve.

Temporarily Russell Fladd, a grocer and nephew of Fisher, has taken on the job he first assumed when his uncle was injured last February.

The job pays $10 a month and is far from being a snap although the clock has only to be wound once every eight days. The chap who takes it on must climb winding stairs on his way to the cupola, thence ascend by way of a ladder and, when he gets to the scene of operations, he'll find it involves half an hour of winding on a big crank.

And all for $10 a month.

Released on Bail

Toronto, April 5 — (CP)—Alvin Graham, 38, of nearby Scarboro Junction, was released yesterday on bail of $1,000 after being charged with careless and dangerous driving following the traffic death of Frank Down, 18, killed by a motorcar Thursday night.

$40,000 FINE PAID

Ottawa, April 7 (CP)—A fine of $40,000, largest ever handed down in Magistrate's Court, here, was paid Saturday on behalf of Joseph H. Vineberg, 65, and his son Nordau S. Vineberg, 34, Ottawa merchants who pleaded guilty on charges of income tax evasion.

The men had been given until noon to pay the fine. The alternative was an additional 18 months i.. jail to six-month-terms already given. The elder Vineberg, because of his age, was granted suspended sentence.

otal sum involved was $235,000.

DOG PLAYED WITH WOLF

Lindsay, April 7 (CP)— Thos. Parrington of Long Point glanced out of his barn recently and saw his dog playing with a wolf. The game continued until the wolf was attacked by a less tolerant dog. The wolf was driven into a stable where Parrington shot it.

GOOD SEASON POSSIBLE

Sherbrooke, Que., April 7 — (CP) — Maple sugar producers in the Sherbrooke district reported yesterday a comparatively good season would be possible if weather conditions were favorable for the next two weeks.

Canada Has Turbine Potential Of 52,000,000 Horsepower; Hydro at New High in '46

Ottawa, April 7 (CP)—Canada has a potential turbine installation of more than 52,000,000 horsepower and though only 20 percent of this has been developed, production of hydro electricity reached new high levels in 1946 with transition to peacetime uses, the Dominion Water and Power Bureau reported today.

The bureau's surveys and engineering branch said the Dominion's water power resources totalled 25,722,900 horsepower under conditions of ordinary minimum flow and 40,124,300 horsepower at ordinary six months flow—the latter figure representing maximum dependable power and corresponding to a potential turbine installation of more than 52,000,000 horse power.

In the face of this high figure the total turbine installation on the Dominion as at January 1 this year was 10,312,123 horsepower, or a development of about 20 per cent of the available resources.

During 1946 new installations totalled only 27,760 horsepower, but a number of important projects were under active construction, mainly in Ontario and Quebec.

The wide and favorable distribution of Canada's waterpower resources and the versatility of low-cost hydro-electric power—the present 10,312,123 horsepower would be equivalent to the annual use of 41,000,000 tons of coal—have been vital factors in rapid industrialization of the country, the bureau said.

Quebec Ranks Highest

Quebec ranks highest in available water-power resources, having 13,064,000 or 32 per cent of the total for the Dominion. It has at present turbine installations of 5,848,572 horsepower representing 57 per cent of the installed turbine capacity in Canada and 45 per cent of the province's resources.

Ontario has available power resources only exceeded by those of Quebec and British Columbia and developed power only exceeded by that of Quebec, the bureau said. She has available resources of 7,261,400 horsepower against British Columbia's second-ranking 10,998,000 but a turbine installation total of 72,790740 horsepower against British Columbia's third-ranking 864,024 horsepower.

Of the Prairie Provinces, Manitoba has the greatest power resources and the greatest development, a potential of 5,344,500 horsepower and a turbine installation total of 446,825.

Late Greek King Buried at Tatoi

By FRANK O'BRIEN

Athens, April 7 (AP)—Greece, her deceased King in his grave and his brother on the throne, moved with the help of outside advice today to step up her warfare on anti-government guerrillas.

Following a 50-minute funeral service yesterday in Athens, Greek Orthodox Cathedral, King George II was buried near his summer-palace birthplace at Tatoi northeast of here. The climax of the service came when the new King, 45-year-old Paul I, stepped up to the casket, knelt, crossed himself and then stood and kissed the ikon (holy picture) on top of his brother's bier.

Heads of British missions in Greece were reported to have taken part in a Saturday night Greek government conference on public order and anti-guerrilla operations.

The government yesterday issued a public denial of responsibility for publication in three Greek newspapers of a Moscow interview with Prime Minister Stalin which has been labelled false.

The story had quoted Stalin as voicing surprise at President Truman's proposal for financial aid to Greece and Turkey.

The Soviet Union had announced a protest of the publication and both the Soviet government and the United Press, to which the Greek papers credited the interview, had termed the story a fake.

Foreign diplomats and correspondents, visiting royalty, the Greek Royal family and its retainers were among the few groups admitted to George's funeral.

The 112 sailors in eight lines pulled the flag-decked mahogany casket on a five-and-a-half-ton gun carriage through Athens streets while soldiers, police and boy scouts stood guard and crowds watched in bright sunshine. A 101-gun salute was fired, with shots a minute apart. King Paul and the Crown Prince marched in the procession.

Triplets Born To N.S. Mother

Liverpool, N.S., April 7 (CP)—Triplets born here last week, two of them 43 hours apart, were reported doing fine tonight after what attendants described as a delivery rare in medical history.

The first child, a daughter weighing five pounds, was born to Mrs. Allan Freeman at 8:45 p.m. Wednesday night in a Liverpool nursing home. The second child, another daughter weighing six pounds was born at 5:30 a.m. Saturday and 15 minutes later a third girl arrived weighing 5 1-2 pounds.

The attending surgeon reported that the mother was also doing well.

MUST STRENGTHEN DEMOCRACY IN KOREA

Seoul, April 7 (AP)— Lt.-Gen. John R. Hodge, returning from conferences in Washington, said that American efforts to strengthen democracy and economic development in South Korea would be intensified.

"If we can't get Russian co-operation, we must carry out our commitments alone," the commander of American occupation forces told a press conference.

DrowningsAccount For Nine of 16 Weekend Deaths

(By The Canadian Press)

Drowning accounted for nine of the 16 fatalities in Eastern Canada during the Easter weekend.

In a disaster at New Glasgow, N.S., four young people, out for a sail on Good Friday, were drowned when their vessel overturned. The victims were Elizabeth MacGregor, 14, her brother Stewart, 20, seven-year-old Harold Davis and Robert Welsh, 13. They were sailing before a stiff breeze on Merigomish Harbor when the small boat keeled over.

At Montreal, Claude Pelletier, 15, was playing on the ice near Laurier Pier when he disappeared beneath the surface.

Ontario's floods claimed four victims during the week-end. Near Oshawa, Mrs. Jeanette Mack, 65, was walking with Mrs. Margaret Rulett, 64. They attempted to cross a makeshift bridge and disappeared into the swirling waters of Oshawa creek. Their bodies were not recovered.

William Oldridge, 78, went to the basement of his flooded home on Sunday to survey damage caused by rising waters of the Thames River. He suffered a seizure and fell into the foot of water that had seeped in. The coroner stated his death was due to drowning.

Floods Carry Man Away.

At Wallaceburg, near Lake Erie, rampaging flood waters carried Willis Bowers, 50, to his death. He was attempting to salvage a piece of floating lumber from a punt when the small boat capsized and plunged him into the river. He was not seen again.

Faye Mary Taylor, died at Canning, N.S., from burns received when her clothing caught fire from burning grass. The three-year-old was "helping" extinguish the fire. At Toronto, Ellen Bain, 82, succumbed Friday to burns suffered on Feb. 10, when her clothing was ignited from a gas stove.

Automobile accidents claimed the lives of four Canadians. At Sussex, N.B., Thomas A. Carhart, 18, Leslie McNight and Aubrey Buchanan were fatally injured when a car in which they were riding was hit by a passenger train at a level crossing Saturday night. At Montreal Jacques Cardieux, 18, fell from the rear bumper of a moving taxi.

The first fatal mine accident involving a man from the Maritimes to occur in Northern Ontario since a group of Eastern miners were moved there recently was responsible for the death of Edward Betts, 23, of Amherst, N.S.

Council Budgets For 62-Mill Tax Rate this Year

Trenton — At a recent meeting Trenton Town Council adopted a tax rate of 62 mills for 1947. The increase of 15 mills over last year was for the most part necessary to take care of the deficit of close on $47,000, which was a legacy from the 1946 civic administration, representing alleged overpayments on paving contract as found by the auditor in a special report to the Council.

It was decided to establish a municipal garbage collection system, purchasing trucks to be paid for over a period of five years through a debenture issue.

A petition was received protesting the erection of a garage at the corner of Sidney and Richard Streets, outside of the restricted area.

Council passed an amended traffic by-law which has received the sanction of the Department of Highways, its provisions dealing with modern traffic problems.

Received petition from ratepayers in the Dufferin Street-Carrying Place Road area asking for sanitary sewer service.

A double house and several vacant properties owned by the town were disposed of.

The only grant made by the Council when the budget was brought down, was $1,100 to the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Past Chief Ranger Honored

Court Trent Valley No. 1624 Canadian Order of Foresters, held their regular monthly meeting with Brother J. Salmers, C. R., presiding.

The guest of the evening was Bro. O. M. Newton, P.C.R., of Court Trenton, who was received with all the honors of his high station.

In his talk on "We must Justify our Existence" Bro. Newton gave a most interesting and instructive message of the duties of fraternalists in general, and Canadian Foresters in particular which will assist the officers and members in the newly formed Court at Frankford.

Having been an active fraternalist for a considerable number of years, Bro. Newton emphasized the benefits to be obtained by using fraternal principles as a guide in meeting and surmounting the problems of every day living, and in every day business contacts, the fraternal law, "as you sow you reap" becomes an actual reality. Bro. Newton concluded his remarks by giving several examples of how to make a practical use of fraternal ideals and pointed out that every fraternalist carried a special responsibility in a changing and restless world, whose many problems could be solved by the Brotherhood of man.

Bro. Newton plans to represent the Order at the High Court Convention to be held in Edmonton in June.

Bro. J.C. Braun district organizer from Oshawa, was also present and outlined the necessity of an active program of youth work, sports and social activity so that the Order would become a greater power for good in the community. The Order's principles were broad and tolerant and from its membership would emerge many young leaders, who would take their rightful place as leaders in the economic life of the great Nation.

Accepts Call

Rev. George Putenham, of Inverary, has accepted a call to the pulpit of Grace United Church, Trenton and Johnstown. He succeeds the late Rev. John Gladstone McKee, B.A., B.D.

The call was extended to the Rev. Mr. Putenham at a meeting of the congregation. Mr. Putenham, it is understood, has several charges in addition to Inverary, and is carrying on a very fine work.

700 Tons Earth Bury Seven Cows in Stable

Ottawa, April 7 —(CP)— Seven cows were killed and the stable housing them flattened yesterday when an estimated 700 tons of earth broke loose from the side of a hill and slid 200 feet into the yard of the Ottawa Brick and Terra Cotta Company on the southern outskirts of the city.

Donat Lavigne, employee of the brick company and owner of the cows, said he awoke to find the stable buried under a pile of earth that filled a gully 30 feet deep for 200 square feet. Heavy rain is believed to have loosened the earth and caused the slide.

He and his son heard some animals bawling in the wreckage and after an hour's digging managed to free two heifers. The other cattle all suffered broken necks.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa:

Future of Gouzenko Cause of Much Speculation in Ottawa Circles

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, April 7 (CP)— There is much speculation in Ottawa these days about the future of Igor Gouzenko, the former Russian cipher clerk who touched off Canada's startling espionage probe with Soviet documents he took when he fled the Embassy more than a year ago.

There seems to be general agreement that his service to Canada should be rewarded and that steps should be taken to "protect" him from the Communist vengeance he has said he fears.

Recently it was disclosed that T. Frank Ahearn, President of the Ottawa Street Railway, had purchased a $100-a-month annuity for Gouzenko and his wife. In disclosing himself as the donor, Mr. Ahearn made it quite clear he expected the government to do something along the same line.

Expectations are that Gouzenko and his young wife, to whom a child was born while the couple were "in hiding" following the cipher clerk's disclosures, will be "taken care of" financially by the government. It is also expected that a "safe" haven will be found for them.

Recent whispers have been heard that he may be sent to another Dominion of the Commonwealth to settle. Wherever he goes, it will be kept as secret as possible to allow him to quietly settle and live a normal life. But it is believed the government will want to settle him somewhere in Canada.

Millions: Even though the veterans committee is not sitting this session, there appears to be enough fodder available to give the Commons a few busy moments on veterans matters in the parliamentary months ahead.

A committee considering disposal of at least $5,500,000 in army canteen funds has made the discovery that there is nearly $10,000,000 available for the benefit of distressed veterans of the second Word War. Separate navy and air force benevolent funds, set up as independent incorporate companies, hold roughly $1,000,000 and $3,000,000 respectively, chiefly grown out of wartime canteen funds.

The committee's job so far is merely to decide what to do with the army funds but some of its members have indicated an interest in merging all three so that there will be uniform benefits available for ex-servicemen who find themselves in tough circumstances temporarily. Such a proposal would undoubtedly arouse suspicion.

Another issue may arise from the report of a committee which surveyed veterans' housing across Canada. Although their finding was that, all things considered, the houses were full value for the money on today's market, Progressive Conservative members say they have found plenty in the details of the report to give them a springboard for attack.

Picton

Picton : (Special) — Business places in Picton suspended business from ten o'clock until eleven on Tuesday morning during the funeral service of James Healy, which was held in St. Gregory's Church. In his 91st year, Mr. Healy was one of the most widely known and highly esteemed business men of Picton.

The Evening Branch of the W. A. of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, met at the home of Mrs. Wm. Rankin, Centre St., on Tuesday evening. Reports were received by the President, Mrs. C. G. Rutter. The evening was spent in sewing for a bazaar to be held later. The rector, Rev. Hope Swayne addressed the members on the power of prayer, and urged all members to pray, especially for our missionaries in our foreign fields, and in the lonely outposts of Canada. Refreshments were served by the hostess and her committe.

No Action Pending To Revalue Canadian Dollar

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 7 (CP)—Take the word of the financial wizards in the know—there's no action pending to revalue the Canadian dollar, now placed at a par with United States funds.

During the last week rumors were current of government action to deal with the rapid depletion in Canada's reserve of United States dollars; the weakness in the Canadian dollar in the open market in New York where it sells at a discount of more than seven per cent and the United Kingdom's inroads into the $1,250,000,000 loan from Canada.

As a result of these reports, prices on the Toronto and Montreal exchanges stiffened last Wednesday and held firm on Thursday, the last pre-holiday trading day. These trends re-instituted the months-long rumor that the government planned to revalue the Canadian Dollar, which the Foreign Exchange Control Board now holds at a parity with the United States dollar. The experts maintain that a revaluation isn't on the books—at least not immediately.

The chief reasons for the rumor were:

1. Sagging prices for the Canadian dollar in the open market in New York;
2. Recent restrictions in futures buying of American dollars by Canadians, through the F.E.C.B.;
3. If the goverment planned to revalue the dollar the Easter season would be a good time to announce it when the Toronto and Montreal exchanges were closed.

Transacted on Parity Basis

A high government source said the government had no immediate intention of revaluing the dollar. Another government source said the bulk of the exchange business between United States and Canada was transacted on a parity basis through the F.E.C.B.

Most of the buying and selling relatively small, in New York was between American holders of Canadian dollars and he said that the use of these dollars was limited and could not be used to pay for imports from Canada.

One of the uses for the Canadian dollars, bought in the New York market, was as expenses for American tourists coming to Canada and this official expected once the tourist traffic got under way the price of Canadian dollars in New York accordingly would stiffen.

There is no doubt, however, the heavy unfavorable trade balance in Canada's trade with United States, coupled with its relatively-low gold production, has government economists wondering if anything can be done.

The value of Canadian gold exported in 1941 was $185,000,000 in American funds and in 1946 it was $95,800,000. The chief reason for the difference is that in 1941, before the Hyde Park agreements which stabilized the exchange situation, bold mining companies were encouraged to maintain full production and had no important labor shortages. During the last few years production has been lower, largely because of labor shortages.

Decide Austria Must Restore Properties Seized

Moscow, April 7 —(AP)— The Four Powers agreed in the committee working on the Austrian peace treaty today that Austria must restore to Jewish and other owners property taken from them in the German control period for racial and religious reasons.

It also was agreed that, in cases where restoration was impossible, compensation would be paid.

These agreements, restricted by the usual string of reservations and minor amendments, came as word spread among western diplocats that Foreign Minister Molotov was preparing a new blast at the American-British reparations policies in Germany when the inter-Allied reparations agency report comes up in the council of foreign ministers.

De Gaulle Says France, U.S. Will Stand Together

Strasbourg, France, April 7 — (AP) — Gen. Charles De Gaulle called on the French people today to organize themselves into what would amount to a political party supporting him and his ideas. He said this would prevent a dictatorship, anarchy or overthrow of "the independence of the state."

It was the former provisional president's frankest bid for return to political power and came a day after he had declared that, should a new tyranny menace the world, "The United States and France will stand together in opposing it."

De Gaulle told a crowd of 60,000 massed in front of the city hall that he believed the new constitution should be revised to provide for a strong executive.

His speech yesterday was at a ceremony honoring American war dead.

Allusion to Communism

Some observers interpreted De Gaulle's address as an allusion to Communism and an indication that he would work to tie France closely to the western powers in the event he returns to active politics.

The former French leader's speech was said to be merely a prelude to a political statement he is scheduled to make today. Friends of the general said today's address would be an attack on the present French regime and constitution.

Referring to the United States, De Gaulle said "it is a fact that this young nation, like our own elderly country, has shown not only love for its own liberty but, still more, a respect for that of others."

"It is a fact," he continued, "that each time in the world that justice finds herself assaulted, a loud alarm at once awakens the French and the American consciences. Our two democracies have always found the same and powerful inspiration when they have had to defend threatened liberties."

NEW SUPER BOMBERS

Washington, April 7 — (AP) — Gen. George C. Kenney, chief of the United States Strategic Air Command, disclosed yesterday that his bomber fleet will shortly receive deliveries of two new-type super-bombers. They are:

The Boeing B-50, technically a modification of the wartime B-29 Superfortress, but with so many new or improved features that it is virtually a new design in range, speed and general performance; and, the B-36, officially described as capable of ranging out 5,000 miles from base and, presumably at somewhat shorter range, of carrying 30 tons of bombs.

Moscow Conference Could End Soon

Showdown Taking Shape Between Molotov, Ministers

Russians Requested to Cease Obstructionist Tactics

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Moscow, April 8 — (AP)—American sources said today that unless the Russians ceased what the Americans called obstructionist tactics in the Foreign Ministers' Council the whole conference could end soon.

These informants said a showdown was taking shape within the four-power council between Foreign Minister Molotov and the ministers of the western powers.

The basic issue is whether the four powers must continue long the discussions on current German problems which have proved fruitless, or whether they can go on to frontiers and other matters, with the possibility of eventual agreement on the Austrian treaty.

An American official said the German subject had been talked out and that all views were known. He said nothing new could be said, and that if the Russians were unwilling to go on with other matters, the conference might as well end.

The Russian proposal to permit Germany to choose by plebiscite the form of her future government was regarded by western diplomats as an effort to offset the effect upon the German people of the insistent Soviet demands for $10,000,000,000 in reparations.

Creates Problem

These demands, thus far blocked by State Secretary Marshall, Foreign Secretary Bevin and Foreign Minister Bidault, have created a problem for Russia in German politics. This was regarded by some delegates as the underlying cause for the plebiscite proposal, rejected by the western powers last night.

The deputy foreign ministers considering the Austrian settlement wound up their work on the treaty today and agreed to British and American suggestions for final adjournment unless the foreign ministers themselves could make progress and call them back into session with new instructions.

The deputies finished a final report to the ministers. There are about 17 important issues in the treaty which only the foreign ministers themselves can solve.

Pumping Propaganda

American and British sources declared frankly that Foreign Minister Molotov was using the council meetings to pump Soviet propaganda into Germany, and that his speeches on the future German government were prompted more by a desire to place Russian views before the German people than in hope of getting an agreement.

The propaganda problem of the western powers was seen as virtually the opposite of Russia's. Western opposition to heavy reparations is found to be popular with the Germans, whereas their insistence on a federalized, or decentralized, German government would require considerable explanation in view of the fact that Russia maintains this would amount to dismemberment.

Molotov has urged a tightly unified, highly centralized government for Germany.

WORKSHOPS DESTROYED

Penetanguishene, April 8 —(CP)—The two-storey maintenance workshops of the Ontario Hospital for the mentally ill here was totally destroyed by fire yesterday, and most of its equipment was believed lost. While firemen battled the blaze, more than 580 patients remained in their wards.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 8 — (CP)—Synopsis: The weather has been clear and cool throughout Ontario during the night. Temperatures fell below zero at many places in Northern Ontario and were generally below freezing throughout Southern Ontario. Clouds are thickening over Southwestern Ontario with the approach of a rain area from the west. This morning there is light rain from Lake Michigan westward to the Rockies.

Ford Had Great Confidence In His Abilities

By DAVID J. WILKIE

Detroit, April 8. (AP)— Henry Ford, tall and gaunt almost to the point of emaciation, was a man of deep-seated convictions, with many friends, some enemies and not a few critics. Despite the fact he was at times almost inaccessible, he was easy to talk with and fascinating, although not infrequently somewhat difficult to follow in his philosophy.

When he died in his 84th year last night he undoubtedly was at peace with himself and the rest of the world, for he rarely worried about anything.

He often asserted that "creeds were man-made". Yet he built half a dozen or more churches, and he said that he "tried to live as mother would have wanted me to."

Insofar as he followed any particular faith Mr. Ford was an Episcopalian; he derived great pleasure from patronizing the children's choirs at the non-sectarion churches he established.

Only Worried Once

I once asked him whether he ever worried about anything.

"Only once," he said, "that was when Mrs. Ford was ill."

He was in deadly earnest when he said that under certain circumstances he could build 1,000 planes a day; similar he firmly believed, when he said it, that in its early stages the Second World War was "a phoney war," and that I never would enter it.

Whether he could have built 1,000 planes a day still is a moot question. Certainly he surrounded the claim with a lot of reservations.

"All I have to do," he said, however, "is to get the first one right; then if I couldn't do it on one production line I'd set up another or a third line. You know folks once said we couldn't put automobiles into volume production, but I managed to step production up to 10,000 a day."

Once Ford reiterated his believe in reincarnation and I asked whether he wanted to return to earth in any particular physical form.

"Oh, it doesn't matter," he said, "as long as I can have the same wife."

BROADCAST COUNCIL MEETING

London, April 8 (CP)—For the first time in the city's history proceedings of the city council, expected to discuss flood control, tonight will be broadcast. The London Free Press radio station CFPL will carry the program from 7 to 10 p.m.

MRS. DICK FACES COMPLICITY COUNT IN BREAK ATTEMPT

Is Accorded Protection Of Court--3 Women Are Found Guilty And Sentenced

Hamilton, April 8. (CP)—Mrs. Evelyn Dick, under sentence of life imprisonment for the manslaughter of her illegitimate son, today was accused of complicity in an attempt of three women to break out of Barton Street jail last week.

"It wasn't just the three of us—Evelyn Dick was in on it too," said blonde, 19-year-old Florence Arnott, one of the three accused of attempting to break jail and committing an assault on the jail matron. Miss Arnott testified in her own defence in court.

"I thought I heard Evelyn Dick's boy friend mentioned for help in a break—he would be waiting outside," said one witness, Olive Stewart, who testified in the court appearance of Miss Arnott, Evelyn Hamilton and Helen Rea.

Miss Arnott said: "Our plans were made but nothing came of it. It was supposed to be Evelyn Dick's job to get the keys. We didn't exactly plan to escape. We didn't like Mrs. Andrews, her sarcasm, the way she treated us."

Mrs. Sadie Andrews, the matron, suffered bruises when knocked to the floor during the alleged attempted escape.

All three accused were found guilty and sentenced to 12 months indefinite sentences to run consecutive to terms they now are serving.

All Happened So Fast

Mrs. Dick, who refused to testify against her boy friend, William Bohozuk, and her father, Donald MacLean, when the two men stood trial on a charge of murdering her husband, was given the protection of the court. Her lawyer asked for this in case she should implicate herself."

She said, "It all happened so fast I didn't know just what happened."

Miss Arnott testified: "It wasn't the three of us. It was Evelyn Dick. She said, 'If you want to do it we can all do it.' At that time Helen Rae didn't want to because she had only five days and she'd be out. Evelyn Hamilton said she'd go along as a good sport." The witness added that Evelyn Dick described to them all the other escape plans which had not been carried out."

The attempted break was tried April 2 when the matron had given out cigarets about 7 p.m.

WOULD NOT DELAY WEDDING

Welland, April 8 —(CP)—The bride believed a postponed wedding would bring bad luck so yesterday in Welland County General Hospital Gerald Norman Bates, 20, and Jean Yvonne Dunham, 17, were married. Bates, the victim of an accident that broke both his heels, sat up for the ceremony performed by Rev. R. T. Rutherdale.

President Truman's Visit to Canada Will Be in Contrast With Last Trip

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, April 8. (CP)—President Truman is planning for a visit to Ottawa which will be in sharp contrast to his last trip to Canada.

He will be the second United States President to visit Canada's capital while in office and no doubt will receive a welcome comparable to that given the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt when he spent a day in Ottawa in the late summer of 1943.

Truman has had little experience with Canadian hospitality but he has been there and enjoyed it, too. He was with an army of American Legionnaires who swarmed over into Windsor, Ont., for a celebration when that body held its annual convention in Detroit in September, 1931.

Then he was Ex-Captain Harry Truman, a combat veteran of the First World War, ex-haberdasher and, at the time, a Missouri County Court Judge.

Three years later he was elected to the United States Senate where he remained until he was elected Vice President in 1944.

Planned For June

He will go to Ottawa, unless something intervenes, probably late in June. He has had personally delivered invitations from Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada who visited the White House in February, and by Prime Minister Mackenzie King on more than one occasion.

Two United States presidents have had close associations with Canada. They were William Howard Taft and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

One Man Burns to Death, Two Others Injured When Car Collides With Transport

Kingston, April 8—(CP)—One man was burned to death and two others injured early today in a spectacular traffic accident six miles west of Kingston on Highway No. 2.

The dead man was Claude Goodberry, 21, of Westbrook, Ont. He was driving towards Westbrook, seven miles from here, when his car and a huge Allied Van Lines transport crashed head on.

Transport driver, Lou Barker, 32, of Toronto and spare driver, Lou Plamondon, 32, of Toronto, suffered minor injuries. Both are in Kingston General Hospital.

Plamondon was asleep in a bunk behind the driver when the crash occurred. He was thrown from the bunk on top of Barker. Unable to open the cab doors, Plamondon smashed a window and went around the front of the transport to the other side to get a fire extinguisher while Barker crawled through the broken window.

As Plamondon and Barker were trying to reach Goodberry, trapped in the wreckage of his car, a vacuum tank containing 165 gallons of gasoline exploded enveloping the telescoped car and transport in leaping flames.

When Kingston firemen, called to the scene by provincial traffic police, finally put out the blaze the burned body of Goodberry was removed from the wreckage. East and west bound traffic on the busy Windsor-Montreal highway was tied up for about four hours.

Goodberry's wife gave birth to their first child, a daughter, last Thursday.

Barker, interviewed in hospital, said Goodberry was driving without lights and in the centre of the road and then veered over directly into the path of the transport.

MARINES FOIL PLAN OF REDS TO BLOW UP DUMP

Carefully-Laid Plans by Chinese Communists Cause Destruction of Small Part of Depot

By JOHN RODERICK

Hsinho, China, April 8—(AP)—The story of how a small band of United States Marines foiled a well-planned attempt by Chinese Communists to destroy a big ammunition dump last Saturday was unfolded here today.

Only a small section of the depot was fired by the Communists. Witnesses said it exploded with a great burst of orange light and a thundering roar that smashed windows for five miles around.

As the first American correspondents to reach this village of mud huts west of Tientsin, I learned how the Marines overcame superior numbers in a brief but furious battle which cost the lives of five of the Americans. Sixteen others were wounded. Of the 14 still in hospital one is in critical condition and the other 13 are making "encouraging progress."

Six Communists were left dead and many of their comrades fled along a flood-spotted route across the Chinchung River, eight miles to the north. A seventh Chinese—a non-participant — was killed by a stray bullet.

The Reds struck with the advance aid of what is suspected here of being a fifth column, since they knew in advance some of the secrets of Marine communications. Their apparent objective was destruction of all the ammunition which couldn't be carried away.

The attempted coup failed because the Marines reacted with speed and hard-fisted fighting.

Before they withdrew the attackers set fire to two magazine sheds containing 105-millimetre shells, but millions of other shells remained untouched.

The explosives did not detonate at the same time. The early morning darkness was punctuated with tremendous bursts for 4 hours, after the first blinding glare.

The Marines were on the alert today for a possible new attack by the Communists. Chinese government Army intelligence advised that 7,000 Reds were marching on Hsinho, but investigation proved the report to be exaggerated, if not entirely groundless.

HANDLE RENTAL INQUIRIES

Ottawa, April 8 —(CP)— All regional offices of the Prices Board are making provision to deal with inquiries about the new rental regulations announced yesterday and in some cases are opening special temporary offices to handle the expected rush of queries.

REPUBLICAN MAJORITIES

Detroit, April 8 — (AP)—Republicans piled up majorities of nearly two to one in a dull state election today and seemed assured of the second sweep of the State of Michigan in six months. No upsets appeared in the making, since most of the leaders already held office.

TELEPHONE STRIKE FRONTS WATCHING TREND CLOSELY

First Day of Walkout Cuts Long Distance Service by 80 Per Cent

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, April 8. (AP) — Federal Conciliator Peter Manno reported the government is "hopeful" of a settlement today in the long-distance phase of the United States-wide telephone strike.

As negotiations resumed between the Union and the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's long lines division, Manno told reporters. "We are hopeful that a settlement will be effectuated in the long lines today," but emphasized that such a settlement would not end the entire walkout of 294,000 telephone workers.

Main demand in the strike is a $12 a week pay increase. Others include a union shop, reduction in pay differentials between cities and improved vacation and pensions plans.

While the first day of the walkout cut long distance service by 80 per cent and left millions of manually operated telephones useless, the big question remained:

Just how much and how lasting is the influence wielded by the striking National Federation of Telephone Workers within the vast American Telephone and Telephone Company—the world's largest corporate enterprise.

If A. T. & T. executives decide the union's power is all that its more than 300,000 members claim, then government conciliators look for the company to show some new willingness to bargain. If not, the corporation probably will settle back for a long fight.

Looks for Concessions.

Similarly, should the N.F.T.W. learn that its hold on the telephone workers inside and outside of affiliated unions is weaker than its officers had estimated, the government looks for some concessions from the federation. If its position is as strong as it hopes, the union will hole in for a last-ditch battle.

That is what President Joseph A. Beirne said last night the union would do.

After a late evening conference with conciliation director Edgar L. Warren and his top assistants, Beirne said no settlement proposal had been advanced.

"Good progress," was reported by Warren in one of the key negotiation conferences being conducted by government conciliators here. That involves the A. T. & T.'s long lines — or long distance — department. The other bargaining sessions involve the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company, largest of the Bell units.

FIREMEN SUFFER FROM SMOKE

Boston, April 8 —(AP)— A 61-year-old crippled woman was overcome, a man was rescued through a skylight and four firemen suffered smoke inhalation or were injured in a fire that swept the fourth and fifth floors of the Hotel Huntingdon in the Back Bay last night.

HENRY FORD, 83, PIONEER OF MOTOR INDUSTRY, DIES

Retired Early Monday Night And Suffered Cerebral Hemorrhage Expiring in Two Hours

Detroit, April 8 (AP)—In the flickering light of kerosene lamps and candles, Henry Ford, famed pioneer of the automobile industry, died at 11:40 last night in his home in nearby Dearborn.

He would have reached his 84th birthday next July 30.

High flood waters of the River Rouge running through the Ford estate had cut power and heating services at the residence—and a wood-burning fireplace warmed the room.

Mr. Ford's death was due to a cerebral hemorrhage.

It came after the noted industrialist had spent a vigorous day inspecting flood-water damage around the Ford plant and was making plans for another inspection this morning.

At his bedside were his wife, Mrs. Clara Bryant Ford, and a member of the household staff.

A family statement said he had retired at 9 p.m. and had awakened at 11:15 complaining he felt slightly ill. Mrs. Ford gave him a drink of water. He died 25 minutes later.

Funeral on Thursday

Funeral service will be held from St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral in Detroit Thursday at an hour to be announced later.

All Ford operations throughout the world will be suspended Thursday.

Mr. Ford's death marked the passing of not only one of the world's most noted industrialists but an individualist who developed one of the most colossal family fortunes the world has known out of what often had been ridiculed as "a lot of crazy ideas."

King Christian Of Denmark Ill

Copenhagen, April 8 (AP)—King Christian X suffered a heart attack Sunday and a Royal Palace communique said today the 76-year-old monarch had been ordered to "rest for a considerable period."

The communique, issued at noon, said the King had recovered from the attack.

A source close to the Royal Court said the attack was severe and had caused respirational difficulties.

The informant said that the King's physicians were summoned to Amaleborg Castle Sunday morning and that Crown Prince Frederik, who has been passing the Easter holidays in Sweden, was notified of his father's condition. The Crown Prince made immediate arrangements to return home and arrived here Monday morning.

King Christian was stricken with pneumonia last February and his condition was the cause of some concern at that time.

Prospecting by Helicopter Opens New Vistas in Strategic Metal Pursuit

By SAM DAWSON

New York, April 8 (AP)—Prospectors for strategic minerals, traditionally most active and successful in the United States after a war, are taking to the air to combat the threat of the United States becoming a have-not country.

A helicopter-borne magnetometer hovering above the tree tops has traced in one hour mineral deposits in an area that a ground party previously had surveyed magnetically in 70 days.

Louis Shattuck Cates, President of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, described this as "the most revolutionary development in geophysical prospecting."

Cates, who is also President of one of the United States' largest copper producers, the Phelps-Dodge Corp., said a "combination of devices" will henceforth aid the chances of finding further mineral reserves. He cited particularly the "ultra-violet light, the electroscope, the Geiger-Mueller counter and various geophysical methods, of which a combination of the electric and magnet probably affords the most comprehensive data from which to draw conclusions."

It is this combination which the airborne magnetometer utilizes to plot not only the presence, depth and location of magnetic minerals, but also the position of faults, shales and rock layers, almost as graphically as a flouroscope does the bony structure of man.

Small Communities Upstream Flooded By Swirling Waters

Sixth Victim of Flood Drowns When Tractor is Upset

By GEORGE RONALD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Chatham, April 8 (CP)—The Thames River at noon today had risen to within 10 inches of the peak of the record 1937 flood. City manager T.M.S. Kingston predicted the level of the rain-and-snow-fed waters would surpass that mark by mid-afternoon.

Maintaining its relentless one-inch-an-hour climb, the river was 19 feet above normal at 6 a.m. and reached 19 1-2 feet less than six hours later. The 1937 peak was 20 feet four inches above normal.

Three Inches Rise in Hour

Biggest one-hour increase was a three-inch rise between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m. At the city waterworks, officials said they believed that three inches was the "crest" which passed Thamesville, 18 miles east of here, late last night.

The water made new inroads on Dover Street, on the north side of the river opposite the city's main business section. It inched across the pavement, causing further damage to eight small frame dwellings evacuated earlier.

Several business places on Dover Street also were badly flooded. From one—Chatham Brewers' Retail store—hip-booted truck drivers removed hundreds of cases of beer.

At several places through the city the muddy water swept across low-lying lots. Almost a foot of water covered No. 2 highway less than 100 yards from the city's eastern limits.

Roads Washed Out

About six miles west of Chatham, the river roads on both sides of the Thames were washed out about 3 a.m. flooding vast areas of Dover township on the north and Raleigh township on the south.

Township road gangs had labored until that time to plow the road shoulders a few inches higher. But less than an hour after the first probing waters ate through the shoulders, the roads were flooded for miles. Tons of water spilled into farmlands which had seemed safe because of the height of the river roads.

This city of 18,000 continued to take calmly and quietly the flood conditions and the threat of more extensive damage. With a strong warm sun to help, children made most of the Easter holidays by paddling and sailing toy boats at the river's edge.

In the business section, storekeepers went ahead with the job of moving stock as far as possible above the expected peak level. In some stores and first-storey offices, electric and gas heaters were being used to counteract a dull penetrating chill from flooded basements.

William Jubenville, 17-year-old farm boy of nearby Dover township, was the first flood victim in the immediate area, the sixth in all Ontario many of those streams had produced damage and devastation costing perhaps millions of dollars in the past few days.

Jubenville was drowned when the tractor he was driving struck a washout on a township road and overturned.

Stocks in Stores Moved

In Chatham many persons worked all night taking precautions against property damage. In downtown stores staffs moved stocks to upper floors, and where there was only one floor raised stocks two or three feet above street floor level. Basements of stores on King Street, the city's main thoroughfare, had as much as three feet of water late last night.

Eight dwellings were evacuated last night on the south side of Dover Street, the second street north of the river in the downtown section. A few hours later the water had edged across the pavement and over the north curb. But because of their high terraces the houses on the north side of the low-lying street were not menaced so far.

Until a late hour last night citizens clustered on the bridges at Third and Fifth Streets peering into the swift-moving water.

About midnight the water lapped over the top of a sign on the edge of Collins Memorial Park. The sign says: "Bathing Prohibited."

An early morning reading showed the Thames only 27 inches below the top of the Pere Marquette Railway bridge at the waterworks pumping station on the eastern outskirts. The water touched the underside of the long bridge during the 1937 floods.

Subsiding at Dresden

At the Public General Hospital water entered the boiler room and came within a foot of a huge automatic stoker providing heat for the institution.

Chatham was expecting the worst at a time when the flood menace had eased everywhere else in Western and Southern Ontario. The same river, the Thames, has borne its flood crest through London, 70 miles upriver, in the early hours Sunday with a few inches to spare on the breakwaters that had been built higher since the great 1937 flood that cost $5,000 damage in London alone.

The Sydenham River running north of here, after flooding the streets of Dresden, was subsiding. Thamesville, immediately upriver was cut off by highway as as the crest passed there a few hours before reaching Chatham.

The Grand River was subsiding at Brantford and the Avon River had dropped sharply at Stratford. The Nith flooded some homes in Galt and Ayr. Wharves and summer cottages were damaged at the summer resort of Wasaga Beach by the Nottasaga River.

Two Men Ask For Jail Term

Toronto, April 8 (CP) — Arrested on a vagrancy charge after failing to pay for food in a downtown restaurant, Gordon Wintermute and Chester Bridi were sentenced to 30 days and five weeks respectively.

Wintermute told the court he wanted 30 days "to get cleaned up." Bridi also asked for 30 days.

"Oh no, I'm not going to allow you both out on the same day," said the Magistrate. "Do you want one week less or one week more?"

"One week more," replied Bridi.

"Five weeks," said the court.

TWO ICE BRIDGES FORMED IN NIAGARA RIVER

Niagara Falls, April 8 (CP) — Nature established a record in bridge-building yesterday when ice plunging over the Falls formed two ice bridges over the Niagara River in two hours. The first lasted about an hour and was then replaced by the second.

REV. T. J. LALLY, S.J., CONDUCTS SERVICES IN HOLY WEEK

Rev. T. J. Lally, S. J., returned to Toronto yesterday after delivering the sermons for Holy Week at the Church of St. Michael the Archangel. He is a native of Belleville and is known to thousands of visitors to the Shrine of the Canadian Martyrs at Midland, Ont., of which he is the custodian. Father Lally is a speaker of rare ability and eloquence.

FIREMEN AID WOMAN WHO FORGOT KEY

The fire department was called to the Corbin Lock plant on Coleman Street late Monday afternoon when sparks from the foundry cupola set fire to the plant roof. No damage was reported.

One other alarm, a chimney fire on William Street, was answered by the department during the day, while Monday evening firemen were called to do a "good Samaritan" act when a woman living in a Front Street apartment forgot her key and found herself locked out. Firemen entered through a window and released the lock from the inside.

ARMY AND NAVY VETERANS WILL HOLD SMOKER VIMY NIGHT

Veterans of two Great Wars will commemorate the anniversary of the famous battle of Vimy Ridge, where the men of the Canadian Expeditionary Force of the First Great War wrote a blazing chapter in the book of Canadian history on April 9, 1917.

The Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans will mark the occasion with a gala smoker and entertainment at their club rooms, Front Street, while the Canadian Legion branch here will also observe the anniversary with a smoker and varied program, in their Front Street quarters.

SQUIRRELS APPARENTLY WINTERED WELL

Apparently the squirrel population of the city did not suffer too much from the rigors of one of the severest winters experienced in years. The little fellows are beginning to make their appearance in various sections of the city and according to observers, have not felt the pangs of hunger too much.

MEN'S SUITINGS STILL REPORTED SCARCE

The clothing situation for the male of the species for Spring does not look bright, merchants reported today. One purveyor of men's clothing stated that he was unable to purchase anything in the way of suits, or suiting while on a recent business trip. There has been little if any decrease in the time of delivery for "tailor-made" clothes.

19 O.S.D. STUDENTS TO GIVE DEMONSTRATION

Nineteen students of the Ontario School for the Deaf leave for Toronto tomorrow where they will stage a demonstration before the Special Educational Section of the Ontario Educational Association.

The students will travel under the supervision of Miss Ethel Nurse, and Mr. Alec Gordon, staff teachers, who will also be in charge of the demonstration.

VETERANS PENSION OFFICER IN CITY

D. A. Ferguson, Veterans Pension Officer for the district, will be at the Canadian Legion Club Rooms, Front Street, tonight where he will discuss matters pertaining to pension difficulties with all war veterans regardless of affiliation.

SHRINE TO SPONSOR INDOOR CIRCUS

Dispensing with the usual annual procedure of giving away expensive prizes on draws, officials of the Belleville and District Shrine Club announced today that they will sponsor an indoor circus this year for the purpose of raising funds for their Crippled Children's work.

The circus will be here for a period of three days sometime during May.

TWO THREE-VEHICLE COLLISIONS REPORTED

Two three-vehicle collisions one at Victoria and Front Street, and the other at Victoria and Pinnacle Street, resulted in small damage to all vehicles concerned, while an occupant of one car was cut in the face by broken glass.

Robert Hull, Point Anne, was pulling out from a parking space on Front Street near Victoria Ave., when his vehicle was in collision with a Rawson bus which was attempting to pass. The left side of the Hull car was damaged with glass in two windows being broken, while Robert Hull, 8 years, was cut in the face with broken glass. As result of the collision the Hull vehicle swerved into a parked car immediately ahead.

The other accident occurred when a southbound auto driven by James McAuliffe, Lonsdale, was in collision with an eastbound vehicle driven by William Gerrie, Ann Street. McAuliffe was proceeding south on Pinnacle and in an effort to avoid the collision swerved his car to the left, striking a car parked on Pinnacle Street.

H. Kinsella, Former Trenton Resident, Will Build Polo Field on His Florida Estate

Harry Kinsella, former resident of Trenton, Ont., and a graduate of the Ontario Business College here, is building a polo field in Daytona Beach, Florida, where he has made his home for the past 20 years.

Mr. Kinsella has the full consent of the United States Polo Association, and leading American poloists, with several leading hotel managers of the large centres are interested in seeing the venture become a success. In time Mr. Kinsella hopes to make the field at his 800-acre home in High Ridge Estates become an equestrian spot. He proposes to hold a horse show and steeplechase meet there next Spring. The polo season will last ten weekends.

Mr. Kinsella, a son of the late T. D. Kinsella, well-known harness manufacturer in Trenton, following his graduation from O. B. C. worked for the Gilmore Lumber Company in North Hastings, later going to Akron, Ohio.

His mother and sister, Mary, still reside in Trenton. Another sister, Stella, resides in Montreal and another, Mona, lives in Philadelphia. He has two sons, Commander W. T. Kinsella, graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, and Harry, Jr., graduate of Columbia University, and a former football star.

Congregation Pledges $1,772 For Missions

At an inspiring and impressive meeting last Sunday night the congregation of the Alliance Tabernacle made its annual pledge for foreign missions. The total announced by the pastor, the Rev. C. V. Freeman, amounted to $1,772. A year ago the congregation pledged $1,680. for missions and this pledge which expired last Sunday was overpaid by $346.

The Alliance Tabernacle is part of a world-wide missionary organization known as the Christian and Missionary Alliance with Canadian Headquarters in Toronto. The Alliance maintains over 609 missionaries in 21 mission fields with a monthly budget of $100,000. The services on Sunday which were attended by large numbers brought to a close the annual missionary convention. Missionaries were present from Borneo, French Indo-China and Colombia, South America.

W.A. Davy, Bancroft, Wins Eastern Ontario Checker Title

For the first time in the history of the annual tournament the Eastern Ontario Checker Championship was won by a North Hastings resident this year as at the Y.M.C.A. early this morning W. A. Davy, Bancroft, was declared winner and will hold the Colliver Trophy for the next year.

In winning the championship of the Eastern Ontario District, Mr. Davy bested players from east as far as Kingston, from Prince Edward and Hastings counties. He defeated J. R. Stringer, another Bancroft man, in the finals and in the semi-finals eliminated James A. Livingstone of Picton, last year's champion.

With twelve district players participating in the tournament the initial round robin series was not completed until after midnight after which the four top players commenced in the finals. The championship was not declared until four o'clock this morning.

James Livingstone was top man in the round robin series, amassing a total of 30 points. Mr. Davy was second with 29 points, while J. R. Stringer, Bancroft, and Charles Floud, Trenton, were tied with 27 points each. Stringer beat out Floud in the semi-finals.

Other players participating in the checker tournament and the points they gained in the round robin series were as follows: P. J. Stringer, Bancroft, 25; Dan McCarthy, Kingston, 23; J. H. Taylor, Hillier, 17; James H. Johnston, Picton, 22; J. M. Cox, Kingston, 15; Harvey Grimmon, Milford, 14; Leo McQuaid, Bloomfield, 11 and E. J. Manion, Kingston, 3 points.

Jack Traves, of Kingston, many times winner of the Easter checker tournament at Belleville, did not enter the contest as he was participating in a checker tournament at Toronto.

GOOD INCREASE IN C. OF C. MEMBERSHIP

There has been a decided increase in the membership of the Chamber of Commerce here within the past few months with a total of 200 now on the records. Officials are contemplating the formation of a civic committee within the chamber, and plans are now under way for the new body.

WALKER HIT BY BULLET

Niagara Falls, April 8 (CP)—While walking in the Easter parade here a young woman was struck on the legs by a stone—she thought. Soon after the leg began to swell, and surgeons removed a .22 bullet.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. JOSEPHINE (Kangister) TURNER

The funeral of Mrs. Josephine (Kangister) Turner, late residence, 237 Charles Street, was held Monday afternoon from the Pinkston Funeral Home, Church Street at Victoria Avenue. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by Mr. S. Taylor of Peterborough.

The bearers were Walter Neal, H. W. Cunningham, W. J. Logue, John Parsons, Archie Currie and Frank Worrell.

HIRAM VARTY (Bogart)

Hiram Varty died at his home at Bogart on Saturday April 5th., after an illness of one week's duration with heart trouble.

The late Mr. Varty was born seventy-five years ago and was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Varty. He died on the farm where he was born and where he lived all his life, being engaged in farming up until his recent illness. His parents were pioneer settlers in Hungerford township.

In 1904 Mr. Varty married Ruth Elizabeth Coulter of Tamworth and she died in 1935. In religion he was a member of the United Church at Tweed and fraternally he was a member of the Orange Order for over forty years. In the district he was highly esteemed.

Surviving him are the following sons and daughters: Harold F. Varty, Tweed; George W. Varty, Toronto; Dr. Hilliard Varty, Toronto; Dr. Earle Varty, Toronto; Miss Mabel E. Varty, Toronto; Mrs. William (Ada) Geen, Thomasburg; Mrs. Judson (Hilda) McGowan, Madoc; Mrs. Elmer (Marjorie) Sager, Toronto; one brother, William J. Varty, Demorestville; two sisters, Mrs. C. W. Thompson, Stirling, and Mrs. E. R. Tibble, London, England; also thirteen grandchildren.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon from the Cassidy Funeral Home, Tweed to the United Church in that village where service was conducted by the Rev. A. L. Sisco.

Interment took place at Victoria Cemetery. The bearers were Harry Coulter, Stanley Webb, William Irvin, William King, and George Beatty and Thomas Beatty.

MISS LOUISE CLAIRMONT (Marmora)

Marmora, April 8 —(Special)—Following a lengthy illness the death occurred at her home early on Monday morning of Miss Louise Clairmont at the age of eighty-four years. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clairmont and was born in Marmora where all her life was spent. She was of a friendly disposition and made many friends, who sincerely regret her passing. She was a devout member of Sacred Heart Church and was a chorister there in her early years. She was also a member of the Altar Society, the Catholic Women's League and the League of the Sacred Heart. She is survived by one sister, Selina, with whom she resided.

The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning from her late residence to Sacred Heart Church, where Requiem Mass will be celebrated by Rev. H. J. Farrell.

Interment will follow in Sacred Heart Cemetery.

Young Guests of Rotary and Members, Too, Enjoy Children's Program

The main dining room of the Hotel Quinte rang to the sound of childish laughter Monday noon when Rotarians were hosts to their small sons and daughters, and grandchildren at the annual Easter Children's Party.

Upwards of forty boys and girls, and it must be said, the majority of their fathers and grandfathers thrilled to an entertainment that featured a Punch and Judy Show and ventriloquism acts staged by Mr. M. Clarke, well-known Toronto entertainer.

Prior to the entertainment the children were guests of their relatives at a luncheon, and at the end of the program were treated to peanuts and chewing gum, the gift of the club.

Solo by Jack Deacon

Rotarian Jack Deacon set the party off on the right foot with popular songs and a solo for the kiddies "If You're the Man Your Mother Thinks You Are". Piano accompaniment was provided by Stan Hagerman, Jr., and Mrs. Jack Deacon. The young guests were formally introduced by their relatives and officially welcomed by Rotarian Joe Shortt.

In a typical Punch and Judy setting erected in a corner of the dining room, the famous children's characters once more went through the strange adventures that usually befall him. He was subjected to the usual punishment by Judy when he put the baby to sleep in an unorthodox manner and twice met annihilation at the hands or mouths of a huge duck and a ferocious alligator.

His antics in disposing of an Irish policeman, a pig-tailed Chinese and a rash Negro, who finally wound up being placed in a hand-cranked sausage-machine and reappearing as white, yellow and black sausages, had the children shouting with laughter.

"Danny" Popular

"Danny" a wise-cracking dummy, provoked continuous laughter from the small guests as Mr. Clarke put him through his ventriloquistic paces. A fine comedian, the sallies and repartee of the saucy "Danny" made a distinct hit with guests and hosts alike.

Some unforeseen humor was noted when one of the small young ladies present, took up the cudgels for "Punch" and provided a vocal defence for him.

Past President Lloyd Hicks occupied the chair in the place of President Bert Howard who was out of town. Harry Croll welcomed the adult guests, Mr. Walter Ketcheson, from out of town and Mr. Everett Smith.

Gen. De Gaulle Supporters Form Political Group

Paris, April 8 — (Reuters) — First moves by supporters of Gen. Charles De Gaulle to form a new political grouping were made in Strasbourg today when representatives of "patriotic" groups in the Bas-Rhin department formed an organizing committee.

In a speech at Strasbourg yesterday De Gaulle called on his supporters to rally to a new France.

Similar committees are expected to be formed in other departments of France in the coming weeks.

First act of the new committee in Strasbourg was to arrange the fusion of several local political parties with two national right-wing parties — the Gaullist union and the popular Democratic Republican party.

Left Wing reaction to the De Gaulle speech came quickly with the Communist newspaper Humanite declaring "De Gaulle has proclaimed himself head of the reactionary column."

The former French leader urged a thorough overhauling of the new French Republic and in effect offered himself as a leader of "the new France." He also said that France should remain a country of "western people" maintaining a balance between Russia and the United States, whom he described as "rivals."

Leon Blum, former premier and leader of the Socialist party, said in a signed editorial in Le Populaire that De Gaulle's speech was a bid "to rally a popular majority in favor of one person."

HEAVY TRAM TRAFFIC

During 1946, Toronto's bus and street-car surface lines carried a new all-time high of 310,000,000 revenue passengers, more than double any pre-war year.

W.E. Fletcher Guest Speaker At Men's Club

The members of Tabernacle Church Men's Club met in the schoolroom on Monday evening, with the president, Mac McClelland, who opened the meeting with the National Anthem, in the chair. The splendid dinner was provided by Group No. 1 of the W. A. under the convenership of Mrs. P. Kerr. Reports of committee were read, and plans completed for the Band Concert to be given on Sunday evening, April 13, in the Church by the Belleville Municipal Band. Committee Chairman, Lloyd Hicks expects the Church to be filled for this musical treat.

The guest speaker was cordially introduced by chairman Mac McClelland, having been members together in the Veterans Guard during the war, spending several months at Glace Bay. "Songs of the British Commonwealth" was the subject of the guest speaker's address, which was very interesting and educational.

A tour of the Commonwealth was made, using as a medium, the words and music of the national and folk songs of the different countries of the Commonwealth expressing the feelings of each country. If the history books of these countries were lost, a good part of it could be regained from these songs.

Mr. Fletcher is music director at the Belleville Collegiate, also organist at St. Andrew's Church.

Yeotes-Nelson Teams Win Floor Hockey

Teams captained by Billy Yeotes and Ralph Nelson won the floor hockey championships in the Easter tournaments at the "Y" on Monday.

The junior tournament took in boys 10 and 11 years of age, and three teams took part, captained by Billy Yeotes, Glen Wilson and Norman Mitchell. A round robin tournament was run off, each game being of three 7 minute periods. In the opening game, Mitchell's team was beaten 6-3 by Wilson's team. The second game saw Yeotes' team win from Mitchell by 14-3. The final game brought together the two previous winners in a close battle with Wilson's gang taking a lead 2-0 only to have Yeotes' team put on a third period attack to win 4-3, and take the championship. The teams: Yeotes, Bateman, Donovan, Crawford, Hall and Mason; Wilson, Petrie, Crake, Carter and Goyer; Mitchell, Nobes, Campbell, Bourette and Donaldson.

In the 12, 13 and 14 year old tournament, Doug Foley, Glen Cornell and Ralph Nelson acted as captains in a similar tournament, Nelson beating Foley 5-4 in the first game and beating Cornell by the same score in the second game. The final game saw Foley trim Cornell 8-1. The Teams: Nelson, Ashline, Fox, Parsons, Bovay, H. Barclay, Lloyd; Cornell, D. Barclay, Colclough, Snell, Allen, Laney; Foley, Bongard, Burns, Wood, Poirier, Samuels.

Youth Fireside Hour at Christ Church Enjoyed

April 6th besides being Easter Sunday was the first Sunday of the month and the first Sunday of each month is synonymous with A.Y.P.A. Firesides. This month the "Juniors" were in charge. The program began with the mixing of one or two hymns, but from there on any resemblance between this and any previous Fireside came to an end. Guest entertainers for the evening were Mr. Bruce Sille, his accordian, and his orchestra.

It was a varied program, the numbers ranging from "Jesus Christ is Risen Today" to "Home on the Range." Charles Thorne violinist of the group, doubles as vocalist and when asked, plays a mean "trumpet" solo. Following Mr. Thorne's imitation of Harry James, Bruce Sills commented on his ability to imitate the inhabitants of the farm yard, at which point a voice from the rear demanded proof of the ability, and when the voice was found to be that of the rector those uncomfortable looks on the faces of the orchestra disappeared and "Barnyard Frolics" ensued.

This is not a two-man set up. The other two performers present gave an excellent account of themselves. When Ern Baragar played his Hawaian guitar you could almost imagine you were on the beach at Wikik. Jack Hull, he of the Spanish guitar, gave out with a couple of cowboy songs.

When the musicians began the "Easter Parade" the audience, for no apparent reason, decided it was time for some choral work and this choraling continued until Jack Hull rose to solo on verse two of "Home on the Range".

Rev. Everett Smith extended the thanks of all those present and it is hoped this will not be the last we hear of Bruce Sills and Company. Refreshments, as usual, appeared on completion of the program.

Tweed Chamber of Commerce Hosts to C.P.R. Officials And Guests at Splendid Banquet

F. W. Collins, Industrial Manager of C.P.R., Urges Members to Assist Executive in Securing New Industries for Village

(By Staff Reporter)

Tweed. (Special.)—Expressing warm appreciation for the advantages that adequate transportation affords in the way of industrial development, members of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, Monday evening played hosts to ranking officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway as on the first anniversary of their organization they held a "C.P.R." night.

The Chamber of Commerce dinner was held at the Hotel Tweedsmuir at Tweed and was attended by approximately 85 members, railroad officials and local dignitaries. President of the Chamber of Commerce, C. C. Ation, presided over the dinner program, while F. W. Collins, Montreal, Industrial Manager for the Canadian Pacific Railways, was guest speaker.

Other C.P.R. officials attending the dinner meeting included J. Russell Kimpton, Ontario General Superintendent, introduced by W. N. Hurst; R. H. Brunk, Toronto, Industrial Agent introduced by E. W. Jones; Percy T. Cole, Public Relations Officer, introduced by Sam Curry; Aiken Walker, General Freight Agent, introduced by C. C. Ation, and G. Everett Mayne, superintendent of the Trenton Division, introduced by T. C. Graham.

Transportation Stressed

Speaking on "Industrial Development" a subject in which the Tweed Chamber of Commerce is vitally interested, the C.P.R. industrial manager admitted the importance of transportation in the development of industry but pointed out that goodwill and kindness on the part of residents and civic leaders played a tremendous part in attracting potential industry.

Tribute was paid to the pioneers who developed Canada and also the smaller individual centres such as Tweed. "But we cannot live in the past," continued the speaker. "We must make the most of the present in order to make the future what we want it to be."

Residents of Tweed owed a debt to their children. It was up to the parents of today to do something about their children's future in Tweed.

Examples Cited

Asserting that Ontario municipalities generally were not wide awake to industrial development possibilities, Mr. Collins cited, however, the example of Cornwall and Perth where a friendly atmosphere coupled with understanding of civic officials and the generosity of citizens had been a drawing card which had attracted many industries.

"It all sums up to the fact that industrial firms considering branch plants in Ontario feel that Perth and Cornwall are "live towns," continued the speaker. "It comes right down to the men and women of each community. They must be prepared to lend their civic officials and Chamber of Commerce their individual support."

This being a world of material concepts, Mr. Collins admitted people would ask "what do they get out of it?" Industrial development would mean more business for businessmen, more customers, more patients, and bigger churches. The only way to achieve this was through internal growth or by industrial development. Young men and women could be kept in their home town only if opportunities were offered. This meant employment outlets.

Refers To New Industries

Mr. Collins referred to two new industries which with the completion of buildings now under construction will be established in Tweed. "This," he said "was only a forerunner of what was coming."

There would be stiff competition from other centres in the acquiring of new industries, Mr. Collins warned in conclusion. Therefore the goal could be accomplished only if the Chamber of Commerce had the full support of its members.

"You want children attending school two decades from now to say that the Tweed of today is the result of our fathers' planning 20 years ago."

Presence of Mr. Everett Mayne at the dinner was of special interest to the Chamber of Commerce members in that the recently appointed Trenton Division Superintendent is a former Actinolite boy, having left school at Tweed 25 years ago to enter the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway as station operator.

"I am happy for this invitation to attend this dinner party tonight because to me it is like coming home," said Mr. Mayne as he briefly addressed the dinner party.

Receive More Benefits

He referred to a common objection of centres being served only by one railroad, but assured that such centres actually receive more benefits in the way of transportation than they would otherwise get. There had been many changes in Tweed since he was a boy. The town had changed and there were many new faces. These people had come because they believed there were possibilities in Tweed.

This represented a challenge to Tweed residents of today to bring more new faces to the village and to develop Tweed into a thriving young city of the future.

Percy Cole, former Belleville newspaperman and currently public relations officer with the C.P.R., told of the importance of public relations work in obtaining industries. He spoke of the importance of a good live newspaper in developing public relations and urged all residents to be public relations emissaries.

Chairman Gives Details

E. W. Jones, chairman of industries for the Tweed Chamber told of the consistent effort which had been made by Tweed council to attain industry and stated this effort had been rewarded. Instances of the recent establishment of a new woodworking shop, the Hastings Cheese Company, the Hunter-Roberts veneer plant and others were cited.

Officials of the above named firms were asked to speak briefly, all talking in glowing terms of possibilities in Tweed. E. J. Courneyes, hotel proprietor, told of his purchase of the Huyck Hotel in Tweed and paid tribute to the foresight of a former official, Ex-Reeve S. B. Rollins.

Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., for Hastings East, referred to the request of the Tweed Chamber for the completion of paving on the Belleville - Tweed road and assured that he had the promise of some work being done on the road this coming summer. This would be in the form of double surface treatment, he said.

Refers to C.P.R.

George Stokes, M.P., for Hastings South, referred to the C.P.R. as a great factor in the development of Canada and stated that if Canada were to maintain her rightful place in world of nations she would of necessity have to become an exporting nation. As evidence of Canada's present place among nations of the world Mr. Stokes stated that there were now in Ottawa the representatives of 24 foreign flags.

Addington county representative at Queen's Park, John A. Pringle referred to the growth of Tweed as a business centre and expressed his best wishes for the continued prosperity of the centre.

In the dual role as accordian accompanist and song leader Art Snare led in a spirited session of community singing while as an entertainment feature Armand Turpin led in the popular French number "Alouette." Tweed C.P.R. agent T. G. Wilson, expressed the thanks of the Chamber members to the guests, while grace was said by Rural Dean W. J. Robinson.

Princesses Will Attend Ball

Salisbury, South Africa, April 8 —(Reuters) — Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret will dance high reels at a ball to be given tonight by Maj.-Gen. Sir John Kennedy, Governor of Southern Rhodesia.

Spending their second day in Salisbury, most northerly city which they will visit during their South African tour, the Royal Family had no engagements today. The King went riding this morning for the first time during the tour.

Before leaving Thursday for the Victoria Falls, the King and Queen and the Princesses will attend an indaba — conference of the indunas or chiefs of the Kaffir tribes.

Yesterday the King opened the 1947 session of the Southern Rhodesian parliament. Princess Elizabeth was presented with a diamond brooch, to which all Southern Rhodesian children subscribed, as an advance birthday present. She will be 21 April 21.

Rev. W.J. Robinson Appointed Delegate To Oslo Conference

Tweed, (Special.) —Announcement has been made that Rural Dean W. J. Robinson, rector of St. James' Church, Tweed, and Dominion Chaplain of the Anglican Young People's Association will attend the World Conference of Christian youth in Oslo, Norway, from July 28th., to August 8th.

Mr. Robinson will be one of six delegates representing the Anglican church in Canada at this conference.

The other five delegates are Mr. Gordon Elliott, St. Catharines, and the Misses Florence Lamb, Saint John, N.B., Hazel Journeaux, Toronto, Mavis Chisholm, Prince Albert, Sask., and Hazel Greenwood, Vancouver, B.C.

Forty From Canada

These Anglican delegates for Oslo are expected to attend the Dominion Conference of the A.Y.P.A. at Rothsay, N.B., the end of June. Forty delegates will attend representing all churches in Canada.

Some fifteen hundred young people will attend this conference which has been initiated by the World Council of Churches and other Christian organizations.

It is a follow-up of the conference held at Amsterdam in 1939, which was attended by Miss Bessie Gordon, of Tweed, one of the delegates from the United Church of Canada.

That Mr. Robinson was chosen as one of the six delegates from all Canada, is a genuine tribute to his popularity and the high regard in which he is held by all young people of the Anglican church.

Countrywide Census To Be Taken in China

Shanghai, April 8 —(Reuters) —China, which has relied on "rough estimates" of her population for more than 176 years, has decided on the first country-wide census in her modern history.

A new census law has been announced but no date has been set for the counting of heads, expected to take place in 1950, provided civil war is over and the country unified.

The last comprehensive census was in 1772 and since then there have been only approximate figures based on postoffice and customs statistics, which have ranged upward from a minimum of 323,000,000 to 547,000,000.

Under the new law there must be a census every ten years.

In the last effort to obtain an accurate estimate of the population the Chinese government in January this year reached the figure of 456,000,000, using rough calculations varying greatly in different areas.

The ministry of the interior made it clear it did not regard this figure as accurate and observers expressed belief it was too high.

Even the Black Sheep Not Civil To the Models

San Francisco, April 8 (AP) —Five fluffy lambs came up from the country, near San Jose, to take show window jobs for Easter in a big department store. Theatre artist William Walsh gave each an exquisite fleece-do. One came out pink, one orange, one green, one blue and one yellow.

Now that the big town is through with them, the lambs are finding life back on the farm a bit tough. Until their colors wear off or can be washed out, ranch hands said, not a single one of the other lambs will have a thing to do with the models. Not even the black sheep are civil.

200 Pounds Meat Stolen at Windsor

Windsor, Ont., April 8 (CP)—Approximately 200 pounds of meat comprised the loot taken last night when the Essex Packing Company, Limited, plant was entered. Two other break-ins were reported to police early today.

At the Essex packing office, East-Central Mercer Street, it was reported that entry was was gained through breaking a window. Value of the meat taken was placed at roughly $85.

Several persons must have taken part in the Essex packing break-in, it was stated. One person couldn't have gained entry into the building without help, it was said, and the quantity of smoked and cured meat taken indicated that there were several persons tking part, possibly making use of an automobile.

Early today it was reported that entry had been gained to Wally's Lunch, operated by Lawrence Telley of West-Side Wellington Avenue. Entry was gained through a window and the burglars took some cigarets.

Over the weekend, the Vet's Cleaners, on West-Side Felix Avenue, was entered, by someone who kicked in a widow. Sixteen dollars in change was taken.

PRESIDENT

Taft maintained a summer home in Murray Bay, Que., for many years and it is still owned and used by his descendants, including his son, Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio.

But Taft never went there during his term as president. In those days it was not considered proper for a president to leave the United States while in office unless for serious reasons.

F.D.R. Made Many Visits

Roosevelt spent his vacations at the family summer home on Campobello Island, N.B., and it was there he was stricken with the attack of infantile paralysis which made him a cripple for life.

He visited Canada on a number of occasions while president, including his two trips to Quebec, in 1943 and 1944, for conferences with Winston Churchill.

In 1938 he went to Kingston for an honorary degree and made the speech that placed the United States by Canada's side in common defence of the western hemisphere should Canada be threatened by a foreign invader.

Earlier he had visited Eastern Canada and Quebec City where he was received by the then Governor General, Baron Tweedsmuir. He had also fished in Ontario streams and lakes.

PROSPECTING

Hans Lundberg of Lundberg Explorations, Toronto, said in an interview that "there are miles and miles in this country where dirt and sand hides the ordinary surface indications miners have come to look for in their search for ore."

"The airborne magnetometer," the Swedish geophsicist said, "quickly and accurately penetrates this covering and indicates as well as any outcropping the structure, and content of the earth's crust."

By using a helicopter, Lundberg said, surveys can be made from just a few feet above the ground for maximum magnetic efficiency, and then by covering the same spot from varying altitudes the engineer can get "the third dimension" and locate the depth and position of mineral deposits and geological structures.

First helicopter magnetometer test surveys for minerals were made last summer in Ontario and Quebec, and the results in both profiles and plans checked accurately with ground surveys.

Lundberg said United States and Canadian authorities are considering plans for a geophysical survey of both countries with airborne instruments.

Train Cadets For Leadership In Navy, Air Force

Ottawa, April 8 — (CP)—The newly-announced combined Royal Canadian Navy-Royal Canadian Air Force College at H. M. C. S. Royal Roads is being established for training of cadets "who can aspire to and assume positions of leadership" in Canada's navy and air force of the future," Defence Minister Claxton said today.

In a statement following up his recent announcement of including R.C.A.F. cadets in the training at the naval college near Victoria, the minister said it will offer a broad, academic education as well as the specialized vocational training designed to meet the needs of the service.

He disclosed that selected graduates of the college who are engaged in naval studies will be appointed midshipmen, R.C.N., and proceed to sea for further training in big ships of the Royal Navy or the Royal Canadian Navy.

Those who elect to the engineering branch will in due course be sent to the Royal Naval Engineering College at Devonport, England, for advanced study ashore and afloat.

The two-year course will include a thorough instruction in English, French, history, mathematics, physics, chemistry and engineering similar to studies completed in the first two years at a university leading to an engineering degree.

U.S. Govt., Lewis Play Waiting Game

Washington, April 8. (AP) — The United States government and John L. Lewis played a waiting game today as reports from the country's soft coal fields indicated one-third normal production despite a decision by the United Mine Workers (A.F.L.) to stay out of digging they consider unsafe.

Capt. N. H. Collisson, Federal Coal Mines Administrator, stood pat on his ruling that so far as he is concerned any mine may operate if the local Union Safety Committee and operating manager certify it as safe pending reinspection by the Bureau of Mines.

The Coal Mines Administration said it reports last night showed 100,000 miners, including 54 000 members of Lewis' U.M.W., digging coal in 500 pits on the first day of the scheduled safety stoppage after the Union's six-day mourning period for victims of the Centralia, Ill., blast. The U.M.W. has 400,000 soft coal miners.

Yesterday's production was estimated at 723,000 tons, or 32 per cent of a normal day's output.

Operation Prolongs Lives of Persons With Stomach Cancer

San Francisco, April 8 — (AP) —An operation which prolongs the lives of persons with a form of stomach cancer formerly regarded as beyond the reach of the surgeon's knife was described today by Dr. Gunther Nagel of San Francisco.

In about four out of five cases it can add anywhere from six to 18 months to the life expectancy of the patient, Dr. Nagel told a regional meeting of the American College of Surgeons.

The operation is used on cancers involving the upper end of the stomach and the lower end of the esophagus. Formerly surgeons considered it impossible to remove that part of the allimentary tract because the esophagus at that point passes through the diaphragm to connect with the stomach. Once the connection was broken there was no way to reestablish it, because the esophagus could not be stretched enough.

The problem was solved by opening the chest cavity instead of the abdomen, then going down through the diaphragm and pulling a part of the stomach upward to connect with the shortened esophagus.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York April 8 —(CP)— Stocks steadied in part of today's market but the still confusing labor situation kept many leaders more or less subdued.

Dealings turned sluggish after a fairly active opening and only 230,000 shares changed hands in the forenoon. Irregularity ruled near the fourth hour.

Resistance was exhibited by U. S. Steel, United Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, N.Y. Central, Northern Pacific, American Smelting, General Electric and Allied Chemical.

McIntyre, down 1 point at mid-day, was the heaviest loser among Canadian issues which generally were off fractions. Distillers Seagram lost 1-4 and Hiram Walker eased 1-8. Canadian Pacific was unchanged.

Weighty steers were $14-$15.25 butcher steers $13-$15, heifers $12.50-$14.50 with one lot at $15, butcher cows $9.50-$12.50 with canners and cutters mostly $6.55-$9.25, bulls $11-$12.50, fed yearlings $13.50-$15, a few stockers sold at $12-$13.40.

Veal calves were $16-$17 for choice with plains downward to $11.

Hogs were dressed, grade A $22, grade B1 $21.60. Sows $19.25 dressed.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 8 —(CP)— Sell off in golds and downward trend generally continued in the early part of the afternoon session on the Toronto stock exchange with losses in many instances substantial. The recession was on a broad front with bids very hesitant in the mining issues while industrials eased off slowly for all groups. Western oils were quiet.

Volume for the first three hours was 605,000 shares.

Junior golds posted several losses greater than 10 cents with the handful of gains trading within a much narrower range. Base metals down included East Sullivan, Golden Manitou, Hudson Bay Metal, Nickel, Noranda, Sherritt.

Papers weakened in the industrial group for several losses with Moore Corp. a standout at 1 1-2 gain. Foods, steels, utilities and other groups were off from fractions to more than a point.

HOGS

Toronto, April 8 (CP)—Grade A, dressed bacon-hogs were unchanged at Stratford to farmers $21.95, to truckers $22 delivered, in market reporting early today.

Orchardists Expect Large Order From U. K.

Kentville, N. S., April 8—(CP) —Most orchardists of the famed Annapolis Valley, who harvested a $6,000,000 apple crop last year, appear to be ready to embark on an expenditure of more than $4,000,000 despite the uncertainty of the British market.

More than 500,000 of the valley's 1,800,000 barrels were sold to Britain last year but so far the British government has not committed itself on the purchase of part of next season's crop.

Although some growers have indicated they may reduce spraying and other expensive operations necessary for a good crop, most appeared ready to gamble on the possibility of another large British order.

Minister's Adopted Son Charged With Sexton's Murder

St. Joseph, Mo., April 8—(AP) —A studious 16-year-old adopted minister's son today was charged with the hammer murder of John Frank, elderly sexton of his father's church.

Police said the youth, Stuart Allen, had admitted slaying the sexton in the church basement because he felt a "sudden urge to kill someone."

Prosecutor O. R. Newcomer filed the murder charge against the boy whose foster-father, Rev. James S. Allen, is pastor of the fashionable Christ Episcopal Church in downtown St. Joseph.

Police quoted young Allen as saying in a signed statement:

"I went up to Christ Church and played the organ when this desire to kill somebody came over me — it didn't matter who.

"I went to the undercroft and saw Mr. Frank. I dropped some money on the floor and when he stooped to pick it up I hit him with the hammer. I struck him right hard over the head."

The hammer handle broke, and it was then Allen seized an electric drill from a work bench and plunged it into the 58-year-old sexton's body, police quoted the State as saying.

Asked if he felt any remorse over the death of the sexton, he smiled wanly and replied: "No."

NO INQUEST NECESSARY IN DEATH OF CHILD

Sydney, N.S., April 8 (CP)—Coroner A. D. Muggah has decided that no inquest will be necessary in the death last week of Joan Fletcher, 12, when she took of a fit of nausea and choked to death following a minor operation. A piece of orange pulp later was removed from her larnyx.

The coroner said death had been caused by the matter lodged in the child's windpipe and not the effects of the operation for a hand injury, or administration of anaesthetics.

Western Ontario Floods

Every part of the country will feel sympathy for the people of Southwestern Ontario where floods of unprecedented scope have turned loose destruction upon scores of communities. The torrential rains of the last days of the week have sent vast quantites of water pouring down the rivers and streams, flooding everything in its path. Thousands of persons have been driven from their homes and the material loss is expected to run possibly into millions of dollars damage to crops. The disaster has a lamentable and tragic aspect in the deaths of five persons as a direct consequence of the series of sudden floods.

The Red Cross again has been called upon to do work of inestimable value in rescue and in making provision for the flooded families.

Other districts of this part of Canada which escaped floods and which saw the gradual escape of water down other rivers and streams understand the concern of the people of the areas which have fallen under the ruthless sweep of the floods.

Many sections of the country know from past experiences what floods mean. To many flooding is a source of anxiety how the snows of winter will disappear, whether by gentle process or by the violence of floods caused by sudden and heavy rains.

This has so far been a year of untoward weather conditions, the disturbances of nature extending not only over North America but Europe as well.

Spring Clean-up

Spring cleaning has begun in many a home and in some households is well advanced. Clean-up on lawns, in backyards, and on the streets soon will be in full swing a little later. The snow held hidden a good many things anr refuse but its removal has left exposed the collection which the tidy citizens will shortly get rid of.

In spring time one sees the advantage of garbage and coal and wood ashes collection. The appearance of premises is not what it used to be in the days before garbage and ashes were collected and taken away. Today there are not the great piles of refuse about properties which used to offend the senses of sight and smell. Still spring clean-up always finds something to do.

In springtime's first flush, streets and lawns appear very drab and at times have a dirty appearance. There is the collection along curbs which is taken away at the earliest possible opportunity. Some of this is litter and much of course is the sand and cinders used to "sand" the streets when road conditions are icy.

The question of litter bothers cities. New York, one of the two greatest centres of population on the earth, has plenty of trouble on this score. The New York Times speaks of streets, "still deplorably littered. There is always an accumulation of filth near the curbs and the sidewalks are often ankle-deep in trash." The newspaper speaks plainly of the public's attitude: "The presence of automobiles parked at curbs anywhere, night and day, makes New York's job doubly difficult; we do not have the equipment—including the trash baskets—needed." The Times also refers to the "anachronism of trying to do so large a part of our street cleaning with a man and his broom and shovel. It is time to take a fresh look at this problem' and bring to bear some inventive imagination on new machinery to do the job. What appears to be needed is a small mobile sweeper using the vacuum-cleaner principle, with powerful suction; it should be so constructed that, in addition to being able to do a rapid, clean sweep where curbs are clear of cars, it could by extension get under cars, just as the home vacuum cleaner goes into difficult dust traps. Equipment using the suction principle is being used in some cities for gathering leaves off streets. Engineers of the Sanitation Department developed the refuse truck using bucket conveyors that permit low level rear loading. Snow-removal machines have proved very effective. But we are still largely in the era of man-with-a-hoe in street cleaning."

Those are problems mainly of large cities and fortunately some of them do not trouble the smaller centres. The parked car at the curb does create a problem when clearing of streets is necessary. Then too, citizens can always help by not throwing bits of paper and empty cigarette cartons and wrappings of candy bars on lawns, boulevards and roadways.

One of the attractions of smaller cities is the comfortably large lawns which add a setting of beauty for homes large and small. Belleville residents take pride in the appearance of the city's lawns. On them the owners and tenants spend healthy hours of exercise and labor.

The Railroad Section-Men

We'd like to say a word for the section men on the railways. They are the workmen who keep the tracks open and in good repair. They have to work in all weathers. When the thermometer gets away down below zero and snow clutters up the tracks, the section men have to get right out, blizzard or no blizzard. It is their job to keep the tracks open and they pitch in regardless of conditions.

People riding the trains do not see much of the section crews. Occasionally there will be a gang of men working and a slow order brings down the speed of the train. Once in a while someone will exchange waves with a section worker, but that is about the only communication the customers of the railway have with the men who patrol the tracks.

But, without those section men there would be no trains operating. They are the men who keep the roadbed in repair, who bank the curves and put the gravel in the right place. It may be humdrum some days, but there are times when the section men are out there when no one else wants to be facing the weather, states W. L. Clark in Windsor Star.

Condensed Orchard

The condensing effect of today's crowded living, marked by a call for everything in miniature, has reached the orchard. Great interest in "dwarf apple trees" is reported in the current issue of the C.P.R.'s "Agricultural and Industrial Progress in Canada."

The dwarf tree is about man's height, which doesn't promise much opportunity for relaxing "in the shade of the old apple tree." It's a speedy and abundant producer.

The diminished modern backyard—even ours—could well accommodate a couple of these latest miniatures, comments the Montreal Herald.

The Classics Return

Almost for the first time since the late war began it is now possible in England to walk into a bookshop and buy a classic author in a copy as bright, as clean, and as new as the latest novel. Between 1939 and 1946 British publishers, severely handicapped by paper restrictions, as a general rule issued new books only. The classics could be obtained only from second-hand bookshops or the shelves of libraries.

Those that are chosen for earliest reprinting show the trend of public taste. At any rate, as yet there are no re-issues of George Eliot, no demand for Victorian authors who raise problems of conduct or philosophy. The once immense popularity of Dickens is reflected in no new editions today; nor is there a call for Thackeray. The three writers most in demand are Trollope, Jane Austen, and Stevenson. Differing in all else, these novelists each offer a passport out of the perplexities and trials of the present world into realms more opulent lighthearted, and, above all, less complicated, says Christian Science Monitor.

The barkless Basenji dogs, which were depicted on the tombs of the Pharoahs, disappeared from Egypt in prehistoric times. In 1893 the breed was rediscovered living among tribesmen in central Africa. In 1923 some of the little non-barkers were taken to England and bred. Recently King Farouk of Egypt saw pictures of them and decided they should come home. He bought four Basenji puppies, which have been dispatched by plane from London to Cairo, says New York Herald Tribune.

Knowledge will not be acquired without pains and application. It is troublesome and deep digging for pure waters; but when once you come to the spring, they rise up and meet you.—Felton.

GOSSIP

The law gives benefit of doubt,
Both judge and counsel this advise:
Sift all the evil rumors out;
Mistaken oft are prying eyes.

But gossip tongues run on and on.
Their minds the simplest facts distort.
Their victims—reputations gone—
Are not allowed a day in court.

No judge or jury to decide
The scandalous rumors, false or true.
The gossips spread them far and wide
And never think what harm they do.

Local changes in the G.T.R.: Mr. J. R. Donnelly, who has been locomotive foreman with the G.T.R. here for some time, has accepted a position as superintendent of motive power with the Canada Atlantic Railway with office in Ottawa. Mr. Donnelly was deservedly popular with the local railroad men and his departure from Belleville is much regretted. He will be succeeded by Mr. Edward Fisher as local foreman, and there is no doubt that "Ed" as he is popularly known, will fill the position in an efficient manner. Mr. Robert Ivers of this city has been appointed locomotive foreman at Turcotte, Quebec, near Montreal, and Mr. Joseph Hay, son of ex. Ald. Hay of this city, has been appointed locomotive foreman at London, Ontario.

St. Agnes School for girls will re-open after the Easter vacation tomorrow.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is the difference between beef and veals?

Formerly "veal" was applied to the flesh of bovine animals under one year of age and "beef" to that of such animals older than one year.

These definitions proved too broad for the practical needs of the public and the livestock and meat trades and therefore the U. S. Department of Agriculture worked out a set of market groups and designations based on both age and carcass characteristics.

Bovine animals were classified as vealers, calves, yearlings and mature cattle. A vealer produces veal, a calf produces calf, and yearlings and cattle produce beef. Generally speaking, vealers are milkfed and under three months of age; calves, under nine months, yearlings, somewhere between nine and 18 months, and mature cattle, 18 months or more.

The best veal is from the carcass of vealers from three to 12 weeks old and from 40 to 300 pounds in weight. The flesh of a bovine animal less than three weeks old or one taken from a slaughtered cow is called "bob veal." It is regarded as unfit for human food and should not be sold.

Veal is usually fine-grained, light pinkish in color and contains little or no intermixture of fat in the lean. Calf more nearly approaches beef than does veal. The age of the animal alone is not a safe criterion by which to determine whether a carcass should be classed as veal, calf, yearling or beef, because the essential characteristics of each group depend on size, feed, handling and other factors.

"Veal," like "vellum," (calfskin), is derived through French from Latin "vitellus," 'little calf." "Beef" and "bovine" are both traceable to Latin "bos," ox.

"Steak" in "beefsteak" is derived from Old Norse and Icelandic "steik," which is related to "steikja," to roast on a stick, and "stikna," to be roasted. Originally a steak was a piece cut from the fleshy hindquarters of an animal, especially a bovine one, for broiling on a spit; but now we have hamburg, salmon, pork and other steaks as well as beefsteaks.

Paper Claims Carr Living in Cuba

Montreal, April 8 (CP)—The Gazette said today in a newspage story it had been informed by reliable sources that Sam Carr, who disappeared at the time that the espionage inquiry was launched a little more than a year ago, is "living quietly with a friend in Cuba."

The paper said it had been informed by these sources that the Federal Bureau of Investigation in the United States and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were "fully informed on his whereabouts and his new alias." Carr's name has figured prominently in nearly every espionage trial.

Said the paper:

Prior to Carr's disappearance from Canada, he was known to have lived for a few days at a Montreal rooming house on Notre Dame Street east, it was learned. From there he vanished to Toronto or Ottawa where the R.C.M.P. have lost track of him.

HENRY FORD, 83,

Described in numerous citations as "of the select company assured of perpetual fame," Ford, one-time obscure farm youth, was also credited with having "brought into being an industry that changed the course of the world."

He developed his great industrial empire for which he was once said to have refused $1,000,000,000 out of an idea for a cheap automobile and an initial capital investment mainly by his friends, of $28,000.

Abhorred War

Ford, who abhorred war, once tried to stop the first world conflict with a peace ship expedition to Europe, designed to "get the boys out of the trenches by Christmas." It was a failure that cost Ford $400,000.

It was soon after the United States entered the Second World War that Ford asserted that under certain conditions he could build 1,000 planes a day.

He stipulated that the design must be frozen and that he must have the technical help of such aviation experts as Charles A. Lindberg, one of his close personal friends.

Ford came in for much ridicule for this assertion, but he ignored it and pointed out that he had not said he could make bombers. Subsequently, at the huge Willow Run bomber plant he saw production of the giant bombers reach a level of one an hour.

Ford, who startled the industrial world with his $5 a day minimum wage in 1914, said he regarded his victory in the famed Selden patent suit as his outstanding achievement.

Won Famous Suit

This was his defence against a suit brought by George B. Selden, an upstate New York lawyer, who charged Ford and other car makers infringed on his patent for a gasoline engine.

Most other car manufacturers paid licence fees to the holders of the Selden Patent Suit but Ford refused. When he was upheld in his action, Ford asserted that without his victory there could be no real automobile industry.

The surviving members of the family, in addition to the widow, are Mrs. Edsel B. (Eleanor) Ford and her children, Henry 11, Benson, William and Josephine Ford.

Death came to the older Ford a little more than a year and a half after he had relinquished all participation in the management of his great company.

Resigned as President

When he resigned as president, a post he took over upon the death in 1943 of his only son, Edsel, he said he wanted to devote more time to "personal affairs."

From other quarters, however, it was said that dissatisfaction on the part of the younger Ford generation, particularly Mrs. Edsel Ford, had led to the reorganization of administrative personnel.

Whether this was correct, the elder Ford kept wholly away from the administrative offices.

How vast was the estate accumulated by the founder of the great Ford empire may require years to determine.

In the absence of a formal family announcement, it was assumed the elder Ford's holdings would go to his widow. At the time Edsel Ford's death it was generally believed his estate was worth $200,000,000.

The First Robin

A cheering song from the treetop
Where the maple buds show red,
The tawny gleam of a redbreast
In the branches overhead—
And as I look and listen
To the robin's old-time strain
New hope and faith and courage
Thrill the weary heart again.

That song, so sweet and tender,
Has bridged the span of years
And with it comes the memory
Of all that life endears,
Of one who loved the Springtime
And bird and blossom and bee,
Who taught me the joy of living
With heartfelt ecstasy.

Oh! bright and beautiful robin
What dreams your warblings bring
Of Summer's rippling meadows
Where bob-o-links gayly swing!
The flash of your wing brings visions
Of life that's a joy to live,
And the songs that you lavish so freely
Teach us of our cheer to give.

Lovely Stones Found in B.C.

Vancouver (CP)—Many beautiful stones are to be found in British Columbia, Jake Treub, who has spent his spare time for 25 years finding, cutting and polishing stones, said here.

The "garnerite," found near Williams Lake, in the interior of the province, is a nickel ore stone like a green butterfly wing. The opal found near Kamloops is of unusual beauty and the cinnabar from the same area has a grain-like maple.

Then there are the "dallasite" of Vancouver Island with its dark tracery of veins, the "jaspers" of the Fraser River, and the strikingly beautiful "Tiger's Eye," petrified asbestos.

YES, WE HAVE NO SYMPTOMS TODAY

Instead of offering symptoms for people to try on, it would seem more fitting to teach positive health—if readers who are "not complaining" at present are at all interested in keeping well. After all the agitation of the past twenty years in regard to periodic health examination and prophylaxis in general, not one youth in a hundred thousand actually invests in a periodic health examination unless he or she has some symptoms that make him or her think there may be something the matter. When I say a youth I mean a person who is not yet old. And when I say old I mean a person who is no longer young. There's a sharp dividing line between youth and old age—but I leave it to you to decide for yourself just where you stop growing, developing and begin degenerating, declining, dying. All I can say is that there is no "middle age", no mesa, no plateau, no decade where one remains at his or her peak —no, no, children, it is not a measurable time at all but only an instant when we attain full growth and development before we are on the way down the other side.

Since the average Yankee (a Yankee in my lexicon is anyone who lives in North America) can't be persuaded to spend his or her good money on a medical examination or prophylactic advice when he or she has no symptoms, perhaps we can catch his or her interest by uttering such words as "pep", "vitality", "prime of life", "reserve power", "resiliency", "endurance", "vigor", "functional efficiency" and "vite".

All of these features of positive health are covered by the term vite, coined for the purpose by two of my readers in collaboration with the conductor of this column, to denote:

Preservation of the characteristics of youth; better-than-average nutritional condition as manifested in lower death-rates, better growth and development; extension of the prime of life in both directions; material improvement of the life expectation of adults; higher average level of positive health throughout the life cycle; greater pep; more vitality; the highest degree of natural immunity; an adequate fund of reserve power to tide over emergencies and strains; the resiliency of the untamed animal or the primitive savage.

All that is vite. See what I mean? To my mind better-than-average nutritional condition means all of that—and the best way I know to help any one who hasn't it get it is by correction of the nutritional deficiencies from which most Americans suffer.

The ideal way to do this would be by revision of the everyday diet, of course, beginning with exclusion of everything made of refined white flour and replacement of such items with items made of wheat. . . but try this with your own diet and you'll soon learn how (a) that it is practically impossible unless you become a hermit and (b) that everybody regards you as a nut.

The alternative plan is simple enough for growing child, youth or adult: Supplement the ordinary diet with the essentials which are lacking or present in inadequate amounts in the diet of most Americans: calcium, phosphorus, iodine, riboflavin (B_2), thiamine (B_1) and vitamin D. These essentials of good nutrition must be taken every day the year around, by growing child, youth or adult. This is not medicine, but just essential food.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Warts

Six year old daughter has several warts on her face. (Mrs. A. W.)

Answer —It is unwise to attempt to remove warts from the face—only your physician can remove them without risk. For warts elsewhere I suggest the following:

1. Paint wart or warts and surrounding skin once over, twice a week, with Mild Tincture of Iodine.
2. If the wart or warts remain after six such paintings, then apply to wart only not to the surrounding skin, the familiar corn collodion—thirty grains of salicylic acid dissolved in one-half fluid-ounce of flexible collodion, once a day for one week —by that time wart, corn or callus should easily wipe away.
3. If wart still remains, then you had better break down and procure medical or surgical treatment.

Blood

Daughter has 3,000,000 count, doctor says it should be more than 4,000,000. Please tell me something about blood or where I can get information.

(Mrs. F. R.)

Answer—Send twenty cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Ask for booklet "Blood and Health". There should be from 4,500,000 to 5,000,000 red corpuscles in each cubic millimeter of blood, or say nine billion of them in a teaspoonful—count 'em.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

When A Second Wife Refuses to Mother Her Predecessor's Child

Two letters that I have just received deal, from different aspects, with the relationship of a second wife toward the child of her husband by his first wife.

The first letter is from a woman who is caring for her dead daughter's child whose father is apparently kept from claiming the child because of his second wife's attitude. The second is from a widower who is about to marry again, but whose fiancee does not wish to take the daughter of his first wife into their home.

Here is the grandmother's problem:

"Six years ago, my daughter was married and she and her husband came to live with us. A year ago my daughter passed away and her little girl, then 3½, was left with us. Soon after, her husband went to live with his sister, leaving his little girl in my care, but saying that, of course, if he should ever remarry, he would take her.

"Recently, he remarried. We were invited to the wedding but we didn't go because we still felt the blow of our daughter's death. This, however, seems to have started trouble, for, even though we tried to explain to him how we felt, his wife refuses to come to our house to see the little girl. He comes alone once a week and they have only taken her once to spend a weekend with them, and that was a very unpleasant experience, according to the child's father.

"I asked him if he was going to take his daughter now that he was married, and he refused, saying he couldn't right now, but not explaining why. I can't see any reason, unless his wife does not want the child. The child has needed a great deal of care, having trouble with her teeth and her eyes and having to have her tonsils removed. Neither her father nor his wife would do anything about any of this, So I have had to take care of everything myself. All they do is to give six dollars a week for the child, and I have all the worry and responsibility.

"I wouldn't mind, if I knew he was going to do what my daughter wished, which was for me to have the baby. He knows this was her wish, yet he keeps evading the issue. How can I bring this to a head once and for all, so I will know where I stand? And do you think he is giving me the right amount of money?"

In the other letter, the father, who really wants to have his child with him when he remarries, says:

"I lost my wife at childbirth ten years ago, and I have my daughter living with my sister. During the first seven years after my wife's death, I devoted my entire life to my child. But, recently, I met a young woman whom I very much enjoy and she has consented to marry me, but she will not take my daughter to live with us and I promised myself that, if I ever had a home again she would be with me. Yet I love my fiancee very much, too. Please help me."

The second of these cases seems to me much simpler than the first. Here the father still has his choice to make and may yet be able to work out, with the young woman he wishes to marry, some solution to the problem. It seems very strange to me that any woman marrying a widower with a child would be unwilling to take his child into her home. I should think that she would be eager to mother the child of the man she loves and would take the greatest pleasure in trying to make up to the little girl for the loss she suffered.

And I should think that her unwillingness to do this would give this man very good reason to hesitate before taking her on as a wife. For her attitude seems to indicate a type of person who has something wrong with her emotionally. To me, it would be a warning signal of trouble ahead, for even if this man decided to accede to her wishes and leave the child living with her aunt, there would undoubtedly be a great deal of conflict between his second wife and himself over the time and attention he would want to spend with his daughter.

In the other case, since the father has already married the woman who does not apparently want his child, he has put himself out on a limb. No matter how much he might want to have the child with him, his wife seems to dominate the situation and prevent him from doing so. His former mother-in-law feels that he is evading the issue about the permanent disposition of the child but the man is probably in a state of great conflict about it and is probably holding off in the hope that his wife may change her attitude.

Since he has apparently been married again only a short time, I think it would be fair for this grandmother to try and have patience with the situation a little longer. Perhaps she can, in time, win the friendship of this second wife and open the way to a frank discussion with the two of them. In the meantime, she thinks her daughter would be happy for the child to be with her, so, from this point of view, the situation is all right.

As for whether or not six dollars a week is, as she puts it, "enough" for this father to contribute to his child's support, I think it is a very meager allowance if he is able to pay more. But, unless the father is willing to contribute a large amount himself, I don't know of any way she could force him to do so.

Rhythmic Dancing Creates Grace

Few women are interested in calisthenics unless they want to reduce inflated hips or sneak a few inches off the waistline. It isn't that they are muscularly lazy, but rather that routine movements do not appeal to them. Athletic sports are gaining more devotees each year, yet the girls who love to swim, bat tennis balls, or trail over the golf course form only a small percentage of the sisterhood. But dancing does appeal. It is one form of exercise that promotes grace, that harmonizes the movements of the body, produces ease of manner and perfect rhythm.

It creates a sense of well-being, buoyancy of spirit. There is neither the boredom nor the drudgery that one may experience when going through gymnastic formulas. Every little girl should have dancing lessons—either esthetic, social or rhythmic—for the good it will do her bony framework, her musculatory system and her mentality. Dancing is the highest and most beautiful form of physical culture.

The good dancer never takes short, jerky steps that make for awkwardness and abruptness of movement. Even when not dancing her body will have poise and balance. Sustained effort extends the chest walls, tightens the fibres of the lower back, the thighs and the abdomen.

Those rotund duckies who would sliver down the waistline to conform to the fashions of the hour will find tap dancing of benefit. They need not hesitate to join a class; they will find other plumpies working hard to shuffle off fat cells.

One cannot dance beautifully without having the head balanced, spinal column fully extended, chest lifted. The result is perfect posture which, in time, will become a habit. The step becomes light. There is muscle conformity and grace of movement.

You can freshen up by tripping the light fantastic

Dancing stimulates circulation and aerates the lungs, and thus has a favorable effect upon the complexion. Best of all, it is fun. And fun we all need, after all these dreadful years of anxiety and hard work.

Women who find that they are bored with the job, that the daily routine is getting them into a rut, will freshen up physically and menally if they will trip the light fantastic. Digestive organs are benefited. Dancing is prescribed by some doctors for its psychological as well as physiological effects. It brings out one's lighter and most wholesome qualities, lifts the spirits, and brings a sense of enjoyment.

The young woman who observes her own awkwardness in comparison to the grace of others would do well to sign up for dancing lessons under the supervision of a capable instructor.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Why She Shouldn't Give Him a Ring

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

I am seventeen years old and have been going steady with a fellow for four months. I am still in school, but I have a part-time job after school, and I would like to know if it would be proper for me to give this fellow a ring when he graduates in June. If you don't approve of my giving him a ring, will you please give me any suggestions as to what I could give?

L. M.

You'd be a very foolish girl to consider spending your part-time salary on such an unsuitable gift for this young man. In the first place it isn't proper for a girl to give jewelry to a man to whom she isn't engaged, and also the chances are that he's the type of boy who doesn't want to wear a ring. And just imagine his trying to "explain" such an inappropriate gift to his family and pals!

My advice is that you settle for a graduation gift more appropriate to (1) good taste, (2) to the occasion and, (3) to your purse. For example, a pen or pencil; a supply of generous-sized letter-paper, perhaps stamped with his initials, perhaps with his name and address printed on the sheets and envelope-flaps; a writing portfolia for his desk; handkerchiefs, initialed; some stamps, if he's a stamp collector, or a rare or interesting coin, if he's interested in coin collecting; a wallet several records of his favorite kind of music, modern or classical; and, always an excellent graduation gift. . . books carefully chosen to show your good taste and your discrimination about his taste.

Groom's Mother has a Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My son was married recently, and I would like to ask you a question that has deeply disturbed me about the seating at the wedding reception. I considered this seating arrangement in very bad taste. I was seated across from the bride, my husband was seated at one end of the table with friends, and my younger son was seated at the other end of the table. I had always thought that on such an occasion my husband should be seated next to me. Am I wrong about this?

E. M. C.

Yes, you are definitely wrong in thinking that you and your husband should be seated next to each other on such an occasion. At a wedding reception the only "couple" who are seated next to each other is the bride and groom!

Since you, the groom's mother, were the woman guest of honor at the wedding, you should have been given the place at the right of the bride's father, the host of the occasion. And your husband, the groom's father, who was the man guest of honor at the wedding, should have been given the place at the right of the bride's mother, the hostess of the occasion.

When There are Two Honor Attendants

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am going to be matron of honor at a wedding soon, and another girl is to be maid of honor. The bride-to-be has asked me to find out which of us, matron of honor or maid of honor, walks first in the processional, which one takes care of the bride's veil and bouquet at the altar, and in the recessional who walks with the best man. Will you please tell us?

J.S.

If, in the processional, the plan is to have the matron of honor and the maid of honor walk alone (they may be dressed alike and walk together, or dressed differently and walk separately), the one who is the actual witness walks directly in front of the bride and her father. It is also the witness-honor attendant who takes care of the bride's veil and bouquet during and after the ceremony, and, if there is to be more than one couple in the recessional, the witness-honor attendant would walk with the best man.

PLYMOUTHS TAKE DROP

Detroit, April 8 — (AP) —Price reductions ranging from $25 to $55 on Plymouth passenger automobiles in the United States were announced Monday by Chrysler Corp.

The Plymouth slash, like that announced by the Ford Motor Company was contrary to the general trend in the car industry which has seen retail prices mount steadily since price control was removed.

THE EASTER WINDS

We hear the welcome Easter winds
They sing of love and light and life,
Of bursting bud and blooming tree
When all the world with joy is rife.

A message dear to us they bring
They waft the word from ages past—
That Death no longer holds a sting
And love and life for aye shall last.

For Christ has burst the bonds of death
And reigns above—our risen King:
With eager throbbing hearts we hear
The song, the winds of Easter sing.

—Helen B. Anderson

The winter is over and past—a winter to be long remembered for its blizzards and snow-blocked roads rendering many a local district completely isolated. And now with the lake still clothed in mail, the coming of the Eastertide brings hope and courage.

Family Honored Before Leaving The Community

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Townsend recently was filled to capacity with members of Victoria neighborhood who met to honor Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cunningham, who have sold their farm home here to Mr. and Mrs. Brown of Toronto, and are now living in Belleville. Due to unfavorable weather and road conditions postponement and cancellation of community gatherings have been the role this season and this occasion was no exception.

Mr. Montgomery was chairman for the evening. With Mrs. Hubert Townsend at the piano and Miss Audra Brickman as song leader, all enjoyed a lively singsong. Miss Shirley Alyea gave a reading 'Good Neighbors', Johnny McIntyre sang a much appreciated solo 'Roses'. The school under the leadership of Mr. Sarles sang a chorus. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham were then called to seats of honor and Mrs. Sidney Fox read an address of appreciation for their help in this neighborhood through many years and expressing regret that they had severed their ties here. Mr. Gerald Fox presented Mrs. Cunningham with a pressure cooker while Ross Vanclief and Randal Storms presented Harry with a smoking stand and pipe. Both Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham graciously replied.

Mr. Montgomery on behalf of the community extended a very kindly welcome to Mr. and Mrs. Brown who were present.

Refreshments were served and a pleasant social time enjoyed. All were pleased to have Mrs. M. B. Weese, of Belleville, a former resident present for the evening.

On Thursday evening Victoria community was again called together. This time at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. Vanclief to honor their daughter, Keitha, a recent bride, and her husband, Mr. Edwin Carnrike and to express to them good wishes both by word and gift. Mr. Max Blackburn was present and furnished several musical numbers which were much enjoyed. Miss Audra Brickman read an address and "Keitha" and "Edwin" were presented with an overflowing basket of beautiful gifts. Refreshments were served and a pleasant time enjoyed.

ZOOMING UP into popularity is an old furry friend—moleskin. This velvety fur, brilliantly dyed in fascinating colors, is cut for honors next Autumn. We admired a fitted trench-coat of moleskin dyed a bright electric blue.

Look before you weep that you've got the wrong suit. It's easy to go wrong in selecting a suit, for this is the greatest suit year on record and anything goes, from brief bolero to long, fitted fingertip tunics.

There's comfort in knowing that one's wardrobe includes a fine tweed coat. Red, green and yellow plaid is used for a very fine, soft tweed coat made with back fullness, tailored self belt and high closing above a double-breasted front. Hip pockets have big triangular flaps.

Easy way to run up an extra hat is to trim a simple roller breton of felt or straw with a colorful silk scarf, making a bow that has long ends trailing in back.

Young and blithe is a suit of fine wool crepe, the top of brief bolero in white, with scalloped hem. The navy wool skirt has scalloped detail at the hem, too.

Something new for summer wear is the strapless dress made right for outdoors with a cover-up jacket. Gingham, striped in dull, South Sea Island colors, is used for a nice little frock with strapless top and sarong-draped skirt. The cover-up jacket with its bracelet-length sleeves, high side closing with three groups of buttons, and brief club collar—has a citified look.

Very clever little novelties add up to useful gadgets, such as the umbrella with a clear plastic, screw-on top that can be used to hold change, keys or cigarettes and a match book.

WEDDINGS

TUGNETTE—SHOREY

On Thursday April 3 at 3 o'clock a quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents 302½ Front St., Belleville, by the Rev. H. H. Hillis of Wallbridge United Church, when Jeanne Estella, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Shorey became the bride of Bernard Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Tugnette of Belleville.

The bride looked very attractive in a suit of pale blue wool gabardine with a corsage of American Beauty roses. Miss Pearl Woods of Belleville attended the bride, wearing a suit of black wool and a corsage of pink roses.

The groomsman was Mr. Eugene Dewey of Belleville.

The ceremony was performed beneath an arch of white streamers and wedding bells with a background of tulips and daffodils.

Following the ceremony a reception for the immediate relatives was held at the Bar-B-Q dining room where a large wedding cake decorated the centre of the table. The bride's mother received the guests in an ensemble of grey silk crepe and wearing a corsage of Ophelia roses. The groom's mother assisted wearing a figured dress of white and brown and a corsage of Ophelia roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Tugnette left for a trip to Ottawa, the bride wearing a blue top shorty coat with black accessories. On their return they will reside in Belleville.

TURNER—BATEMAN

On Saturday, April 5th, at 2:30, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris. Bateman, Springbrook, Ont., was the scene of an Easter wedding, when their only daughter, Ada, became the bride of Gordon Thomas Turner, son of Mrs. Turner and the late B. L. Turner of Waterloo, Ontario.

Rev. P. H. Christensen of Springbrook United Church officiated. Mrs. Carman Sine played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Miss Adell Turner, sister of the groom, sang "Because."

The ceremony was performed in a setting of ferns, Easter lilies and pink and white streamers.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was lovely in floor length gown of white slipper satin with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and a bouffant skirt ending in a slight train. Her finger tip veil was caught to a halo of flowers and she wore a single strand of pears. Her cascade bouquet of calla lilies and pink roses.

The bride's only attendant was her cousin, Miss Marjorie Bateman of Trenton, who wore a floor length gown of blue jersey and a shoulder length veil caught with a pink floral headdress. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Murray Turner of Waterloo, brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dove grey crepe dress with black accessories and was assisted by the groom's mother who wore, blue crepe and black accessories. Both were wearing corsages of Talisman roses.

Following the ceremony a buffet lunch was served to about 45 guests by Mesdames Will Brown, Fred Bateman, Burton Bateman and Ed. Bateman, aunt of bride.

A weding cake centred the bride's table, flanked by pink tapers, Easter lilies and pink snapdragon. The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of silver and to the groomsman a gold watch chain. The bride presented a lapel locket to the maid of honor, a bracelet to the soloist, cup and saucer to the pianist. The waitresses received sandwich trays.

The bride and groom left by motor for Toronto and from there by plane to Buffalo and Rochester. The bride travelled in a suit of midnight blue wool, pink flower hat and black accessories with a corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

Guests were present from Belleville Trenton, Madoc, Toronto, Kitchener, Waterloo and Stirling.

The bride's mother and father also celebrated their twenty-fourth wedding anniversary on this same date.

PHILLIPS—GOODFELLOW

The altar of Codrington United Church was tastefully decorated with spring flowers as a setting for the double ring marriage ceremony on Saturday April 5th., when Ada Doreen, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Goodfellow of Codrington, became the bride of Jack R. Phillips, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Phillips of Belleville, Ont., with Rev. Wm. Delve officiating.

Given in marriage by her father the bride entered the church to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. H. Babcock, A.T.C.M. She made a charming picture in a fitted blush satin gown, with a floor length veil of illusion net, held in place by a coronet headdress; and carrying a cascade bouquet of Calla lilies and Sweetheart roses.

Mrs. R. C. Cameron, as her sister's matron-of-honor chose a dress of orchid rayon sheer, with matching flower hat, and carried a nosegay of vari-colored carnations and roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Mae Goodfellow, sister of the bride, wearing a dress of printed blue organza over taffeta, with matching lace gloves and flower hat. She carried a nosegay similar to that of the matron-of-honor.

Miss Edna Mae Goodfellow, flower girl, wore pink nylon marquisette over taffeta, and carried a nosegay of carnations and sweetpeas.

Mr. "Nobby" Jones and Mr. Russel Sunderland attended the groom, while the ushers were Mr. Bruce Goodfellow, and Mr. James Benson.

During the signing of the register Mr. J. O. Page of Wallaceburg, Ont. sang "I Love You Truly."

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the church hall for about fifty relatives and friends, when the bride's mother received in a green taffeta gown, with matching hat, and the mother of the groom assisted, wearing a dress of black crepe with matching hat. Both wore corsages of yellow roses. The tables were beautifully decorated, a large wedding cake forming the centre for the bride's table. The Honorable Mr. W. A. Goodfellow Minister of Welfare, and uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride to which the groom ably responded.

Guests were served by six close girls friends of the bride.

For a motor trip to Lake Placid and New York City, via the Ivy Lea Bridge, the bride chose a dressmaker suit of light blue with top coat of the same shade, and brown accessories. Her corsage was of sweetheart roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold necklace with pearl setting; the bride's gift to the groom was a billfold of English leather; to the matron-of-honor and to the bridesmaid she gave plastic compacts, to the flower girl a gold bracelet.

Mr. and Mrs. Phillips will later take up residence in Belleville.

Kiwanis Auxiliary Hears Address On Social Work

The Kiwanis Auxiliary held their regular monthly meeting at the Centre on Thursday evening, with an attendance of 38, and President Flossie Smith in the chair.

"O Canada" was sung, and the business meeting was conducted in the usual manner. The reports of the various committees were presented, and several items of business were taken care of. Plans were completed for the Bridge and Euchre, which the auxiliary are sponsoring on Wednesday evening, April 9th. at the Centre on Dundas Street.

Many lovely articles, which had been donated for the bazaar, which will be held in the Fall, were on display.

Mrs. Sparling Speaker

Gertrude Button introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. G. Sparling, who gave a most interesting talk on Social service and welfare work. She expressed her appreciation for all the help and cooperation which she had received from the Kiwanis Clubs in Hamilton and Toronto, during her past work.

Mrs. Sparling stated that social service workers are just as important today as nurses, and compared her work to that of a specialist, who builds the best she possibly can, with the material which she has at hand.

Our thought should be "Our Community," and each community should be thought of as a cathedral, with each person as a block, which, when fitted together in the proper niche would form this lovely cathedral —but unfortunately there are many mis-fits who cannot find their niche, alone, and so unless there is some one willing to assist them, the cathedral cannot be completed.

Need More Workers

Among her topic were, the "Social Worker," "The Big Brother's Work" "The Visiting House Keeper," "Child Guidance Care," and "Unmarried Parents."

These existing conditions certainly constitute the need for many more social workers, and in closing Mrs. Sparling urged that more encouragement be given to those who might become interested in this very necessary work.

Let us all help in building a Cathedral of Human Life.

On behalf the Auxiliary—Jessie White expressed appreciation for this most interesting and educational talk.

The Birthday Draw was won by Ethel Striver.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, and Grace Vanner and her group served refreshments.

Women's Activities

AIKENS' W.M.S

The Easter Thankoffering service of Aikens' Auxiliary was held at the home of Mrs. S. Spafford.

The Easter service of worship as prepared by Mrs. Ernest Forbes on the theme — "The Power of the Living Christ," was followed throughout with the president, Mrs. Everett Hubble in charge.

Mrs. Lee Grills presided at the piano playing appropriate music.

Mrs. G. Denike read scriptures and Mrs. Hubble gave a reading

Mr. Hillis closed the worship service with prayer.

A short business period followed. The May meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wilmot Bailey.

Members were very pleased to have as their guests Mrs. L. Reid and Mrs. C. Holmes of Holloway St. W.M.S.. Also Mrs. Bush a former member.

The president extended a warm welcome to these ladies who had so kindly consented to give reports of the 22nd Presbyterial meeting at Napanee.

Aikens delegates had been unable to attend on account of weather conditions.

Mrs. Reid reported on the sessions throughout, presenting the theme—"Now is the time." "Our auxiliaries are facing and being challenged as never before." she stated. "Now is the day of salvation. There is an emergency now for the Kingdom of God."

Mrs. Reid gave a full and inspirational report challenging W.M.S. workers that now is the time to be up and doing in the work of the organization. Mrs. Holmes reported on the addresses of the guest speaker — Miss Gertrude Hamilton, M.A., missionary to Japan before the Second World War and principal of the girls high school at Tokyo.

Miss Hamilton said in part "The challenge of the world is strong in us today.

The Japaneese say—Missionaries are the greate[illegible] gift you could send us—crow[illegible]re eager to hear the gospel. Christian education must be set up in Japan before it is too late."

Miss Hamilton spoke both as a foreign and home missionary. Telling of her work in Japan and of her work in Canada where she has been engaged among the Japanese removed from the West Coast since January, 1943 in the Kootenay district. Her slogan was "If we are to win the world for Christ, we must have an international policy—one world—a family of nations—one brotherhood. We need a new revolution born not of the hate but of love. One God who is Father."

The Japanese appreciate what the W.M.S. has done in sending missionaries to them. Today we must have "one" world or "no" world.

Mrs. S. Westover moved a hearty vote of thanks to these ladies for the splendid reports.

Mrs. Perry Hamilton favored with a solo and Mrs. Fred Moon gave a reading—The Easter Message.

Mrs. Hubble closed with prayer.

Mrs. Spafford and the committee in charge served refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

FELLOWSHIP CLUB

The Fellowship Club of Holloway Street United Church, which is a newly formed evening branch of the Women's Association, held its third monthly meeting on April 2nd in the Sunday School rooms.

The meeting was opened with the worship service conducted by the President, Miss Mertyl Barnum, assisted by Mrs. McFarlane and Mrs. Sinfield. The theme was the Easter message.

After the business period the program was presented, opening with a short sing-song of Easter hymns. This was followed by an enjoyable reading by Miss Bell and an interesting story on facts of the life of Jack Miner and his "winged missionaries", read by Miss Moorcroft.

The significance of the Easter story was presented by Mrs. Burke and Mrs. Frederick in eastern costumes as Cleopas and Rachel in the "Emmaus Walk".

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Everyone enjoyed a comical Easter parade of Spring bonnets, after which refreshments were served.

MARSH HILL W.M.S.

The April meeting of the Marsh Hill W.M.S. was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Alex Tanner with the president, Mrs. E. B. Finkle, in charge. The theme of the worship service was "Christ, the Living Word."

A Temperance reading was given by Mrs. W. Lindenfield.

During the business period the Easter thankoffering was taken.

The Easter program, "God's Book of Life," was conducted by the president, assisted by Mrs. Frederick, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. F. Finkle, Mrs. Mitts, Mrs. Lindenfield and Mrs. L. Finkle.

Prayer was offered by Rev. L. Shorten.

An Easter reading, "A Better Way," was given by Mrs. A. Tanner.

Mr. Shorten told of the death of Mrs. Beatrice Kitchen, a missionary returning to China, who in her death, saved the life of a child. Benediction closed the meeting.

WEATHER THIEF!

Timberlea, N.S. (CP)—Temperatures at Timberlea went unrecorded for posterity recently because of a petty thief. The thermometer that registered vital statistics in the village for the Dominion Meteorological office at Halifax was stolen from the lawn of M. A. Carmichael, meteorologist's assistant.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Every bridge rule you hear or read about is not necessarily a good rule. If it is not logical and practical, there is something wrong with it. Your bridge will be spoiled by it.

Your best final contract is determined by exchanging the most needed information with partner. The lowest bid you can use permits the most number of rounds of these advices.

Consequently, it would seem that the best opening is a bid of one. And the preponderant number of hands are truly one openings.

Actually, however, the one opening describes a hand limited in both directions. It announces the least and the most to expect from its bidder. So other bids must tell of hands outside these limits.

What are the limits shown by an opening one bid? Its minimum is better than average in all essential basic items. Its maximum is not quite enough to make a game without help from partner.

Specifically, as to minimum it admits at least five tricks, four of which are high cards, of which two are sure tricks. Users of any lower minimum base it on opinion and not mathematical soundness.

Specifically as to maximum, it denies having a hand with as many as nine tricks. Users of a lower or higher maximum base it on opinion that ignores the generally accepted policy.

The conclusion to come to from this is that some other bid must be used to show a hand with nine or more tricks. There is such a bid. It is an opening bid of two in a suit.

Pick up a hand like this:

♠ A Q 9 5 2
♥ None
♦ K Q 7 4
♣ A K 5 2

Your hand contains nine tricks. Six of them are high cards (aces, kings, queen). Three of them are shorts in hearts. Open it with a bid of two spades. With one trick less, start with one.

A bid should show what partner must know.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

When Raymond Massey arrived in Hollywood this weekend to start work in "Mourning Becomes Electra," he was confronted with large portraits of himself and his "ancestors," in the play ready for use on the set. Massey will play Brig.-Gen. Ezra Mannon in the screen version of Eugene O'Neill's play and Rosalind Russell will be seen as his daughter.

Producer Dudley Nichols signed Massey in New York some time ago and commissioned the portraits from painter Martin Lewis at the same time. The cinematic family art gallery is painted with casien in monochrome, so that the movie camera will not be bothered with reflections, as would be the case with shiny oils.

The Shorts World.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's cartoon team of Tom and Jerry are cooking up more frolics for their hilarious cat, Tom (no relation to the producer.) The two won their fourth Academy Award for cartoons with "The Cat Concerto" which will have general release late this month.

National institutions will take a beating in some of the pair's forthcoming cartoons, "1,000 Men and a Mouse," "Saturday Evening Puss," "Good Mouse-Keeping" and "The Cuckoo Murder Case." In addition there will be a series of musical cartoons with Tom Cat cast as Conductor Catowski.

Reviewing.

Dick Powell snarls right out of the book in his latest hard-boiled role in "Johnny O'Clock," a swell crime melodrama. The plot revolves around a crooked gambling racket which sprouts corpses when one of the boys wants his cut and a hat-check girl gets to know too much.

Powell plays the junior partner in the outfit whom the babes go for, the babes being Evelyn Keyes, as sister of the murdered girl, and Ellen Drew, married to the senior partner.

COLONIAL BUS STALLED

Ottawa, April 8 — (CP) — Thirty-six passengers aboard a (Colonial Coach Lines) bus were stranded in three feet of water on the Ottawa-Morrisburg highway last night when the heavy machine stalled while attempting to navigate the flooded roadway, 3 miles from Winchester.

Chains were attached to the axle of the bus and the passengers were pulled to safety after spending more than an hour stranded in the vehicle. They continued their journey to Ottawa after minor repairs had been effected on the bus.

In Manhattan

By PAT USSHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 8 — (CP) — A theatrical season in New York without Tallulah Bankhead is like porridge without salt — tasteless. And whenever the tempestuous Miss Bankhead comes to Manhattan, she imparts to the stage a flavor and a zest peculiar to herself.

She's in town now, playing the feminine lead in an extremely dull, talky melodrama. Miss Bankhead gives a superb display of acting versatility as a tragically-bereaved queen in the Jean Cocteau play, "The Eagle has two Heads."

Her appearance in this poorly-written play by a noted French writer has stirred up a flurry of speculation among Metropolitan drama critics. Why, they ask, does an actress of Miss Bankhead's ability waste her talents on such a play?

No one seems to know the answer although there are some plausible explanations.

Perhaps Tallulah Bankhead is determined to act the part just to show what she can do, even with a bad play.

"The Eagle has two Heads" is not the only current example of a poor play marked by distinguished acting. James Mason, handsome, scowling British actor, gives a fine performance as King David in a disappointing play called "Bathsheba" dealing with a famous illicit romance described in the Bible.

Rawdon

Rawdon, (Special.) — Hoard's United Church was filled to the doors on Tuesday evening when Stirling Y.P.U. presented their three-act play "Betty, Girl of My Dreams".

Between acts, Mr. Charles Bridges delighted with a humorous monologue, 'The Black and White Kitten'.

Miss Elsie Rannie contributed several piano selections: Messrs. Jack Bush and Bob Hulin a number of musical selections and Rev. Percy Lambert rendered a vocal solo.

The play was directed by Mrs. E. Haig, teacher at Stirling High School and Mr. C. Bridges looked after the makeup. Mr. Glen Bush was stage manager and Miss Joan Hoard assisted behind the scenes at all presentations.

The group first presented their play in Stirling theatre early in February and since that time they have played to large audiences at Stockdale, Foxboro, Campbellford, Madoc, Ivanhoe, Minto and Hoard's. They had to postpone their presentations several times because of blocked roads and adverse weather conditions.

Peter Graves, Father and owner of the home, Harold Hagerman.

Mrs. Graves, his second wife, who married Peter for his money, Phyllis Bartlett.

Elizabeth, (Mrs. Graves' fashionable daughter), Jean Nephew.

Mrs. Jenkins, the old servant, Mae Sarles.

Martin, the butler, Jack Bush.

Marie, the new maid, Barbara Sarles.

Jerry Carmichael, Harold Bush

The play has a good moral and St. Paul's young people are to be congratulated on their choice of a good story filled with both humor and pathos.

Moira

Y.P.U. PROGRAM

Moira — Last Friday evening Moira Young Peoples' Union invited Bethel, Eggleton, West Huntingdon and Fuller to a United meeting in Moira Church. Mr. Beverley Foster presided.

The Young People of Eggleton conducted the Worship service. A vocal solo and a piano selection were given by Miss Dorothy Sills of Bethel and Rev. C. A. Campbell gave an interesting talk on "Pep." Misses Marion and Helen Kellar of Fuller, contributed a duet. From West Huntingdon Mr. Arthur Hassel gave a reading and Misses Jean and Margaret Haggerty, Joyce Wallace and Joan McCurdy a song. Mrs. George Ashley played a piano solo. Refreshments were served.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Holden on Saturday evening included Miss Ruby Jamieson and Mr. John Nelson Reid of Frankford and Messrs. Nathan and Wally Reid of Ivanhoe.

On Wednesday evening friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Forsythe and presented them with occasional chairs. Mr. Stephen Armstrong acted as chairman for the evening. A pleasant evening of dancing and games was much enjoyed by all.

A severe epidemic of la grippe has caused discomfort to many people in the community.

With the discontinuance of maple syrup rationing many trees have been tapped but the sap run has not been large though the quality of syrup has been excellent.

During the Sunday evening service the congregation of Moira United Church presented Mr. Kenneth Stewart with an initialled club bag and a sum of money accompanied by an address read by Mr. James Vanderwater expressing the appreciation of the congregation for his ministry here during the last eight years; and best wishes for his future success in the service of the Church. At the same time the W. A. presented Mrs. Stewart with flowers and a gift of money.

ROBOT MAKES RADIOS

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop's cousin Herbit came for dinner tonight, being the same night Mr. and Mrs. Lightly had been invited, and ma was scared Mr. and Mrs. Lightly might be shocked at cousin Herbit's table manners, so ma and pop decided to make them feel better by telling them that cousin Herbit was a wealthy millionaire that ate kind of funny just to show he wasn't proud.

Being what ma told them as soon as they came in, and Mrs. Lightly said, Well, how quaint, I'm sure, and Mr. Lightly said, Most democratic, I'm sure.

Yes, he's quite a card, pop said. As a matter of fact I believe he was educated in England, at Cambridge or Wistershire or some place.

And pritty soon cousin Herbit came and got interduced to Mr. and Mrs. Lightly and they were interduced back to him, and we started to eat dinner and the ferst thing cousin Herbit did was put his elbows on the table and start to put stuff in his mouth with his knife, and Mr. Lightly winked at ma and started to eat with his own knife, saying, One thing I cant understand, is —how people can use forks as though they were knives.

You're dead right, I've saw more than one poor cuss stab himself bad, cousin Herbit said, and Mr. Lightly said, Ha ha, that's good, that's perfect.

And he laughed like anything and so did Mrs. Lightly, saying, Quaint, just too quaint.

And cousin Herbit started to dip his gravey sloppy with bread in his fingers instead of using his fork refined, and Mr. and Mrs. Lightly laughed some more and started to dip theirs the same way, and Mr. Lightly said, Do you know of any good tips on the market?

What market is that? cousin Herbit said. I dont live in this here town, but we got a super market at home that makes 2 deliveries a day and thinks nothing of it, he said.

Making Mr. and Mrs. Lightly laugh the most yet, and today Mrs. Lightly called ma up and told her what a delightful time they had meeting pop's quaint delightful cousin.

Elmira Wins O.M.H.A. Midget 'C' Championship Defeating Madoc Squad by 7-4 Score

Two Teams Played 6-6 Tie in First Game at Madoc

Waterloo, April 8 (CP)—Elmira won the O.M.H.A. midget "C" championship here last night by defeating Madoc 7-4 in the second frame of their final series. The two teams played a 6-6 tie in Madoc in the first game of their two-game, goals to count series.

A five goal outburst in the second period when they were trailing 1-0 gave the game to Elmira.

Joe Settler was outstanding for Elmira, bagging three goals and getting an assist. Every time the flashy defenceman led a rush he was dangerous. Rolly Keller, in goal, and Howard Reger, probably the smallest player on the ice also stood out.

Best for the losers was goalie Bob Borland and Wayne Brown who bagged two goals.

Although Elmira held the edge of play in the first period Madoc got the only goal with 25 seconds left when Glen Nickle started out from his own blue line swept around two Elmira players and beat Keller with a low twisting shot that caught the left bottom corner of the net.

In the second game it was Elmira all the way. They were awarded their first goal when referee Honey Kuntz called Glen Nickle for throwing his stick. Settler was given credit for the counter.

Setler put Elmira up 2-1 four minutes later when he stickhandled through the entire Madoc team split the defence and beat Borland with an ankle high shot to the left corner.

Settler Repeated

Settler repeated his second goal by again skating through the entire Madoc team and catching the right side of the net with his waist-high drive to make the count 4-1. Gord Tapp counted Elmira's fifth goal when he took Settler's passout from the right corner and shot the puck under Borland.

Wayne Brown got Madoc's second goal from a scramble in front of the Elmira net as the visitors began sending five players up on every rush. However, Elmira got it back in less than three minutes, early Weichel took Settler's pass to score.

Brown's passout from the corner hit Keller's leg and bounced in for Madoc's third goal. Weichel got Elmira's last goal. Nickle got Madoc's fourth tally only 20 seconds left.

Madoc—Goal, Borland; defence, Nickle, Brown; centre, Ron Smith; wings, Tufts, Ray Smith; subs, Forrestal, Johnston, Trumbule, Carswell, Crawford, Gray.

Elmira—Goal, Keller; defence, Beaupre, Settler; centre, Martin; wings, Ruth, Reger; subs, Trapp, Weichel, O'Kraka, Cook, Ertle.

Ed Sandford Winner of Red Tilson Trophy

Toronto, April 8 — (CP)—Big Ed Sandford, playing captain of the St. Michael's College Majors, for the fourth successive year, winners of the junior A O.H.A. championship has been awarded the "Red" Tilson Memorial Trophy for outstanding hockey performance and general all-round ability for his team during the regulation season.

Sandford will receive the trophy, presented by the Globe and Mail and Jim Coleman, sport columnist on the Toronto morning paper, at Maple Leaf Gardens during the third game of the St. Mikes-Canadiens playoff game on Wednesday. The trophy honors the memory of "Red" Tilson, outstanding junior player for the Oshawa Generals who died in the Second World War.

The high scoring Sandford was selected for the honor by a panel of sports writers who covered the junior circuit. They included George H. Campbell, Oshawa; Ken Walls, Barrie; Ivan Miller, Hamilton; Clayton Browne, St. Catharines; Larry Brain, Galt; "Chick" Appel, Stratford; Douglas Vaughan, Windsor; Steve York, Toronto Globe and Mail; Gordon Walker, Toronto Star; and A. J. "Bunny" Morganson, Toronto Telegram.

Sandford's play-making around centre ice and his sound leadership won him the honor.

SEVEN SENIOR CAGE TEAMS SEEKING HONORS

Tension of Play Tightening as Squads Square Off for Run to Wire

Toronto, April 8 (CP)—Seven senior Canadian basketball teams are looking, with fire in their eye, toward the Dominion cage crown and from coast to coast, the tension of final play is tightening.

The St. Johns from Saint John won the Maritime senior title by default from the Halifax Navy team and are waiting for a chance to slap down winners of the Ontario and Quebec finals.

The selection of a winner to meet the Saints is providing a lot of hot basketball in Montreal. The Y.M.H.A. have won their first game with University of Ottawa, after taking an easy Montreal Senior Leage champion ship. They play the second game of the total point series tonight in Montreal.

Assumption College of Windsor, perrennial contender for basketball honors, took the Ontario championship when they defeated St. Satharines Macs with two wins.

Out Winnipeg way, the St. Andrews club, Manitoba champions have fairly devoured all competition in Manitoba and took four victories from invading United States teams in exhibition tilts.

Last night they took a 63-53 victory from Alberta's Raymond Union Jacks in the first game of the Prairie playdowns. The "Jacks" were runners up to University of Alberta's Golden Bears but a stiff study program prevented the college lads from pressing on into the finals.

If the Andies win the Prairie championship they will continue westward to tangle with Vancouver Meralomas, British Columbia's champions.

Winner of the Meralomas-Prairie champions will meet the eastern champion in the west—and the wise money say you can bet it will be the Assumption College boys all the way.

Suzanne Morrow Aspiring For Medical Career

By JAMES KNACK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, April 8 —(CP)— A vivacious 16-year-old who some day hopes to use her delicate hands to wield a surgeon's scalpel with the same finesse that she now controls the blades on her feet, today was acclaimed by leading instructors as probable successor to Barbara Ann Scott as queen of the figure-skating world.

The winsome whirler who aspires to a medical career, even in preference to athletic fame, is the Toronto Skating Club's Suzanne Morrow. Entering the recent Ottawa meet "just for experience" she teamed with Wally Diestelmeyer of Kitchener and Toronto to win the North American Senior Pairs Championship.

Suzanne doesn't take skating quite as seriously as Ottawa's Barbara Ann but she wanted to meet Viscount Alexander who this year congratulated the champions, "so I had to win a title."

Unlike Barbara Ann, this five-foot, three inch miss does not devote full time to the blade art. She acquires her grace and skill in three hours daily practice compared to eight hours for the world champion. Although it could easily wreck her skating career, Suzanne is an avid rider and skier.

Donning skates for the first time only eight years ago on doctor's orders, the then frail child rapidly discovered her new talent. In three years of competitive skating she won four titles, including the Canadian junior ladies crown.

HORNETS ARE FAVORED
(By The Associated Press)

Pittsburgh Hornets, victorious in their 15 home games, will attempt to run the string to 16 tonight in the fourth game of their playoff series with Hershey Bears for the American Hockey League championship.

Sporting a 2-1 advantage in games, the Hornets will have an enhanced chance of pushing the count to 3-1 because of the probable absence of Gordie Bruce, the Bears' high-scoring right wing.

Bruce was injured in the second game last Thursday and complained of kidney pains over the weekend.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

The Stanley Cup finals series between Toronto Maple Leafs and Les Canadiens of Montreal is just what a lot of people expected it to be. Between those teams, that is. When injuries crippled Elmer Lach, Buddy O'Connor, Reardon and a few more of Les Habs, many thought it was curtains for the colorful Irwin. When Detroit buried the saucy Leafs beneath an avalanche of nine goals in their second game of their semi-final series to even the count the Daymen appeared on the way out.

* * *

But strange things happen beneath the bright lights of the hockey arenas. Rabid Toronto and Montreal fans saw their respective favorites defeather the Red Wings and declaw the Bruins respectively after the first two tilts, and have now settled back to await the payoff playoffs.

From this corner it looks as though "yer pays yer money and takes yer choice." Leafs, apparently have struck some sort of stride. They made the Redwings look like a second division squad in the last three games, and have won seven of their last eight starts. The saucy young cockerels wearing the blue and white of Toronto may de-hab the Canadiens—but, brother they'll know they've been in a hockey series.

* * *

The fireworks start tonight in Montreal with the second game also slated for the Forum and the third in Toronto come Saturday. The reason the parade starts in Montreal is that the Forum wouldn't be available if the series goes to seven games. It appears a big music festival is booked for the Montreal palais de glace for three days. The fourth game will be played in Toronto on Tuesday.

* * *

Fifth and sixth games, if necessary will be played in Montreal and Toronto respectively on April 17 and 19. The seventh should that come about, is slated for Montreal on April 22.

* * *

It will again be a case of youth versus experience. The battle-scarred veterans of the Canadiens will pit all their ice cunning against the high-flying twiglets of the Leafs, and the series should be one that rates historical record.

* * *

According to varied reports John Adams will sever his connection with the Detroit Redwings while Skipper Johnny Gottselig will relinquish the helm of the Chicago Black Hawks hockey ship. According to Dink Carroll, of the Montreal Gazette, all sorts of rumors are flying around with respect to changes in other National Hockey League Clubs. A Boston newspaper recently published an item to the effect that Dick Irvin would go to Philadelphia when Ed. Peto constructs an arena there in which he expects to house an N.H.L. Club.

* * *

When asked if it were true that he was going to Philly, the Montreal coach replied, "Leave me alone—I don't know where I'm going." As Carroll points out, he could have meant he didn't know where he was going at the moment—or two years from now.

* * *

Money has already been subscribed to build a rink in Cincinnati in which an American League team will operate. Rumors have it that Hap Day will go there. Another that Art Ross will go to Philly as general manager, while yet another has it that Frankie Boucher will be deep in the mire if he doesn't pop up with a winner next year.

* * *

Dickie Fitzgerald, and a pal, who left for their studies at Clarkson Tech, Potsdam, N'Yawk, last night, were tossing a baseball around the Armouries lawn yesterday afternoon. And Fitz appeared to be in good shape. Answering a hurried query, he told us that the baseball buckaroos in that part of the world have been practising indoors for quite some time now. "Gets a fellow into shape," he grinned.

* * *

Trenton Fliers basketball squad struck a snag on Saturday up around Windsor way when they ran into a 72-35 setback at the hands of the Windsor Alumni in the first game of a total-point two game series. The series is the semi finals for the Ontario Intermediate "B" title and the winners will meet either Timmins or Sault Ste Marie for the provincial title. Windsor, a hotbed of basketball, has produced some starry court teams during the past decade, and right now they appear to be in. They meet Trenton in the second tilt of the series at the air station on Saturday, and with a lead like that nothing but a miracle should see them eliminated.

* * *

Wilfred K. (Bucko) McDonald hockey great, and Liberal member of Parliament for Parry Sound, Ont., says this will be his last playing season. "Bucko" is currently playing for the Sundridge, Ont. Senior "B" team.

* * *

Doug Runions, who at one time played a lot of hockey here, scored two markers for the Hamilton Tigers in their 6-1 championship win over Hollinger Greenshirts in Timmins over the weekend. Bert Peer another of the hockey "ancients" also got a brace of markers for the aging gentlemen of the Hamilton hilltops. Art Child, the Tigers starry netminder, in case you're interested, once sojourned in this man's town. He went by the name of Child in those days.

* * *

Here's one for the record book—especially if you are a lover of apples. On August 20, 1936, Tony ("The Barber") De Laurentis, of Hatboro, Maine, ate 368 apples in 2 hours, about three per minute. The total time was 2 hours 19 minutes but 19 minutes was taken out by Tony because photographers wanted to keep a chart of his bulging innards.

* * *

The apples were pared and quartered. Tony grabbed one handful squashed them, poked 'em between his teeth and gulped—and so forth for those two hours. The apples weighed about three ounces each, or about 60 odd pounds in total.

* * *

To tune up for the apple eating, which apples were only a nice relish for his lunch, Tony breakfasted on 6 soft-boiled eggs, a pound of fried ham, a half-package of cereal, 3 cups of coffee and a quart of wine.

Montreal Canadiens Installed Slight Favorites to Win Stanley Cup From Toronto

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 8 — (CP) — Though the battered and tattered Montreal Canadiens should be hugging the other side of the eight ball, they still were installed as slight favorites today as they prepared to launch defence of their Stanley Cup title against Toronto Maple Leafs in the all-Canadian cup test that opens here tonight.

Dick Irvin's men, with a couple of key players on the shelf through injuries and the other nursing a variety of bruises, were quoted as five-to-six favorites over the brash young Leafs as they hitched up their pads for tonight's opener of the best-of-seven series.

Canadiens are without starry centre Elmer Lach, out for the season with a skull fracture, ace defenceman Kenny Reardon, with a toe partly hacked off, and pivotman Kenny Mosdell, whose broken arm puts him out of action until next season.

Leafs, on the other hand, have convalesced from their mid-season injuries and only defenceman Bob Goldham is missing as they enter this first all-Canadian cup final in 12 years determined to topple the high-flying crew of French and Irish who have taken the National Hockey League championship four times in a row and Lord Stanley's silverware twice in the last three tries.

The two Dominion rivals, who staged some stirring feuding during the regular season, meet here again Thursday night and then go to Toronto for games Saturday and next Tuesday as they tangle against each other for cup supremacy for the first time in their history.

Canucks, though hustling Reardon won't be back before Saturday, if then, don't place too much store in the season's records — although they were good for five wins, against three by Leafs and four ties in the 12-game regular schedule play.

Sports Roundup

By AL COLLETTI
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, April 8 —(CP)— Impeccable Walter (Good time Charley) Freedman is still remembered in sporting circles as the fellow who brought Primo Carnera from Europe in 1930 and gathered plenty of liras until others spirited da Preem to new managerial reins .... Freedman, however, had nothing to do with taking Carnera from his home-made spaghetti—Neopolitan style—last year when the Italian giant came to North America to show off his physique as a wrestler....although as a groaner Primo is earning enough to afford a verntriloquist to do his grunting for him. Freedman definitely is not concerned.

Strictly Broadway, Freedman has more important business which may keep him up nights until Kentucky Derby day....it seems when Cornish Knight sloshed over the finish line in Jamaica's fourth race Saturday, it was the 16th time Mr. Freedman had had a bet on him.

Knight of Carousel?

So when the tintagel colt won its 15th start at odds of 8-1 Freedman let out a piercing scream, reliably to have been clearly audible from the jammed Jamaica clubhouse....he displayed such enthusiasm because he is certain that the Knight will win the derby—so positive that down at Gulfstream Park this last winter he spread a sizeable bet across the board on his idol at 100, 50 and 25 to 1.... what impressed Freedman was the Spartan way the three-year-old owned by E.P. Taylor of Toronto, plowed through the mud.

If the Churchill Downs classic, over the 1 1-4-mile route, is staged in similar gooey surroundings, Cornish Knight's possibilities will be bright as he is being rated to go the route....

The former promoter doesn't claim to be an expert "horseman"—the only time he rode a horse was at Coney Island carousel some 40 years ago.

Shades of McGraw

Manager Mel Ott has revived a relic of the McGraw era to inspire his New York Giants.... during the weekend he put into effect a bonus-and-fine plan, on a test basis, and the players liked it so well that they insisted he keep it going. For example, a solo home run is worth $3, with $1 added for each runner scoring ahead of the four-bagger.... should either a batter or base runner miss a signal he is fined $2 and the failure of a batter to score a man from third calls for a $2 assessment.

London (CP)—It took 40 years and quite a few harsh words, but Croydon, Surrey now allows professional boxing within its precincts. Town councillors okayed it by 36-16 vote.

Councillor T. Kirkham said Croydon was "frightfully narrow-minded," that "we won't let people do this and we won't let them do that" and Croydon is the most disgraceful borough I know in the British Isles when it comes to attracting people to the town."

Alderman James Marshall backed him up, noted amateur boxing was allowed and declared he had found the "simon-pure" brand "more gory than the professional."

Alderman H. S. Izzett then had his say. He was "surprised" at Alderman Marshall's remarks and, although, he had never been to a pro fight he had heard the matches broadcast.

"I think the excitement and the noise that goes on is terrible. You can hear them egging each other on to do damage to one another.

"It must be the most unelevating spectacle and I hope we shall never see that sort of thing in Croydon."

Just before the vote, Alderman A. L. Boddington accused Izzett of talking "a lot of tripe" and probably clinched the "pro" vote by saying boxing is a great sport and "typically British."

There was a bit of a to-do when Referee R. N. Porter of Darlington was conked by a brick after the Doncaster Rovers-Gateshead English football league, northern section game.

But the Doncaster fans were "exonerated" when an official report said the brick was dislodged by the crowd leaning against a wall near the dressing room.

Porter is recovering in hospital.

Just at the time when English league footballers were wrangling over wages, a special meeting of the Southern League executive adopted a sky-is-the-limit policy. Officials felt that if a player is worth £50 ($200) a week, and his club can afford to pay the price, it is a matter between club and player.

The Southern League is not affiliated with the Football Association.

Halifax, April 8 — (CP) —City fathers here are casting a speculative eye at a squat edifice which it is reported, has possibilities of becoming one of the most remunerative buildings in Halifax—the Forum, scene of local hockey battles.

The city already owns the 6,000-seat cavern, and perhaps it will own a hockey team as well next season.

When the Forum's ice was rolled up for the year recently, it was announced that $17,000 profit had accumulated from 4½ months' operation. This was gratifying to all concerned, especially since Halifax's entry in the Maritime Big Four — Crescents — were a source of continual trial and grief to fans because of their consistent habitation of league dungeons.

When Mayor J. E. (Gee) Ahern —a former sportswriter — announced the Forum's profit he commented pensively that had Crescents reached Maritime finals profits would have been "enormous."

Evidently the mayor has already discussed the matter more fully for Alex (Halifax Herald) Nickerson reports that the city will see to it next year that its entry is strong — even if it has to own the entry itself. Alex says:

" . . . They have called a meeting of all parties interested in entering a Halifax club in the Big Four. The meeting is scheduled for Wednesday, April 9, in city hall. They will ask for facts and figures — a definite guarantee that the city will be represented by the strongest possible club."

Not so Late

With Maritime champion Moncton Hawks scheduled to continue Allan Cup campaign against Hamilton Tigers, Ontario champs, tomorrow at Hamilton, Don (Moncton Transcript) Fay keeps his eye on the C.A.H.A. — and he doesn't always like what he sees.

"We note with interest the special permission granted to Winnipeg Flyers by C.A.H.A. for replacement of players at this late date in Allan Cup competition," Don says.

"Two players from Winnipeg Stylists have been sanctioned to join Flyers, finalists for the western title, who are badly crippled by injuries . . .

"We wonder if in a similar situation, such consideration would be given to a Maritime team. When several of the Moncton Hawks were badly battered after a rugged series with Glace Bay Miners for Maritime hockey supremacy, it was a matter of thumbs down from C.A.H.A. officials . . .

"It appears to be a question of pressure . . . and from whence requests are made whether-or not favors are granted by C.A.H.A."

Punch Broadbent's Goal Against Edmonton Biggest Thrill for Tommy Gorman

Claims Ottawa's "Super Six" One of the Great Teams in Stanley Cup Play

Written for The Canadian Press
By TOMMY GORMAN

Ottawa, April 8 — (CP)—When it's Stanley Cup playoff time and you're after thrills the boys will have to go some to produce the excitement and hockey glory of Ottawa's famous "Super Six," the Senators who travelled 6,000 miles to bring home the Stanley Cup in 1923.

Sure, it's a long way back to that series between Ottawa and Edmonton at Vancouver but it is still my greatest thrill, the way the Super Six beat back Edmonton after eliminating Vancouver in the first round.

We won the first game 2-1 on Cy Denenny's goal in overtime and then faced the powerful Eskimos two nights later in the deciding match. The Eskimos were really strong with such great players as "Bullet Joe" Simpson and Duke Keats, then at the peak of their form.

Broadbent Scores Winner

The final was a terrific battle and the winning goal was scored by Harry (Punch) Broadbent on a high shot from the right wing which scored before Hal Winkler had time to move in the Edmonton net.

That was the real top-notcher, that game, and it won the series and world's championship. We had only seven men left for the final game. And that game, in which Clint Benedict obtained a shut-out, was the game in which Frank (King) Clancy played every position, even going into Ottawa Senators' nets when Benedict received a two-minute penalty in the third period.

Other playoff thrills? Many of them. There was the night in Chicago (Gorman coached Chicago in 1934) when Mush March scored the Stanley Cup-winning goal against Detroit. One year later (Gorman was coaching Montreal Maroons by now) Baldy Northcott, in a heart-breaking overtime game took a pass from Bob Gracie and eliminated Chicago which paved the way for my second Stanley Cup in two consecutive seasons. One week later Dave Trottier won the Stanley Cup for us with an overtime goal against Toronto Maple Leafs.

But I'll still take that Punch Broadbent goal on that wild 1923 night in Vancouver when Senators lived up to their name of the Super Six.

ST. MIKES BEAT JR. CANADIENS BY 5 TO 1 COUNT

Irish Squad Holds 2-0 Lead in Games and Need Only One More Wednesday

Montreal, April 8—(CP)—With a 5-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens here last night, Toronto St. Michael's Majors took hold of a top-heavy 2-0 lead in games in the Eastern Canada best-of-five final and seem certain to wrap up the series three straight in Toronto tomorrow night.

The powerful "Irish" aggregation displayed too much speed and polish for the injury-riddled Montrealers, who were without the services of Howie Morenz and who lost defenceman "Jolting" Joe Lepine early in the game. Lepine appeared on the ice for a few minutes in the first period, but was forced to retire after aggravating a shoulder injury suffered at Toronto Saturday.

Joe Primeau's boys went ahead 1-0 in the second minute of the first period and held command throughout, appearing to take things easy although Canadiens charged dangerously and worried Howie Harvey in the Toronto cage Harvey was brilliant as usual, while Roy Schurrah at the other end of the rink fanned on three easy goals.

St. Michael's scoring was spread out with Harry Psutka, Bob Paul, Ed Harrison, Fleming Mackell and Les Costello notching a goal each. Montreal's lone score was tallied by shifty Fred Denny, who also had three other great chances.

BRANDON ELKS NEED ONE GAME

Regina, April 8 — (CP)—Brandon Elks have only to squeeze out a tie with Moose Jaw Canucks here tonight in the sixth game of their best-of-seven Western Canada junior hockey final to capture the title and the Abbott Cup. At present the Elks hold a 3-1 lead in games with one game tied.

The Canucks, who like Brandon go into the fray with all players on deck, gained their only victory in the fourth game of the series when Metro (Marvellous) Prystal showed his old streak of mid-season form to spark them home 5-3.

The Canuck players remained in Moose Jaw yesterday, still confident they could erase the Brandon club's overwhelming lead.

Meanwhile, tickets for tonight's game here were selling fast, only 100 remaining three hours after sales wickets opened. By game time it was expected that 2,000 standing-room-only fans would be accommodated in the arena in addition to the 5,000 holding seat tickets.

Metz Requests Investigation Against Corcoran

(By The Canadian Press).

Dick Metz, veteran of 20 years gofling competition, has requested a formal investigation of his recent one-punch altercation with Fred Corcoran, Professional Golf Association tournament manager. Metz has asked P.G.A. President Ed Dudley that the association's executive committee conduct a hearing.

Corcoran, floored by Metz after an argument as an old feud between the two flared anew, has charged that he was the victim of a "sneak attack."

Babe Ruth, former Major League slugger, has agreed to become a consultant to the Ford Motor Company in connection with the American Legión junior baseball program sponsored by the company.

Gerard Cote of St. Hyacinthe, Que., three-time winner of the Boston A. A. Marathon, has filed his entry for the 51st annual 26-mile run again this year. He holds the course record of 2 hours, 28:28 3/5.

Col. Matt J. Winn, who will be 86 next June, was re-elected president of the American Turf Association. He has headed the group since it was organized in 1928.

Aurel Joliat will be honored at the Montreal forum April 17 with a scroll commemorating his selection to hockey's Hall of Fame. The ceremony will take place during the Montreal-Toronto Stanley Cup playoff game.

Quebec Montagnards To Operate in Loop

Quebec, April 8 — (CP)—Quebec Montagnards, this city's representative in the Quebec Senior Lacrosse League, will continue to operate this year, it was announced yesterday following an emergency meeting that ironed out previous difficulties between club officials and directors of the municipally-owned Coliseum, home grounds of the Montagnards.

Last week, J. A. Lapointe, owner of the club, announced that the Montagnards would have to withdraw from the league because they were unable to agree with Coliseum officials concerning schedules, training sites and other matters.

The Quebec team, last year's league champions who went down to defeat at the hands of St. Catharines Athletics in the Dominion semi-finals, will open their season here April 27 against Shawinigan Falls Cataracts.

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 10

Before she could answer, he kissed her lightly on the lips and turned and left her. He did not glance back.

She thought, "There goes Clive. I'll never see him again because I can't meet his terms and he doesn't want to see me again unless I do."

Would she ever want to call him back? She could answer vehemently "No!" Now, all the while knowing that no answer she gave today would stand a year from now. Of all the things she had learned since the divorce perhaps that which most deeply impressed her was that nothing and no one ever remains the same.

Echoing through her mind as it had been and as it would from time to time in the future were Clive's intense words, "You have lived with love. Do you think now that you can live without it?"

Sitting in Freda's lovely garden the following day while Freda knitted a sweater for her son to take to camp, Carol told her about Clive.

"And you didn't feel—cheap?" Freda asked.

Carol shook her head. "I didn't feel half as cheap as I did that night at the club, as cheap as Bill made me feel, the last person I'd have ever thought would cheapen me."

Freda said soberly. "Clive is right, darling. A woman who has never been married and who consequently has never lived with a man is much more likely to accept a poor substitute for the love than a woman who has had the real thing. It's like stopping the flow of an artery. And you can't live without it, Carol. You can't escape it. As much trouble as love is to women and men, without it they're like trees without sap. The tired business man is never too tired to look at a pretty woman and—well, tired housewives go to the movies."

Carol said, "And divorcees go on cruises and meet men like Clive."

"He's attractive to you, isn't he?"

Carol looked at her honestly. "You feel as if you'd like to take his hands so that his great vitality would pour into you." Again she shook her fair head slowly. "When you are younger, you mistake that feeling, that attraction for love. You think you're in love with a man who can make you feel like that, stimulate you like that. Perhaps in the beginning that's all I felt for Bill, a great stimulation and attraction. And while marriage lessens the stimulation, it brings something else—that's better."

Freda glanced up. "That's why people who aren't married can't understand when the bloom wears off why the marriage lasts. That's probably what your attractive Clive doesn't understand and why he hasn't married. There are some people who want only the bloom." Looking back at her knitting, she said, "You're going to Lillian and Browne's party with Scott, aren't you?"

Carol nodded. "Yes."

Freda said, "I like Scott and maybe I should keep my mouth shut. But..." She looked up again her large, dark eyes meeting Carol's blue ones. "But.. I'd rather know a man's intentions as you know Clive's than not to know them as you don't know Scott's. I knew I should keep my mouth shut..."

Carol smiled. "Why should you?"

"Because someone sitting on the sidelines can get the wrong slant. I may be wrong about Scott. I like him but—oh, darn it! Why did I begin this? All right, I'll tell you. Do you know that every time the four of us are out together, Ian always pays the check? When the time comes to pay, Scott is always the little boy who isn't there. I don't suppose you've noticed it and Ian wishes I hadn't. It isn't the money. You know that. It's just that if he avoids meeting small obligations, he'll avoid meeting big ones."

"Bill...Did he."

"Never. He and Ian used to squabble over it and nearly pull it apart over the table. Oh, Carol, why did I bring it up?" Scott has been a dear to you."

"I'm glad you told me, Freda."

W. J. Crane and Earl Sawyer took to their boat in an attempt to get to their homes in the south ward when flood waters from the Grand River inundated the southern half of Grand Valley yesterday afternoon. They were half way home when dynamite blasts down river set the waters free and left them stranded on bare pavement.

"For all I know he's terribly in love with you."

If he were in love with her, he had not indicated it either by word or gesture. Their friendship had been as it had always been—as though at any moment Bill would join them. She had gone to plays and concerts and movies with Scott, had dined with him and played bridge with him and Freda and Ian. Usually they had been with Freda and Ian and consequently had been alone only the little while it took to drive Carol to her apartment.

They had never discussed anything except the most superficial things, and there had been those long, familiar silences between them. Scott's innermost thoughts and plans he divulged to no one. But thoughts and plans there were, she was certain. Behind those deep, dark, brooding eyes there was certainly no vacuum.

Freda thought, "I don't want her to marry Scott just because he's convenient. I've nothing really against him except that he isn't good enough for her. Somehow he's inadequate. But he's the kind who'll bide his time and wait, all according to plan, and catch her in a weak, lonely moment."

Freda, said, "I'm sorry. It was a pretty thing to bring up. Forget it. But you won't. I know you. You have the memory of an elephant. Tell me some more about Clive." She smiled, a charming, impudent smile. "I'm just a little housewife who never meets a man like Clive and who probably wouldn't know how to cope with him if she did. But I'd like to meet him with you. He may be the answer to a maiden's prayer, conceited and arrogant and all that; but I'll stick to it that he's a man of good taste in women. Don't be fooled, darling. Any man who takes the trouble to come here all the way from New York to see a woman hasn't completely passed out of the picture. He hasn't given you up as a lost cause. I'll make a little bet with you. He challenged you—and you challenged him. It isn't finished. It probably hasn't even begun."

Reclining her head on the back of the white wicker chair, she chuckled again. "Funny, we've been talking about men and love and marriage. That's what all women talk about when they get together. Do men? You bet your life they don't! Ian told me once that he'd like to be invisible and hear a group of women talking. I told him that what he'd get out of it was the knowledge that women are nearly always afraid of losing what they have. Women have so much more to lose than men have. I suppose that's what makes us petty and catty."

Carol said, "Bill lost nothing."

Freda's dark eyes quickened. "I wonder. That's one way of looking at it. True, he didn't lose his job or his friends or his place in the community—as you have. But Bill has lost a driving force, Carol. You...You helped him and never let him know how much. I've heard you put words in his mouth when he couldn't think of the right words. I've heard you make statements and a week later I've heard Bill say the same things, as though it was his idea. Do you think that Ian and I had any difficulty in making a choice between you? Ian is for you. He always has been. He knows, as too few people know, that Bill would have remained an obscure clerk if it hadn't been for you. All of which doesn't alter or change anything for you now.

"No...To all appearances Bill hasn't lost. He's gained. He has a wife whose mother was presented at the English court. So what? But he has lost a part of his thinking apparatus—you—that he's depended on for seven years. There's no emotion or sentimentality involved in that statement. It's a fact. Bill has lost part of his mentality. Maybe I'm wrong, but as times goes on that's what he's going to miss most. And as times goes on I'd like to see you fall so much in love with somebody it would make you dizzy!"

"Do you think it will be Clive?" Carol was startled the moment she asked it. Why Clive? Why not Scott?

Freda smiled. "I don't know. But I do know it isn't finished with him. And I'll still make a bet with you."

Carol smiled. "No bets...and I'm going home."

"No bets and you are not, baby. You're staying for dinner. Ian wants to know why the dickens you won't have a meal with us. He's beginning to think there's something wrong with our food and the cook should be fired. Ian .. God bless him...I love him."

Scott was dressing for Lillian and Browne's party in the small, sparsely furnished bedroom of the small apartment he shared with Hilda, his sister and his senior by some thirteen years. Wearing his white dinner jacket, he stood before the mirror of the old-fashioned dresser and meticulously brushed his dark hair. His hands moved slowly though the hour was growing late, but Scott was never known to be on time and his friends had formed the habit of telling him to come half an hour before they really wanted him.

Other than a photograph of a blonde girl with a laughing, teasing face, there was nothing in the room, furnished with a single bed, the dresser, a table which served as a desk and a comfortable old chair sadly in need of new covering, to give it any identity. It might have been a cheap hotel room or a room in a boarding house, waiting for its next temporary occupant. It was a drab room without personality and without comfort.

Scott never thought of the room, though occasionally he contemplated the photograph and told himself he'd put it out of sight. It had been four years since he had seen Suzanne. Four years since he had been graduated from a western university and Suzanne, gay but elusive, had married someone else and he, Scott, had returned to Clinton with only the photograph to remind him of the only love of his life. He had never told anyone about Suzanne because it embarrassed him to speak of his feelings.

NO SUSPECTS FOUND

London, Ont., April 8 —(CP)— Latest in a series of night prowler complaints last night sent police radio cars over a wide area searching for a man who allegedly tried to molest Mrs. Margaret Isen and her 13-year-old daughter, Vera, of London, Ont. No suspects were found.

Drew Declares Proposals Planned Attack on Rights

Toronto, April 8 —(CP)— In a statement on Dominion-Provincial relations Premier Drew of Ontario said last night that in declining to sign new tax agreements with Ottawa, the provincial governments of Nova Scotia, Quebec and Ontario "are making a stand for constitutional democracy against those who believe in absolutism, masquerading under the cloak of liberalism or any other names."

"Political blackmail" was the term he used to describe "statements on behalf of the federal government that we are blocking the general welfare of the people of Canada by our refusal to submit to their terms."

He emphasized that Ontario never at any time had refused to enter into a new tax agreement with Ottawa, nor had it refused to abandon the great fields of personal income and corporation tax. A settlement of the differences between the province and the Dominion presented no serious problem "if the Dominion government had not been determined to achieve something beyond the adjustment of taxes."

The Dominion government had refused to hold another general conference to settle these differences, and had refused even to consider Ontario's proposals "which imposed a smaller burden on the Dominion treasury than they have already offered to assume, and which at the same time assured much more equitable treatment for all the provinces."

Ottawa Not Concerned.

Premier Drew declared, in his speech over an Ontario network of the CBC, that "the only possible answer is that they were not concerned about financial details. They were determined, and still are determined, to establish absolute centralized power while at the same time professing their belief in the federal system of government."

If the Ontario government had accepted the federal tax proposals the head of an average family of five would have to pay an additional $148 above all present taxes, Premier Drew said. The federal health, social security and public construction programs were to be financed by separate taxes.

"They would like you to forget that as an inseparable part of their proposals the provinces were to agree to an additional income tax of five per cent, payable on all incomes without exemption of any kind, plus a poll tax on every man, woman and child in Ontario, 16 years or over, at an estimated figure of $12 per capita."

Nine Persons Lose Their Lives In Bus Crash

Seattle, April 8 —(AP)— Nine persons lost their lives last night when a heavy North Coast Lines bus collided with an oil truck and then plunged into the Duwamish River, running alongside the Pacific Highway.

Twelve other passengers and the bus driver, Melvin D. Long, 22, of Olympia, Wash., survived, some with severe but none with critical injuries.

Heroic rescue work by eyewitnesses and passing motorists, who waded into the river and climbed atop the two-thirds submerged bus, prevented a heavier death toll.

The first rescuers at the scene hacked holes into the roof to pull to safety frightened passengers who were fighting for aid inside the wreckage.

The bus driver escaped by kicking out the windshield while a number of men got out without assistance and clung to driftwood in the river until rescued.

Police worked in a heavy rain with artificial respiration and pulmotors to revive passengers as they were removed from the river.

The bus continued on a short way after the collision, then veered to the left, snapped off a telephone pole, hurtled a 15-foot high bank and plunged into the river, finally ending up against pilings 25 feet out.

The front of the bus was crushed in like an eggshell for about four feet. The heavy vehicle floated a minute or two in the water while those trapped inside fought to escape.

Too Many Dollars Being Spent On U.S. Tobacco

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 8 —(CP)— Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who looks well with a cigar, smokes little these days and might find his job at the country's balance book easier if others would follow his example or switch from Virginia brands.

Everyone in the United Kingdom knows that too many precious dollars are being spent on United States tobacco when they should be invested in machinery and materials that will speed Britain's recovery. But Britons go on smoking Virginia cigaretes and here's the sad story:

Total tobacco imports in 1946 were valued at £65,622,000 ($262,488,000), of which £55,168,000 came from the United States and £4,300,000 from Southern Rhodesia, the main Commonwealth supplier. Canada sold tobacco worth £1,167,000 while Turkey and Greece together sold only £1,011,000.

Revenue from tobacco in the fiscal year just ended probably will be £425,000,000. Of £548,000,000 spent by consumers on tobacco in 1945, £409,000,000 or nearly 16 shillings in every pound went to the exchequer.

Taxation of tobacco always has been high but even after the First World War 20 cigarettes could be bought for a shilling. Now they cost 2s 4d.

Tobacco is important to morale. Tobacco is one of the few remaining luxuries in Britain and there are tender memories of Canadian cigarets and the servicemen who gave them away so freely.

Morale will not be forgotten by Dalton in adjustments in taxation, but some action sooner or later is expected to bring down the tobacco bill as expressed in dollars.

Move Residents Within 1,000 Yds. Of Ammunition

Tientsin, April 8 — (AP) —The Chinese government Monday ordered evacuation of all residents within 1,000 yards of the marine ammunition dump at Hsinho, where a surprise Communist attack Friday night killed five Americans.

A Marine request to extend United States defence lines to that radius was approved.

The stored munitions were mostly heavy artillery shells but the raiders loaded some of them on pack animals. They escaped with some shells and blew up some ammunition before they withdrew.

Approximately 80 marine reinforcements were summoned from Tangku, five miles away. Land mines and a road ambush delayed them and wounded 16, but all are believed recovering.

A Chinese government battalion went after the Communist raiders, who left six of their number dead and were believed to have approximately 100 wounded.

NEW FLOODS IN BRITAIN

London, April 8 —(Reuters)— New floods rising with spring tides hit Britain last night before the country caught its breath or counted damage from the last soaking. As the people, whose four-day Easter holiday brought no respite from gloomy weather, returned home on vacation trains, nature was playing more havoc with their food supply.

Labor Spokesmen Vigorously Protest New Federal Order

(By The Canadian Press)

Labor spokesmen today were on record with vigorous protest against the new federal order permitting a 10 per cent increase in domestic rentals. Real estate men countered that to permit construction of new homes for rental the increase should be nearer 40 per cent.

Pat Conroy, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Congress of Labor, said at Ottawa that the government move had "taken another slice off the real earnings of Canadian workers." He considered it an "open invitation" to labor to use whatever means it commanded to protect living standards. Such a course could lead only to "widespread industrial strife for which the government must accept responsibility."

At Vancouver, Daniel O'Brien, regional director of the C. C. L., warned that increased rentals in conjunction with a 49 per cent rise in food prices since 1939, and new restrictive labor legislation, would bring an immediate demand for wage increases.

Building Costs Up

The real estate operators' viewpoint in Toronto was expressed by H. L. Rogers who said that residential rentals would have to rise 40 per cent over present levels before it would be worthwhile building houses to rent. He pointed out that the wholesale price index for building materials now was 151.5 points compared with 89 points in 1939, on the basis that 1926 equals 100.

One spokesman for tenants was Clarence Rosenhek, honorary legal adviser to the Montreal Tenants' Association, who said the increase would "hit the vast majority of tenants much harder than the government thinks" and would "spark new industrial wage demands and new economic dislocation."

Only one section of the community welcomed the announcement without reservations. These were hotel operators, who nevertheless were cautious in statements regarding increases in room rentals. Generally across the country an increase of 10 per cent in room rates seems likely.

RUSSIANS BUILD DAMS TO STEM FLOODS

London, April 8 —(Reuters)— With the waters of the River Volga at their highest level since 1939, Moscow radio said last night that several thousand people of Kalinin, 100 miles northwest of Moscow, have built dams to stem floods which threaten the centre of the town.

Why "Buy It Installed" Makes Sense in Plumbing, Heating and Air-Conditioning Purchases

Would you purchase a set of teeth from a mail order catalogue, and then take them to your dentist and have him put them in?. Would you order a mail-order suit and then have your own tailor fix the places where it fit too quick? Well, products which require installing skill, or which must fit existing dimensions are best bought locally. Otherwise you are likely to get an expensive disappointment.

PLUMBING, HEATING and AIR-CONDITIONING products belong in this class, and every item should be selected in the light of precise dimensions, capacities or special characteristics.

When you "buy it installed" you not only buy a product, but also the service that product gives. In the long run, it is cheaper to "buy it installed."

Let us expalin exactly WHY it's cheaper. And let us quote you our "installed price" on your new furnace, oil burner or air-conditioning system. We would also like to tell you about our new Home Appliance Budget Plan .. Call 1397 today and we will be happy to give you complete information.

MARSHALL PROPOSES NEW BOUNDARY PROGRAM

Canadian Canners Plant at Brighton Destroyed by Fire

Large Quantity Canned Goods Burned; $200,000 Loss

The Canadian Canners Ltd. canning plant at Brighton, 20 miles west of Belleville, is a smouldering mass of ruin today following the six hour fire which Tuesday swept through the large frame structure causing damage estimated at upwards of $200,000.

Everything connected with the canning factory plant was destroyed with the exception of the apple evaporator at the northeast end and the company office and weigh scales.

Discovered shortly after ten o'clock in the morning the fire was stated to have started in a small warehouse at the extreme west end of the plant. A stiff breeze blowing from the southwest drove the flames directly through the plant despite the efforts of members of four fire departments.

Fighting the blaze was the Brighton Fire Department, assisted by the Trenton department, the Trenton R.C.A.F. pumper and firemen from Colborne.

Employ 150 Residents.

Providing seasonal employment for upwards of 150 Brighton residents during the operating season, the Brighton canning factory processed tomatoes and apples from the surrounding district. Corn and peas were not handled, it was stated.

Besides the building and its entire equipment, a considerable quantity of canned goods, including tomatoes, tomato and apple juice and evaporated apples were lost in the blaze. Gallon cans of tomato and apple juice exploding from the heat frequently leaped 30 feet into the air.

Last part of the factory to burn was a warehouse in which apple pulp was stored in readiness for shipment to the United States. Throughout the afternoon firemen concentrated their efforts onto this building to prevent the spread of the flames to the apple evaporator building nearby.

Furniture Moved.

Brighton residents whose homes were directly in the path of the flames took no chances and furniture was taken out of houses in readiness for moving out of the danger zone. Roofs were kept drenched and the residences did not catch fire.

Mrs. William Fritz, who with her husband lives in a house owned by the canning factory, suffered a heart attack from the excitement and was taken to a doctor. Two firemen were slightly injured by flying glass, while the Brighton Chamber of Commerce served hot coffee and buns to fire fighters.

SERIOUSLY INJURED

Brockville, April 9 (CP)—Gerald Morrison, 27, district farmer was seriously injured late yesterday when he fell backwards into a circular saw he was operating. He suffered a wound under his left shoulder-blade. His condition today was reported improving.

BIND LADY ILCHESTER STEAL PART OF JEWELS

Dorchester, Dorset, Eng., April 9 (AP)—Three burglars bound 72-year-old Lady Ilchester today and stole part of her large collection of jewels.

Her world-famous string of black pearls, however, was not taken. Relatives estimated the loot was worth about £2,000 ($8,000).

Lady Ilchester, who had been ill for two weeks after a heart attack, untied herself after a two-hour struggle and summoned police.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 9—(CP)—Synopsis at 7:30 a.m.—There is continuous rain this morning from the lower lakes southward to Virginia, and many sections of Southern Ontario have had showers of light rain or snow. However, these are expected to end during the morning. A high pressure area now centred west of Lake Michigan is moving eastward. A new disturbance now developing in Southwestern Colorado is expected to bring more rain to Southwestern Ontario late Thursday.

British Fighter Planes Being Flown to Turkey

London, April 9 — (Reuters) — The Daily Graphic reported today that "hundreds of British fighter planes are being flown to Turkey." "Decision to allow Turkey to purchase the machines is believed to be directly connected with President Truman's proposed loan of $100,000,000."

Henry Ford's Body Lies in State At Greenfield

Detroit, April 9 — (AP)—The humble matched strides with the proud today past the bier of Henry Ford, whose industrial genius captured the imagination of the world.

The family, its grief at his sudden death locked in the heart, invited the public to share its final respects to Ford, who succumbed Monday night of a cerebral hemorrhage at the age of 83.

They were to come today, the grimy mechanic from the automotive plant, the greying men and women who followed his fabulous rise from the obscurity of a farm near Detroit, and the titans of industry to pay tribute to a dangerous but respected foe.

The body was to lie in state until tonight at Greenfield Village, amid the mementoes of Ford's full and colorful life.

At midnight tonight, the vast Ford industrial empire will halt activity and only the lamps of roving watchmen will light the plants across the United States and across the world.

Ernest R. Beech, executive vice president of the Ford Motor Company, said production will not resume until midnight Thursday in respect to the tall, angular man who built a $100,000 firm into an $800,000,000 industrial colossus.

On Thursday, Henry Ford will be borne to downtown Detroit for the last time for funeral services at St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral on Woodward Avenue, the street whose dust he churned half a century ago with his first automobile.

Again the family has invited the public to participate in final homage.

40 Persons Killed In Casablanca Clash

Paris, April 9 — (Reuters) — About 40 persons were killed in a clash between Moroccans and Senegalese soldiers in Casablanca, French Morocco, yesterday, an Agence France-Presse dispatch reported today.

Senegalese and Moroccans began fighting after a quarrel between a Senegalese soldier and a Moroccan woman, reports said.

Attacked by several Moroccans, the soldier was reinforced by other Senegalese. They fetched guns from their nearby barracks and started firing wildly on the crowd which had gathered.

LEO DUROCHER SUSPENDED YEAR BY COMMISSIONER

Chuck Dressen of New York Yanks Suspended For 30 Days Beginning April 15th

Cincinnati, April 9—(AP)—Leo Durocher, manager of Brooklyn Dodgers in the National League, today was suspended for the 1947 season by Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

Chuck Dressen, former coach of the Dodgers and now a member of the New York Yankee coaching staff, was suspended for 30 days beginning April 15.

The Brooklyn club and the New York Yankee club each was fined $2,000.

Harold Parrott, travelling secretary of the Brooklyn team, was fined $500.

The actions were taken as a result of an investigation made by Chandler after Larry McPhail of the New York American League club brought charges of defamation against Durocher and Branch Rickey, head of the Brooklyn club.

The commissioner found that two alleged gamblers were not sitting in a box with MacPhail during a recent baseball game in Havana.

Dressen's suspension, it developed, was the result of his leaving the Dodger club to work for the Yankees. Chandler said he was convinced that the coach had agreed to remain with Rickey for two more years, although no formal contract had been signed.

Not Up To Standards Required

"Durocher has not measured up to the standards expected or required of managers of our baseball teams," Chandler said in his finding.

"As a result of the accumulated unpleasant incidents in which he has been involved, which the commissioner construes as detrimental to baseball, Manager Durocher is hereby suspended from participating in professional baseball for the 1947 season."

New York, April 9. (AP) — President Branch Rickey of Brooklyn Dodgers apparently was too stunned today at notification of Leo Durocher's suspension as manager to issue an immediate statement.

He declined to talk to newspaper men by phone, but his assistants said Rickey probably would have something to say later in the day and might announce a manager to take Durocher's place this season.

The leading candidate appeared to be Ray Blades, Dodger coach, though there was certain to be strong support for Dixie Walker, the club's veteran outfielder.

Chandler Outlines Case

The commissioner said that in an article appearing in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle under Durocher's name, but actually written by Parrot, the Brooklyn Manager said McPhail tried to get him to become manager of the Yankees.

In the article, March 3, Chandler said Durocher declared that after MacPhail failed to sign him as manager of the Yankees "He resolved to knock me, and to make life as hard as possible for me—but surely people must recognize that it is the same old MacPhail."

Britain Will Begin Experiments In Underground Gasification of Coal

(By MONTY RADULOVIC)

London, April 9 — (Reuters) — Experiments in underground gasification — setting fire to coal deposits in uneconomic mines in order to make gas — are to start in Britain in the near future.

These experiments will bring Britain in line with the Soviet Union and the United States, where gasification has been carried out successfully for many years in Siberia and Alabama.

Fuel Minister Shinwell has just received the report of a special committee set up a year ago to investigate the possibilities of large scale gasification, first tried out in Britain 66 years ago.

The principle of underground gasification is that unmined coal should be partly burned to carbon monoxide while the air is enriched with oxygen. The establishment principles of gas producer operation, therefore, apply to underground gasification.

Those operations underground would have to perform tasks similar to those of refinery attendants and others engaged in controlling synthetic chemical plants. Thus far the new "miner" would work in a white coat, perhaps sitting in an office similar to a modern power station control room surrounded by dials and levers controlling distant valves.

U.S. at Disadvantage When A-Secret Known Times Quotes Document

New York, April 9 — (CP) — The New York Times in a Washington dispatch says today that a new War Department blueprint for National Defence holds that after six years following adoption of the United States' plan for international control of atomic energy other countries would be on an equal footing to wage atomic war.

The Times quoted a document, described as revolutionary, prepared for the legislative reference service of the Library of Congress which is studying the implications of atomic power for Congress.

The document, the Times declared, envisages the United States at a great disadvantage after other countries get the atomic bomb "know-how." This warning is based on the thesis that as a democracy the United States cannot spring into a surprise defensive war.

The Times added:

"The document pleads for the cultivation of Allies for two reasons: They would help absorb atomic attacks and help the United States compensate for the loss of historic 'cushion time.' This country has had this reserve of time in past war but would not have it in atomic war."

Copies of the document, which includes the effect of atomic power on the United States Navy, are in the hands of certain members of Congress, the Times said. A decision is to be made soon whether to adopt the views in the study and publish them as a Congressional document.

MEDIATORS NEAR SETTLEMENT IN TELEPHONE STRIKE

Every Indication, However, Strike Will Continue for Another 24 Hours

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, April 9 — (AP) — Negotiations in the telephone strike broke up an eight-hour session early today with word that a key unit in the vast Bell system and its striking workers are close to agreement.

All indications were that the cross-country shutdown — called to enforce demands for a $12 weekly increase and other concessions — would continue for at least another 24 hours, however.

Representatives of the company, union and the United States government conciliation service said at the end of a conference which lasted until 4 a.m. that they had come close to reaching agreement on disputed issues between the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's long lines division and the American Union of Telephone Workers.

The union is an important segment of the striking National Federation of Telephone Workers.

The assistant Secretary of Labor, John W. Gibson, and conciliation director Edgar L. Warren told reporters: "We have got the printing press going" but that the meeting had to be recessed until 10 a.m.

His remark about the "printing press" was taken to mean that at least the outline of an agreement was being put into writing. He did not elaborate.

John J. Moran, president of the Long Lines Union of 20,000 workers, said "We do not have anything to present to the policy committee as yet." but he nodded when reporters asked whether the strike might be ended in 24 hours.

Settlement of the dispute on the Long Lines division, which includes the country-wide long distance operations of A. T. & T., "would not end the strike," Moran said.

"We are just one of the organizations," he continued. "All the organizations (in the N. F. T. W.) have to agree before the strike can be called off."

KING CHRISTIANS STRENGTH IS FAIRLY SATISFACTORY

Copenhagen, April 9 (AP)—An official bulletin today from Amalienborg Castle said King Christian X, stricken with a severe heart attack Sunday, "is still very tired, but his strength is fairly satisfactory."

Family Life Breaking Down All Over World Says Kayler of C.A.S.

Kitchener, April 9 — (CP) — K. D. Kayler, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society here, said last night that "family life is breaking down all over the world," adding that one family in every 20 in Waterloo county is listed in his society's records.

He said that of 477 children being watched by the Kitchener branch, 128 were born to unmarried mothers and more than 50 divorces are coming up in the Spring Assizes here.

Ontario spent $2,500,000 to care for 45,000 children through the Children's Aid Society in 1946.

"This enemy within our borders can do more harm than the enemy of the last war," he said.

ARMY CHANGES WILL MERGE TWO MAJOR BRANCHES

Quartermaster-General and Master-General of Ordnance Branches Eventually Fused

Ottawa, April 9 (CP)—The army announced today that its efforts at co-ordination have resulted in a reorganization which eventually will merge two of its major branches into a single section that will be considerably larger than any other in the land force.

Affected are the supply, transport, works and construction, development and repair sections and the reorganization is aimed at the eventual fusion of the Quartermaster-General and Master-General of the Ordnance Branches with Maj.-Gen. N. E. Rodger, C.B.E., of Amherst, N.S., the present Quartermaster-General, as Chief. His chief aides, Brig. George Kitching, O.B.E., D.S.O., and Brig. J. A. W. Bennett, C.B.E., will assist in the immediate control of the present Q.M.G. and M.G.O. functions respectively.

The Army said the change had been brought about by three factors "which make it desirable for one man to co-ordinate the responsibility of the two branches." They are:

1. The former M.G.O., Maj.-Gen. J. H. MacQueen, C.B.E., has been appointed President of Canadian Arsenals Limited, a Crown corporation which works closely with the forces.

2. Great quantities of wartime buildings and equipment have been disposed of, with a resultant lightening of the load on the two branches.

3. The job of returning soldiers, dependents and equipment from overseas has largely disappeared.

REPORTED DROWNED LAST WEEK DIES OF GENERAL DEBILITY

Sarnia, April 9 (CP)—Angus Martell, octogenarian retired lake sailor died early Sunday at Sarnia General Hospital. His name was prominent in the news in the past fortnight when it was erroneously reported that he was drowned in a flood at Port Franks. Mr. Martell was marooned in his river front cabin by the flood but was soon rescued. His death was due to general debility occasioned by old age, officials said today.

Thames Municipalities Want Flood Control Authority Established

Toronto, April 9. (CP)—Back from an aerial tour of Southwestern Ontario's Thames Valley flood areas, planning Minister Porter said today municipalities along the Thames had asked his department for power to set up a flood control authority.

He added that already four flood conrol authorities— the Grand River, Etobicoke, South Nation and Ganaraska —"have been established in Ontario.

Mr. Porter said a plan for the Thames Valley already has been started and legislation to cover it is ready. Planning department engineers surveyed the Thames flood control problem and made numerous recommendations which included proposals for five dams.

CRISIS BELIEVED OVER AS CITIZENS START CLEANUP

Farmers Between Lake St. Clair and Chatham Work Frantically To Build Up Dykes

By GEORGE RONALD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Chatham, April 9 (CP)— A three-inch fall in the level of the turbulent Thames River since 8 a.m., was recorded at noon today, 13 hours after the worst flood in 10 years passed its peak. The river had dropped to 20 feet, one inch above normal.

Chatham breathed relief that the peak had been reached with comparatively little damage, but farmers and residents of small communities between here and Lake St. Clair, 18 miles to the west, worked frantically to build up dykes along the course of the swollen stream.

Thousands of acres of rich farmlands had been inundated for stretches far north and south of the tortuous course of the river. From northeast of London, 70 miles east, to its mouth in the Lake St. Clair. And these crop and property losses from the Thames waters were only part of the damage inflicted by other streams, swollen by melting snows and recent heavy rains, which broke their banks in wide areas of the province.

No one could accurately assay the over-all loss but it would top $1,000,000, a figure well below the damage caused by the great floods of 1937.

The city council of London where the flood crest of the Thames had come within inches of the tops of breakwaters before subsiding, decided on several measures to guard against repetition of the threat.

27 Holy Week Vacationers Die In Plane Crash

Caracas, Venezuela, April 9 — (AP)— An Aeropostal Venezolana two-engine plane crashed in a mountainous region 25 miles east of here Tuesday, killing all 27 persons aboard, 21 of them high school students and three professors.

Police officials from the Town of Guatire, near the scene, located the wreckage about seven hours after the crash and reported the bodies of the three crew members and the 24 passengers had been destroyed by fire.

The students, returning to Caracas from a Holy Week vacation at Cumana, included five girls and 16 boys, ranging in age from 14 to 18 years. They were accompanied by one woman and two men faculty members of the Liceo Razetti School here. The members included the pilot and two co-pilots.

The DC-3 air liner left Cumana Tuesday morning and was scheduled to land at Caracas' La Carlota Airport at 9:30 p.m. When it failed to arrive, 60 military and commercial planes began a search.

Police went to the scene of the crash, only a few minutes' flying time from Caracas, after farmers in the region reported they had witnessed the disaster, worst in Venezuela's air history.

Icebreaker Smashing New Channel To Allow Boats to Reach the Soo

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., April 9 —(CP)— The U. S. Coastguard icebreaker Mackinac, smashing a new channel in the lower St. Mary's River today, will attempt to break open a channel through 20 to 26 inches of ice in the upper river tomorrow as far west as Whitefish Bay, Commander A. Dahlberg said today in the Michigan Sault.

It was reported that four coal-laden freighters, Joliet, Henepin, Townsend, and Byers, left Toledo, Ohio, this morning and are expected to reach the Sault late Friday. They will follow in the wake of the icebreaker and will use the Davis lock of the Michigan Sault Canal, only one ready for the 1947 navigation season. Officials said today the Canadian Sault Canal would not be open before April 15.

Parts of Eastern Germany Should Be Awarded to Poland

Wants Resources Used To Sustain European Economy

Moscow, April 9—(AP)—State Secretary Marshall proposed today that the council of foreign ministers name a special boundary commission to recommend a permanent German-Polish frontier.

The commission would be composed of the United States, Britain, Russia and France, plus Poland and some other Allied states.

Marshall suggested that the commission also study measures to assure that the natural and industrial resources in question "shall fairly serve" the economic needs of Europe.

"The division of the remaining territory, largely agricultural land, requires consideration of the needs of the Polish and German peoples and of Europe as a whole."

Would Avoid Friction.

Marshall asked a settlement which would not "provide enduring and popular issues for the enemies of democracy and freedom in Germany." He also urged that the territorial solution be not one which "would create international friction."

Poland would not be deprived of compensation for territories lost to the Soviet Union, Marshall said, and "the new frontiers of Poland must be adequate to give Poland resources at least as great as she had before the war and capable of maintaining her peoples at a good standard of life."

(A large area of East Poland was incorporated into Russia in the settlement which gave Poland former German lands.)

At the same time the program would give other European states a hand in administering the vital economic resources of both regions.

Main Points of Program.

The main point of the program, which form the basis of United States proposals to the council of foreign ministers on frontier discussions scheduled to start today, are reported to be:

1. The council of foreign ministers should accept the principle that the resources of the Ruhr and Silesia must fit into the whole Europeon economy so that neither Germany nor Poland should have exclusive control. The exact details should not be laid down as hard and fast rules, but should be administered by a suitable international agency, perhaps such as the European economic commission.

2. The United States is willing to agree to French demands for the Saar, but within present limits and thus without the enlargement of the area which France would control.

3. German areas which Poland now is "administering" under the Potsdam agreement, including East Prussia, Upper Silesia and Northeast Pomerania, should be given fully to Poland, but the agricultural lands immediately east of the Oder and the Neisse river lines should be in some degree, at least, restored to Germany, to give Germany more balance in her economy.

4. The Ruhr and the Rhineland, for which the French have been demanding separate regimes, should be retained in Germany, but with provision, as explained, for more or less permanent international administration or supervision of the resources.

Red Cross Reaches 78 Per Cent of Quota

Toronto, April 9 — (CP) —National headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross here last night announced that 78 per cent, or a total of $3,898,906 is shown in latest reports as subscribed in the Red Cross national fund appeal for $5,000,000. Ontario has subscribed $1,663,223 or 77 per cent.

Two Prisoners, Under Sentence Of Death, Suicide

Berlin, April 9 — (AP) — The British Army announced today that two prisoners — a man and a woman — under sentence of death for torturing and killing female inmates of Ravensbruck concentration camp had taken their own lives.

One was Carmen Maria Mory, a 40-year-old spy and adventuress who slashed her wrists with some unidentified instrument early today and bled to death in her cell. The other, Dr. Percy Treite, poisoned himself yesterday.

The Mory woman, one of five women condemned to die for atrocities at Ravensbruck, was found guilty by a French court in 1940 of spying on the Maginot Line for Germany. She was sentenced to die then, too, but the advancing German army rescued her.

Testimony at the trial of the Ravensbruck defendants showed that 5,000 women were gassed at the camp and that 3,000 others were killed or disappeared.

The woman had been known throughout her career at the camp and during her trial as "The Black Angel of Ravensbruck."

Ants Clean Houses For Nicaraguans

Managua, Nicaragua, April 9 — (Reuters) — A new broom may sweep clean but Nicaraguans have a better answer — they let ants do their spring cleaning.

Once a year, hordes of red ants come down from the mountains on foraging expeditions. Warned of the army's approach by a small vanguard of ant scouts, villagers move out of their homes, leaving everything behind, except food and animals. The ants move in and do a thorough cleaning and disinfecting job.

284 TONS OF SOIL TO RESURFACE COURSE

Kansas City, April 9 —(AP)—Dubs today had evidence for their stories of just how much trouble that scant five-inch cover of sand in a golf course trap contains. Ed Brugger, greenskeeper, finished resurfacing the Swope Park municipal course hazards and announced the job took 284 tons.

EIRE NEAR DOUBLES HER IMPORT TRADE

Dublin, April 9 — (CP)—Eire's trade returns for the first 11 months of 1946 showed imports totalled £64,361,209 ($287,444,836) compared with £36,386,268 for the same period in 1945.

An informal conference of clergy of the Diocese of Ontario will be held at diocesan camp at Lyndhurst in June. Addresses will be delivered by Venerable Archdeacon J. H. H. Coleman, Kingston, Rev. Arthur F. Smith, Belleville, and Rev. George A. Palmer, Ogdensburg, N.Y.

ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUNS TAKEN TO PICTON

Five large 3.7 anti-aircraft guns and gun trailers passed through the city by rail the other day en route to Picton. The guns required five flat cars and will be used at the active service headquarters of the permanent army in the Prince Edward county town. Later they will be taken to Pointe Petre where they will be fired at the ranges there for practice and training purposes.

SEA CADET CORPS TO CAMP THIS YEAR IN QUEBEC PROV.

The Belleville Sea Cadet Corps will have a new location for its annual summer camp training this year which will probably be at Camp William Ewing, in Quebec. This is due to the fact that the Rotary Island Camp near Gananoque, where the local corps usually went through its summer training, has been ordered closed by the Department of National Defence.

Camp William Ewing is located on the Ottawa River off the Montreal-Ottawa highway, a few miles from Montreal.

The local cadet corps will go to camp with the Kingston, Peterborough and Port Hope corps.

Eight summer camps for sea cadets are to be operated across Canada this year with provision for 4,000 cadets and 200 officers.

ANNOUNCEMENT CAUSES FLURRY OF BUSINESS

The increase of ten per cent in rental ceilings on self-contained housing accommodation caused a flurry of business in the Wartime Prices and Trades Board offices in Kingston. Officials stated that telephones had been busy and over 50 persons have secured two-year lease forms. Since the WPTB office here was transferred to Kingston some time ago, there was no way of ascertaining the reaction on Belleville property owners, but it is presumed some of the new business came from this city.

CHOCOLATE BARS ADVANCE TWO CENTS

It costs eight cents if you want to sweeten the teeth with a chocolate bar. Prices generally advanced from six to eight cents here yesterday as a result of the recent lifting of price ceilings.

Manufacturers have raised their prices from $1.11½ to $1.46 for each carton of 24 bars, according to wholesalers here.

Truck Driver's Remark Ends Alley Blockade

The passenger car had stopped directly in front of the entrance to a Front Street parking lot. The driver, a lady, was engaged in animated conversation with another lady a pedestrian friend who stood with one foot on the running board.

Behind the car, other drivers tooted their horns. Halfway across the sidewalk was a large truck. In it was the driver grinding his gears—and his teeth. He tooted his horn. He was a busy man and he had work to do.

Pedestrians, halted by the truck, gathered around the scene. The conversation between the ladies went on.

Finally, the truck driver, thoroughly exasperated, backed his truck into the alley, opened the cab window and yelled, "If you wait there long enough I'll get my brother and we'll play bridge."

Chins snapped shut with a near audible click, were elevated to a noticeable angle, the conversation ceased, the car moved on and peace reigned once again on the busy street.

West Lake Closed To Commercial Fishing

West Lake, Prince Edward County is to be closed to commercial fishermen this year while a biologist from the Fish and Wild Life Division, Ontario Department of Lands and Forests, conducts a study of fish life in the lake.

Confirmation of the closure has been given county fish and game officials by Dr. W.J.K. Harkness, director of the division, who stated the closing date will be May 15.

"This lake was closed before the war and opened during the war years as a wartime measure," he said. "It is now the intention to close it again and have a biologist conduct a survey."

Game fish such as bass and pickerel abound in the lake and the department wishes to conserve these for the tourist trade.

HIGH WATER STALLS BUS

Winchester, Ont., April 9—(CP)—A bus bound from Cornwall to Ottawa Monday night stalled in four feet of water and its 36 passengers were forced to hold their feet above the flood that swirled about the coach floor until a heavy duty tow truck, pulled the bus to higher ground.

Inter-Service Club Council Approves Swimming Pool

Construction of a community swimming pool in Belleville will receive the combined support of the Belleville Inter Service Club Council, members of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville were told at their regular bi-monthly meeting Monday evening.

All service clubs in the city will contribute toward the swimming pool fund which is to be set up and when sufficient money is accumulated it is expected a start will be made on construction of the project. Estimated cost of the pool would be between $60,000 and $100,000.

The matter of a community swimming pool in Belleville was first mooted by the local Kinsmen Club early in the winter with plans from other centres in the province having pools being obtained by the club. However, feeling that the project was too large for the Kinsmen Club alone, the support of the Inter Service Club Council was asked with 100 percent co-operation from this organization being assured.

Fred Deacon, of Deacon Brothers Ltd., was guest speaker for the meeting, he being introduced by Kin Newt Wilbur with club appreciation being expressed by Keith Carroll. Mr. Deacon gave a graphic account of his recent trip overseas.

Entertainment was afforded local club members by Stan Hagerman Jr., local pianist, who delighted his audience with two numbers. President Arthur Cruji presided over the meeting.

Bonarlaw Couple Wed 50 Years

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. H. Webb, Bonarlaw, was the scene of a happy gathering on March 31st. when their son and daughter, together with grandchildren and other relatives, joined in celebrating their parents' golden wedding anniversary.

Married March 31st., 1397, by the Rev. George Nickle, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Y. Lidster of Crookston, Mr. and Mrs. Webb have lived on their Rawdon township farm at Bonarlaw for the past 48 years.

A sumptuous dinner was served by the family at noon the table being centred with a wedding cake topped by 50 candles. Daffodils and roses, decorated the rooms while later in the day the couple were presented with a beautiful hydrangea. Mr. and Mrs. Webb were well remembered by members of the family, also by the Springbrook W.A. and W.I. societies, Mrs. Webb being a member of each of the organizations.

A large number of congratulatory messages were received including a telegram from Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Webb of Saskatoon who celebrated their 30th anniversary just a week previous. Children of Mr. and Mrs. Webb are Gordon T. Webb and Mrs. Clarence Barnum.

Rare Pontifical Decoration For Ottawa Man

Ottawa, April 9 (CP) — J.A. O'Brien of Ottawa has become the first Canadian to be invested with the rare pontifical decoration of Knight Commander of the Order of St. Gregory the Great with plaque (civil class), Archbishop Alexandre Vachon of Ottawa announced today.

Archbishop Vachon made the disclosure in announcing that Mr. O'Brien, a native of Renfrew Ont., and son of the late Senator M. J. O'Brien, had accepted the honorary vice presidency of the Marian Congress. The Congress to be held here June 18-22, will offer prayers for a just and lasting peace.

The decoration was bestowed by the Pope in recognition of distinguished service to the church. It was made by Monsignor Eldebrando Antoniutti, apostolic delegate to Canada and Newfoundland, at a private ceremony some time before the apostolic delegate left for Rome.

Thurlow Resident Observes Her 94th Birthday

5th Thurlow.—A pleasant time was spent at the home of Mrs. S. Shaw and Douglas, 5th Thurlow on Easter Sunday evening in honor of Mrs. Shaw, Sr., who was celebrating her 94th birthday. Mrs. Shaw is the oldest of ten in the family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Parks, Stoco. Two sisters and one brother are living. Mrs. Shaw has one daughter and one son, (two daughters are deceased). She also has two grandsons and one great granddaughter.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. B. Pitman, Mr. and Mrs. F. Howes, Carolyn and Keith Thompson, Mrs. C. Goodman and Alton. Mrs. Shaw was the recipient of many cards and gifts among them a beautiful Easter lily from Carmel W.M.S. and a nicely decorated birthday cake.

Delicious refreshments were served and as Mrs. Shaw cut the cake, "Happy Birthday" was sung. Although taken by surprise Mrs. Shaw thanked for the gifts and asked all to visit her again and she never remembered her birthday coming on Easter before. All departed for their homes wishing this grand old lady more happy birthdays.

Children Want Mother Back

Philadelphia, April 9 — (AP)—"If only," the kids kept telling themselves today, "if only we could get her back, then we would not have to go to a home . . ."

It was the only rift in the dark cloud that had thickened cruelly each day since Feb. 25 when Irene Woods, 32-year-old mother of four, disappeared from her Philadelphia home.

Their father, Robert Woods, works at night. So the cooking is done by Robert, Jr. 13, while Terry, 11, and Shelda, five, take care of the house.

The youngest child, Chuckie, 2, is in a private home as a ward of a welfare society.

All through Easter week a plan grew in the children's heads as they carried on with their mother's work.

Then finally, clean and neat, they marched to the Philadelphia Inquirer with a picture hoping the newspaper would print it and that perhaps some reader might remember having seen their missing mother.

The picture was printed in this morning's edition.

The kids are still hoping.

Langley Collyer's Body Found Amid Squalor of Home

By WILLIAM R. MOORE

New York, April 9 (AP)—The finding of Langley Collyer's body amid the filth and squalor of the once fashionable home he shared with his blind brother Homer left the long-provocative Collyer legend just about finished today.

There will be an autopsy to determine the cause of death—but police held little doubt the 61-year-old recluse, whose rat-gnawed body was found late yesterday, had been the victim of one of his own booby-traps, rigged to tumble heavy junk on an intruder.

Still uncertain was the source of a telephone message to police that led to the finding of the body of Homer Collyer, 65, in the house March 21. Police found the one-time admiralty lawyer in a front room of the second floor of the three-storey brownstone house, near a window. It was the same room in which Langley died—possibly while taking food to the blind brother. Police were inclined to dismiss a report that Langley had been seen alive the day before Homer was found dead.

Between the times of the two macabre discoveries, 120 tons of junk, filth and oddities had been removed from the house.

Rat Runs From Body

Langley's body was wedged between a wooden dresser and iron bookcase which evidently had supported the heavy debris that had fallen on the body.

A rat described by a detective as "big as a rabbit" ran away when the body was uncovered.

Homer had died only nine feet away—partly from malnutrition.

The Collyer brothers were reared in a prosperous old and cultivated family, the sons of Dr. Herman Livingston Collyer, a gynaecologist who died in 1923, and Mrs. Susie Gage Collyer, who died in 1929. About that time the brothers began to shun society, never giving any fuller explanation than that they preferred to live alone.

The finding of 14 pianos in the cluttered house indicated that in early years the brothers were not miserly with their fortune, recently valued by the family lawyer, John R. McMullen, at around $100,000.

In later years, however, Langley was said to have walked miles to find a bargain on his nocturnal prowlings for food for himself and Homer, who became blind in 1933.

Tweed

Veneer Plant Will Be Moved ToOldRoundhouse

Tweed—(Special)—The veneer manufacturing plant of the Hunter and Roberts firm at Lost Channel will be established at Tweed instead of being rebuilt at the original site, it was learned here this week.

Owners of the Lost Channel cheese box manufacturing firm have purchased the old C.N.R. roundhouse at Tweed and new veneer equipment will be installed here. Purchase of the property was announced last week.

Several weeks ago the veneer plant at Lost Channel was destroyed by fire when a blaze of undetermined origin caused damage of nearly $40,000.

Installation of new veneer equipment has not yet commenced at the Tweed site, but it is expected this will commence in the near future.

Drive Designed To Crush Guerrilla Forces in Greece

Athens, April 9 —(AP)— The Greek government announced today launching of a long-awaited "general offensive" designed to crush guerrilla forces in Western Macedonia and Thessaly.

The announcement said operations began at dawn after government aircraft had dropped thousands of leaflets warning the civilian population that the offensive was about to start.

Both the 2nd and 3rd army corps were reported participating.

Strong forces were reported standing by ready to prevent the guerrillas from escaping by sea.

The leaflets addressed to civilians warned them to keep away from roads and streets in the field of operations.

Lieut.-Gen. Demetrois Yadis, in command of the offensive, issued the following order of the day:

"Forward, and may God be with you. Crush the insurrection. All of Greece follows you and confidently expects the restoration of peace and order."

Preparations for the offensive were nearing completion when King George II died unexpectedly last week. It only remained for his successor, King Paul I, to give the word to go.

Unofficial reports have said that the government was ready to throw most of its 130,000 regular army troops as well as the national gendarmerie of 30,000 men into the fight.

The government is virtually staking its life on the success of the campaign.

If it fails, most observers believe, the country will fall into complete disorder.

Mother is Held On Charge Of Killing Daughter

London, April 9 (AP)—Mrs. Margaret Willis, 29, was held today on a charge of murdering her daughter, Eileen, on the child's sixth birthday.

Detective Inspector John Ball testified at a preliminary hearing that Mrs. Willis a waitress, told him after Eileen's trussed body was found in a suitcase in their home:

"Yes, sir. It is my Eileen. I don't know why I did it. I strangled her and want to tell you all about it."

Supported by a woman guard, Mrs. Willis said "No,sir" in a scarcely audible voice when the magistrate asked if she wished to question the inspector.

Police said Mrs. Willis' husband was understood to be an American.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARGARET H. (Weir) FOOTE
(Madoc - Barrie)

Madoc, April 9 —(Special)—Mrs. Margaret Helena Foote, widow of Gordon Foote, and a highly esteemed resident of this village for many years, died on Sunday after a brief illness at the home of her son, Major the Rev. John Foote, V.C., in Barrie, Ontario.

The late Mrs. Foote was born in Tweed and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Armour Weir. The greater part of her life was passed in this village and her death has brought much regret to many friends. She was a member of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church and during her long residence here she took an active part in the activities of the Women's Missionary Society and the Ladies' Aid.

Surviving to mourn her loss are three sons, Donald Foote of Ajax; Major the Rev. John Foote, V.C., of Barrie, and Ted Foote of Carleton Place; four daughters, Mrs. Mary Martin of Lakefield; Mrs. Alice Snelling of Toronto; Mrs. Barbara Wright of Toronto, and Mrs. Pauline Hannah of Toronto; five sisters, Mrs. Andrew (Allie) Williamson, Belleville; Miss Lela Weir, Belleville; Mrs. Ford (Frank) Sutton, Norwood; Mrs. Ida Sexsmith, Norwood, and Mrs. Gertrude Booth, Toronto. Her husband died six years ago.

Interment took place at Lakeview Cemetery, Madoc, Tuesday afternoon.

REV. W. EDGAR MERCER
(Balderson—Bayside)

The Rev. W. Edgar Mercer, United Church minister on the Bayside Circuit from 1939 to 1943, and of late living at Balderson, near Perth, Ontario, died in the Kingston General Hospital on Monday evening last after an illness of three months' duration.

The late Mr. Mercer was born sixty-three years ago in Newfoundland, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mercer. For over forty years he served in the ministry of the church and for the past two years he was stationed at Balderson. Prior to that time he resided at Dunsford, Ontario. He was well known and highly esteemed by many friends in various parts of Ontario and to them the announcement of his death will bring much regret.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Rebecca Sharp; three sons, Wesley of Napanee; Douglas of Belleville, and Richard of Peterborough; nine daughters, Mrs. (Rev.) S. Spurrell, Harrowsmith; Mrs. H. Hubbs, Toronto; Mrs. Roy Adams, Botwood, Newfoundland; Mrs. W. J. Pringle, Forest Mills; Mrs. Roy Snider, Kingston; Mrs. K. S. Long, Deseronto; Mrs. P. Boulianne, Crediton; Miss C. Mercer, Belleville, and Miss Ruth Mercer, Peterborough. He was the last of his family.

The funeral announcement is made in this edition.

The late Mr. Lawrence, who was in his 72nd. year, was born in Hungerford township and lived all his life there. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lawrence. Throughout the district he was well known and esteemed by many friends to whom his sudden death has brought much regret. He was a member of the Tweed United Church and fraternally he was a member of Tweed Lodge No. 239 A. F. & A. M. He never married.

Surviving him are three sisters Mrs. R. J. Stewart, Mrs. W. H. Carpenter and Mrs. W. K. McCaw all of Tweed.

Resting at the Bush Funeral Home, Tweed, for service there on Friday afternoon.

Time for Farmers Spring Busy

Toronto, April 9 —(CP)—Seed fairs, farm sales and the virtual wind-up of maple syrup making kept farmers busy throughout Ontario during the last week, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said today in its weekly crop report.

Cold cloudy weather made the sap run disappointing. Lacking frosty nights and warm sunny days which are considered essential for a good syrup season, farmers reported the output of maple products lower than had been expected.

Halton and Waterloo counties complained of a shortage of good farm workers, Oxford farmers received good prices for livestock and machinery at farm sales, Frontenac county cheese factories were in daily operation and in such parts of Northern Ontario as Algoma District the snow melted away without floods from the run-off.

King and Queen Inspect Parade

Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, April 9 (Reuters)—The King and Queen accompanied by the princesses inspected a parade of 3,000 Rhodesian ex-service men and women here today.

Later the King held an investiture at Government House.

Tomorrow the Royal Family will begin the 580-mile journey westward to Victoria Falls with various stopping points to meet gold miners and farmers of the Rhodesian uplands.

Money Trouble Stated Cause

New York April 9 —(CP)—It was money trouble, says bus driver William Cimillo, that prompted him to head for Florida in a new $18,000 bus March 28 instead of taking it on its usual route in the Bronx.

Brought back from Hollywood, Florida., to face a grand larceny charge here, the 37-year-old driver told his troubles to reporters after his release on $1,000 bail yesterday.

"I wanted to get away and go somewhere to think it over quietly," Cimillo explained.

He said he was pressed by more than $2,000 in debts.

EIGHT HORSES BURNED TO DEATH

Welland, April 9 (CP)—Eight horses were burned to death last night when a $2,000 fire blamed on a cigaret butt swept through the McCelland horse sales stables at Singers Corners, three miles northwest of here. Also lost was 12 tons of hay in a horse corral barn.

Neighbors assisted fire chief Robert Reid and 20 Fonthill firemen in extinguishing the flames.

Wallace Would Ease Tension By Loan to Russia

London, April 9 — (Reuters) — Henry A. Wallace, declared at a press conference here today that United States "political" aid to Greece had "too much smell of powder about it" but a loan to Russia would help erase the causes of war.

"We are not going to get anywhere by being anti-Russian or anti-Communist," said the former commerce secretary of the United States who is visiting Britain. "It will only lead to war and eventually lose us our own way of life."

A loan to Russia would increase her productive power, but the financial aid to Greece and Turkey was for non-productive purposes — for tanks rather than tractors and machine-guns instead of food.

Speaking to 150 newspapermen at London's Savoy Hotel, Wallace, emphasizing that a third world war was inevitable unless understanding could be reached with Russia, declared:

"Some people in Europe are watching these two great giants, America and Russia, getting ready for a death struggle. They know they would get caught between these two great giants and that it would be death for them.

"I do not think we are going to handle Communism by fighting Communists. I think that will make Communism stronger. I think we are going to do it by having a positive constructive program of our own."

Wallace rejected the idea of a personal visit to Russia, saying that although "it is conceivable that some day I could render a service to the United States and Britain in Russia," he believed the time was not yet ripe.

His answer to the deadlock at the Moscow conference, he said, was "a more global approach than any of the three great powers have so far put forward."

LEO DUROCHER

Chandler said both Durocher and Rickey "admitted that they had made some such statements" with regards to gamblers sitting with MacPhail at the game in Havana.

Rickey denied, however, the commissioner said, that he ever had said that "apparently there are rules for Durocher and other rules for the rest of baseball."

Chandler continued:

"Mr. Rickey denied that he had made any statements which might be construed as detrimental to the character and integrity of Mr. MacPhail either personally or as a club owner. Mr. MacPhail has said that he would accept Mr. Rickey's explanation and that aspect of the affair is hereby closed.

"The incident in Havana, which brought considerable unfavorable comment to baseball generally, was one of a series of publicity-producing affairs in which Manager Durocher has been involved in the last few months...."

Once Witch's Brew Tomato Juice Zooms

Hamilton, Ont., (CP)—The Canadian palate is demanding an unprecedented quota of tomato juice these days—more than three times the pre-war average yearly consumption.

Records show that as recently as 1930 only 7,000 cases of tomato juice were packed in the Dominion. By 1939 the yearly average had grown to 1,300,000 cases. The 1946 pack according to Canadian manufacturers estimates hit a record of more than 4,000,000 cases. With increased acreage planned for 1947 (and with the blessing of good weather and adequate supplies of labor and materials) the yield and total canning pack may reach new heights.

Tomatoes were first introduced as a palatable and "non-poisonous" food about a century ago. Prior to that time they were considered only fit for a witch's brew; the French once prescribed them as an effective love potion. A woman in Trenton, N.J., born in 1833 recalled that when as a child she ate a tomato, her parents rushed her to a doctor, certain she would die.

It was not until 1928 that tomato juice started to become popular —result of the enterprise of a Chicago hotel man who introduced it in the form of spiced juice cocktails. Almost overnight its popularity became nationwide in the United States. Canadian production began to climb simultaneously and by 1936 it had reached the 1,500,000 case mark.

Although the canning of whole tomatoes has shown a decline in volume in recent years (an estimated 1,750,000 cases in 1946 compared to 3,500,000 in 1937) the combined packs of whole tomatoes and juice in Canada last year were enough to provide 12 tins for every man woman and child in the country.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 9 (CP)—Prices tightened during noon trading on the Toronto exchange today although volume was low and offers became less urgent for most stocks. Sherritt and God's Lake moved up rapidly while many industrials changed hands on firmer prices.

The exchange's noon index listed industrials up .03 at 171.50, golds down .49 at 109.57, base metals up .46 at 87.91 and western oils down .27 at 24.57. Volume for the first three hours was 425,000 shares, about 300,000 less than yesterday's similar period.

Brisk trading in Sherritt sent the price up to $4.30 for a gain of 15 cents while other base metals moved up slowly. Denison advanced 1-2, Nickel 1-2 at 35, but Noranda was off 1-4 at 46 3-4. In the golds God's Lake quickly converted an 8-cent loss to a gain of 12 cents at $1.50. Other golds were slow and generally down.

Industrials tightened noticeably in small trades shortly before noon with a few Rey issues posting good gains. Algoma Pfd., gained 1-4, Aluminum $4 at $204.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Tortno, April 9 (CP)—Cattle prices were generally unchanged on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Veal calves were firm at $16-$17 for choice with a few tops at $17.25 Plain lights sold downward to $12. Hogs and lambs were steady. No early cattle sales. Unsold from yesterday were 300 head of cattle. Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 700, calves 600, hogs 400 sheep and lambs 200.

Weighty steers were $14-$15.25, butcher steers $12.50-$15, heifers $14.75 down, butcher cows mostly $9.50-$12 with canners and cutters $6-$9.25, bulls $11-$12.50, fed yearlings $14-$15.

Hogs were dressed, grade A $22, grade B1 $21.60, Sows $19.25 dressed.

Medium to good western lambs brought $15.75-$16.

FOX OF MANY COLORS

The red fox is also colored silver, black and yellow.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, April 9 (CP)—Produce prices in the spot market here today were reported as follows:

Churning cream unchanged, No. 1 lb. 41 fob, 45 delivered, plus 10 cents subsidy.

Butter prints unchanged, 1st grade 42, 2nd grade 41, 3rd grade 40.

Eggs: Volume good but not too plentiful, demand steady, prices unchanged; wholesale to retail, A large 39-41, A medium 37-38, A pullet 36, B 35-36, C 33-34; country shippers quoted graded eggs, cases free, A large 36 1-2, A medium 34 1-2, A pullet 32-32 1-2, B 32-33, C 30 1-2.

Butter solids unchanged, 1st grade 40, 2nd grade 39.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, April 9 —(CP)—The stock market regained a measure of balance today after Tuesday's late dip. Several issues, retreated into low ground for the year, but industrials developed resistance to further downward pressures. Price changes were well mixed near the fourth hour.

Reaching higher levels were Republic Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Eastman Kodak, American Woollen, Kennecott Western Union "A" and Union Carbide.

Canadian issues were mixed at mid-day. Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagram each added 1-8 while Dome Mines eased 1-8 and Hiram Walker was unchanged.

HOGS

Toronto, April 9 (CP)—Grade A, dressed bacon hogs were unchanged at Stratford, to farmers $21.85, to truckers $22 delivered, in market reporting early today.

CAR PRODUCTION RISES

Ottawa, April 9—(CP)—Gleaming new cars — 13,550 of them — rolled off Canadian assembly lines in February at a faster rate than in any other month since production stopped in 1942. Total units produced, including 7,260 trucks, numbered 20,810.

Survey Indicates Business Boom Will Last Three Months But Recession May Follow

New York, April 9 — (AP) — The outlook is that the current record-breaking business boom in the United States will continue for at least another three months.

After that, the much-discussed recession may come. It is far from a certainty, however. And if it does come, the recession need not lead to a depression.

Many economists and business leaders expect a recession will attain stature this summer. They say the economy is getting too far out of kilter; that many prices are too high, and that inventories are getting too great as consumers tighten their buying.

There already are indications of a levelling off in retail sales, the Easter season being especially disappointing.

This is the essence of a survey made by the Associated Press, across the United States at the close of 1947's first quarter.

Labor difficulties such as a prolonged closing of the coal mines and more strikes like the telephone walkout, could upset the predictions.

There is little gloom surrounding the recession talk.

It could be a healthful phase, a period of making the country's economy ship-shape, after which there could be continued prosperity and a continued rise in the standard of living.

Around 56,000,000 civilians are gainfully employed against less than 2,500,000 out of work.

Income payments to individuals are running at an annual rate of about $177,000,000,000, an all-time record for the United States, including the prosperous war years. (In 1939 it was $70,800,000,000).

There is an enormous pent-up demand for all types of durable consumer goods that runs into uncounted billions of dollars.

The United States has the most acute housing shortage in history, calling for a building boom, sometime, of tremendous proportions.

1,100 More Polish Veterans Coming

Ottawa, April 9 — (CP)—Canada is making arrangements to bring in 1,100 more Polish veterans as farm labor, it was announced today in a joint statement issued on behalf of Labor Minister Mitchell and Resources Minister Glen.

The veterans, additional to 2,900 Poles admitted last autumn, will bring the total for the movement of Polish farm workers into Canada to 4,000, the quota set originally for the admission of Polish veterans. Heavy demand by farmers for additional help has resulted in the move.

It is expected Canadian officials will leave shortly for England to complete arrangements there for the selection and transfer of the Polish veterans to Canada. The new immigrants will be placed with farmers who have requested their services and are willing to sign an agreement covering their terms of employment.

More than 1,000 applications have been received from farmers in the various provinces during recent weeks, the statement said.

Bobby Hewiston Sports Editor Of The Telegram

Toronto, April 9 (CP)—The Evening Telegram announced on its sport page today the appointment of R. W. (Bobby) Hewiston as sports editor. He succeeds J. P. Fitzgerald who died last Wednesday after 47 years in the position. A native of Toronto, Hewiston has been a members of the Telegram sports staff for 30 years.

He is a steward at several Ontario race tracks.

PIGEON BRINGS MESSAGE 4 MILES IN 10 MIN.

Chicago, April 9 —(AP)—Mrs. James A. Ruzek expressed genuine concern to her husband that he might become involved in trouble if he reported for work yesterday at the Hawthorne plant of the Western Electric Company which has been picketed by striking telephone workers because it manufactures telephone equipment

After crossing the picket line at the plant, Ruzek released the family's pet homing pigeon with a note saying "entered plant O.K. don't worry." The bird delivered the note to Mrs. Ruzek, four miles from the plant, in less than 10 minutes.

Britain Interested In Espionage Report

London (CP)—The Canadian Royal Commission report on espionage has proved something of a best seller in the United Kingdom.

Glenvil Hall, financial secretary to the treasury, said in the Commons 2,000 copies were ordered by the Stationery Officer on Aug. 29 and were on sale Feb. 15, the supply being exhausted a month later. Further copies totalling 750 were ordered from Canada.

Java and Sumatra Ten-Year Plan

Batavia, April 9 — (AP) — A. K. Gani, minister of economics of the newly-recognized Indonesian Republic, announced today a 10-year plan designed to convert Java and Sumatra to a semi-Socialistic economy.

Gani said the program was intended to raise the living standard of 55,000,000 Indonesians by luring a larger proportion of the proceeds of production back into the country instead of permitting them to flow abroad.

EDUCATE PEDESTRIANS TO OBEY SIGNALS

Ottawa, April 8 —(CP)— Ottawa pedestrians got a warning from the police department yesterday — obey the traffic signals or else. The police department said special constables would be stationed at intersections for a time to check up on and "educate" pedestrians. A city by-law provides that pedestrians as well as motorists obey traffic regulations or lay themselves open to a fine.

MAGNET REMOVES NEEDLE

Pittsburgh, April 9 — (AP) — A three-quarter inch magnet, suspended by a string down the throat of a 16-year-old girl, painlessly removed a two-inch sewing needle she had swallowed, doctors at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School reported yesterday.

5. Other German boundary rectifications requested by the smaller powers should be fully studied. Probably some will be agreed to.

Russian Opposition Effected

The Russians were expected to oppose revision of Poland's western frontier as it would stand under permanent adoption of the administrative area outlined at Potsdam.

A Big Four battle over Germany's future boundaries was expected with the United States expected to ask—and Russia to oppose—revision of Poland's present western frontier in favor of Germany.

In addition, the Ministers were expected to head into a showdown fight on French demands concerning the industrial Ruhr and Rhineland.

Western diplomats said the day should bring a clear indication as to whether Foreign Minister Molotov intends to go along with State Secretary Marshall and Foreign Secretary Bevin in their efforts to speed up the work of the conference.

Before they tackle the boundary question, the ministers were due to receive a report from their deputies working on German peace treaty issues concerning the requests by smaller Allied countries for the right to participate in German decisions.

Molotov's action on this report—whether he launched an argument on the subject or accept it without discussion—was expected to show clearly what chance the conference has of getting something definite done in the next ten days or two weeks.

Both Marshall and Bevin have shown openly their impatience and displeasure at repeated arguments on the same issues thus far and both appear determined to bring the conference to a close in the reasonably near future, with or without substantial accomplishment.

At the end of another fruitless session yesterday, Marshall and Bevin pressed Molotov so hard that he finally agreed to shelve the deadlocked reparations and governmental issues and pass on to the next item on the agenda—the boundary question.

GOVERNOR SWORN IN

Georgetown, British Guiana, April 9 —(Reuters)— Sir Charles Campbell Woolley, former governor of Cyprus, was sworn in yesterday as Governor of British Guiana.

"GOING FOR JOYRIDE"

Toronto, April 9 (CP) — John Kowalchuck, 20, was trying to start a car (not his own) when two men asked him what he was doing. "Going for a joyride" replied Kowalchuck, and he did—to the police station. The car belonged to Constable George Victor Joyce, and Kowalchuck was given three months for attempted theft.

DRIVER INJURED AS TRUCK BOUNDS OVER BANK

Ottawa, April 9 — (CP)—Otislas Gareau, of Clarence Creek, Ont., is in hospital here with critical injuries suffered when the truck he was driving went out of control and crashed into a tree, just outside of Rockland, 20 miles east of here. The vehicle bounded over a 20-foot embankment and upset in a ditch. Lionel Gedeau, a passenger in the truck, escaped without injury.

Vimy Ridge April 9, 1917

A generation has passed by since on April 9, 1917 the Canadian Army, 97,000 men, in one of the great feats of arms of the First World War captured Vimy Ridge. Ever since Canadians have held that date in memory of the gallant young life of Canada who there memorialized their courage and the national spirit which inspired Canada in that epic struggle against tyranny, in the years 1914 to 1918. The capture of Vimy Ridge was one of the great contributions of the Dominion to Allied triumph.

Vimy is imperishably identified with Canada. Because of its imposing terrain and of the great deeds of valor there performed the Ridge was chosen as the site for the national war memorial. There in a setting of the most impressive character, the stately tribute of Canada to all her gallant dead of the First World War was built and dedicated on July 26, 1936, by His Majesty King Edward VIII. Vimy had stood steadfast throughout the First World War. In World War II this territory fell into German hands but the memorial was undamaged and stands as Canada's tribute to her brave servicemen, their service and their sacrifice.

Wherever veterans of the first war with Germany are they meet on this day of triumph hallowed by the sacrifice of those who fought at Vimy Ridge.

Democracy of Greece

The modern world of democracy looks with the greatest sympathy on Greece today. The land, which in the long ago was the light of western civilization, the bringer of culture to Europe, has had to pass through struggles enough to try men's souls and that of the nation. She finally won her freedom in 1830 after centuries of subjection. In World War II Greece chose the way of honor and joined Britain and the Allies against Hitlerite Germany and Italy. In that struggle her territory was overrun but the delay which the opposition of the Greeks caused the Germans proved a definite victory for the United Nations as it halted the possible advance of Hitler toward Asia Minor. What Greece underwent during the German occupation in the last war, everyone has heard, she was subjected to the savagery of the aggressors and her people were hard pressed to find means of subsistence. The Germans practised atrocities on this people. Today her condition in the strife due to guerilla forays and her urgent needs have forced the United States to proffer aid to both Greece and Turkey as bastions of democracy and freedom. Last week her King died suddenly of a heart seizure. His tribulations since he first became King reflected the state of turmoil in the land of which he was the ruler.

Greece had early in her career as a group of city states to defend freedom and civilization from the barbarians. Of old she was the defender of liberty and set the art and culture standard for the Continent of Europe. Along with ancient Palestine and Rome she has made the greatest contribution to western civilization.

Twenty-four centuries ago an Athenian statesman, Pericles, delivered the funeral oration over the dead Athenians in the early days of the Peloponnesian War and in the address on that occasion he defined the democracy of Athens. He said it was "a form of government which does not copy the laws of our neighbors; but we are ourselves rather a pattern to others than imitators of them. In name, from its not being administered for the benefit of the few but of the many it is called a democracy; but with regard to its laws, all enjoy equality as concerns their private differences; while with regard to public rank, according as each man has reputation in any field of effort, he is preferred for public honors, not so much from consideration of party, as of merit; nor, again on the ground of poverty, while he is able to do the state any worthy service, is he prevented by the obscurity of his position.

"We are liberal then in our public administration; and as for mutual jealousy in our daily pursuits, we are not angry with our neighbor, if he does anything to please himself, nor do we wear on our countenances offensive looks, which, though harmless, are unpleasant. And while in private matters we live together agreeably, in public matters, we most carefully abstain from any transgression, through our obedience to those who are from time to time in office, and to the laws."

These words show the spirit of ancient Athens, a city that early learned the spirit of democracy.

Modern democratic nations do not forget the tremendous debt of civilization owed to the Greeks of old nor are they unmindful of the modern Greeks who defied Mussolini and fought against the invader and frustrated German plans in the Near East.

As an example of this sense of obligation of the modern world to the historic country of Greece and the Greeks of today for their service can be taken the statement of U.S. President Truman on Jefferson Day when he affirmed the duty of the United States as a democracy to aid with money and personnel the opposition of free countries abroad to the totalitarian influences.

War on Cancer

It is possible that some observing biochemist may stumble on a way of preventing cancer and even of causing tumors to regress in their early stages, but it is far more likely that the conquest of cancer will be the result of concerted effort in many fields of science. The pathologist who is primarily concerned with the abnormalities of cells, the physicist who is versed in the action of X-rays and gamma rays on tumors, the geneticist, who devotes his life to, discovering whether or not cancer is hereditary, the physiologist who studies the metabolism of cells, the clinician who has to apply at the bedside the knowledge that has been acquired to alleviate suffering, even the mathematician who knows what conclusions may be drawn from the mountain of statistics that has accumulated — these and more must be recruited.

Cancer is primarily the problem of growth, normal and abnormal. Why is it that certain cells develop eyes, ears, legs skin and other tissues in the right places and of the right dimensions? And why is that control occasionally lost, so that tumors develop which take the possession of the body? These questions go to the very heart of the problem that the Sloan-Kettering Institute will attempt to solve. Manifestly it will take a staff of men who represent a dozen different sciences to conduct research on the large scale called for — men who will have every laboratory and hospital facility at their disposal. — New York Times.

Clothes For England

Premier Drew's plea in launching a drive in Ontario to collect and forward clothing, to Britain draws attention to the serious condition of the British people following the recent disastrous floods. As Mr. Drew pointed out in the House, between 60 and 70 per cent of farm livestock in England perished in the floods, hundreds of thousands of acres of wheat and potatoes were destroyed and the land may be too wet to seed in the usual way in time for this year's harvest.

Besides this loss of livestock and potential food, the British people are suffering from lack of coal and light, and are carrying on with reduced food rations at a time when their nations should be increasing in size and quality. It is to help meet the needs of the English people in the way of clothing that the present drive has been launched and it is to be hoped there will be a large and immediate response.—London Free Press.

Burials of Atomic Victims

Mortuary Science, a technical publication for undertakers, last week took up the problems involved in funerals for victims of atomic radiation, in particular those resulting from accidental exposure in laboratories. The remains, it pointed out, would be radioactive and therefore dangerous. Undertakers would have to wear lead-lined clothing, mourners, if permitted to view the body, would have to file past quickly. Cremation would be out of the question, since combustion gases would spread radioactivity through the air. Probably the casket would have to be lowered into a concrete-lined grave, with more concrete poured on top, remarks Newsweek Magazine.

RICH MAN'S SON

The rich man's son meets dangers worse
Than those of parents poor of purse.
For him are pitfalls, night and day,
Disguised and decked as pleasures gay.
For with his wishes all supplied,
Temptation waits on every side.

The boy who comes to wealth at birth
Is kept from many a test of worth.
The urge of want, the spur of need,
The strong ambition to succeed,
The will to suffer hardships grim,
All these his station keeps from him.

Since wearying tests denied him are,
The ones he meets are harder far.
Folly and recklessness and sin
Will lie in wait to drag him in.
If these he conquers—as he can—
That boy has proved that he's a man.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

April 9th, 1927

Mr. "Toots" Holway is home to spend a few days.

The Jewish people in this city are occupying temporary quarters at present on Pinnacle St., pending the erection of their new Synagogue on that street. Work on the building will be commenced shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Donahue have sold their house on Dunbar Street and will leave shortly to reside in Walkerton.

Messrs. G. A. C. Weir and W. E. Schuster are spending a few days in Toronto.

Mr. Ralph Batty left today for Detroit, Mich.

Mr. W. H. Ireland, M. P. P., Trenton, was in town today.

30 YEARS AGO

April 9th, 1917

A horse attached to the Canadian Express Company's wagon ran away on Front Street this morning, but was stopped before doing much damage.

Jury sittings of the Supreme Court will open here tomorrow before Mr. Justice Britton.

The many friends of the Rev. Father Corrigan of Kingston, formerly assistant priest at St. Michael's Church here, will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed a parish priest. His Grace Archbishop Spratt has given him charge of the parish at South Mountain.

Mrs. T. W. Robinson of Ottawa is the guest of her sister, Mrs. S. J. Benson, John Street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Deegan of this city are spending a few days with the former's mother, Mrs. R. Deegan, Brockville.

40 YEARS AGO

April 9th, 1907

At the regular meeting of the city council last night the tax rate for this year was set at 26 4-5 mills.

The sidewalk on Everett Street, between Catherine and Henry Streets, is in a bad condition. Repairs are urgently needed.

Several dogs in West Belleville have been poisoned recently. Mr. W. Langley and Mr. W. H. Reeves each lost a dog as the result of the poison. The matter is being investigated by the police.

Mr. and Mrs. John Latta entertained a number of friends at their home on North Front Street last night.

Mr. Earl Caldwell of this city is spending some time in Calgary, Alberta.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mossman and family, who have been living at Darlington for some time, have returned here to reside.

50 YEARS AGO

April 9th, 1897

There is very little stir along the local waterfront, but in a week's time it is expected trade will open up and business will be brisk.

The schooner Eliza Fisher has received a thorough overhauling and is in first class shape for the season's work. She left today for Kingston to load wheat for Oswego.

The tug Beaver is nearly ready to go into commission. Captain Bonar expects to leave for his season's work at the Cornwall Canal in a week or ten days.

The little steamer Annie Lake has been hauled upon the island skids in order to repair the damage done to her by the ice. She will have a new wheel and will be overhauled generally.

The schooner John McBride is about ready for the season's work. She has received a lot of repairs this spring and is apparently as good as new.

Mr. James A. Conger is spending today in Picton.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What President made the shortest inaugural address?

Washington's second inaugural address contains only 134 words and is the shortest address ever made by a President on such an occasion. Lincoln's second inaugural address — 588 words — is second in respect to brevity. William Henry Harrison delivered the longest — 8,578 words. The average length of inaugural addresses is about 2,000 words.

Pierce and Cleveland the second time they were inaugurated spoke without manuscript or notes and they have been the only Presidents to do so.

While Washington was serving his first term the government was moved from New York to Philadelphia and he has been the only President inaugurated in two capitals. John Adams resided in two capitals but was inaugurated only once. He was inaugurated in Philadelphia and completed his single term in Washington.

The oath was administered to Washington the first time April 30, 1789, on the balcony of the Federal Building in New York in sight of a large crowd. He did not deliver his first inaugural address on the balcony. After taking the oath he withdrew to the Senate Chamber in the same building and delivered his address — 1,300 words — to a joint session of Congress.

Apparently Washington regarded his first inaugural as a special address to mark the opening of the new government and not as a precedent for future inaugurations. When the time came for his second induction into office March 4, 1793, he did not feel that the occasion required another inaugural address. The question was raised whether the oath should be taken in private or public. At a Cabinet meeting it was decided to have a public ceremony in the Senate Chamber of the Federal Hall in Philadelphia.

Washington's first inaugural address is often quoted, but not his second, because it was only a short statement about the importance of taking the oath. When Washington had finished reading his two-minute statement the oath was administered. Jefferson was the first to deliver an extended address when inaugurated a second time.

Denies Poison Found in Body Of Czech Consul

Paris, April 9 (Reuters)—Reports that poison had been found in the body of Geza Rac, 40-year-old Czechoslovak Consul found dead in a Paris street Sunday, were denied by a police spokesman today.

There was nothing to suggest the consul had taken poison or any other drug before throwing himself down the steps of the Palais Chaillot, near the Eiffel Tower, he declared, though the autopsy has not yet been completed.

Police said yesterday that the post mortem showed Rac had committed suicide, although a preliminary examination had led them to think he was murdered.

INTERESTED IN TREES

Sydney, Australia (CP)— Fred Berman, 80-year-old head of the Forestry Advisory Council of New South Wales, now counts 50,000 members in the Tree Warden's League he organized 25 years ago. Berman arranged Australia's first Arbor Day in 1891.

CRISIS BELIEVED

Went Beyond Peak

Here residents awaited an opportunity to start the job of cleaning up. Late last night, as a handful of citizens stood by at the river banks in the downtown district, the Thames surged beyond the peak level of the flood of 1937. That mark was 20 feet, four inches above summer normal. The Thames equalled this mark at midnight, and crept slightly higher. But the rate of increase was progressively slower and the worst was over.

Damage did not appear to be extensive. City Manager T. M. Kingston stood by his earlier assertion that the damage would prove mainly of the "nuisance type" so far as the city is concerned. He declined an estimate, but said it probably would not be excessive.

24 Families Forced Out

As the flood established a new river peak only about 24 families were forced from their dwellings. Many others clung stubbornly to homes in low-lying, badly flooded areas. Only two of the evacuated families required official emergency shelter, and were accommodated in headquarters of the Chatham Red Cross in the Market Building.

Others of the temporarily homeless remained at the homes of friends or relatives. None had been able to return to their houses early today.

With water flooding many basements of business establishments and homes, electric fuses were put out of business at many places, leaving hundreds of buildings in darkness, many telephones out of order, heating systems cold. Candles and oil lamps were used in one telegraph office with a possibility the installations would be rendered useless by the water.

Pumps Used

Electric pumps and hose lines were everywhere, with water in the streets and a gloomy weather forecast of more rain.

Business and industry was virtually at a standstill during the evening as Chatham residents were out in force to watch the swirling waters. Officials were confident that the supply of drinking water would not be contaminated.

Hon. Dana Porter, Ontario Minister of Planning and Development, with engineering experts took a plane from London late yesterday for a swing over the whole flooded territory of Western Ontario and on return said he was "shocked" by the flood picture.

He expressed hope that the developments might spur all municipalities to take vigorous action on conservation reforestation and proper land-use measures at an early date.

Appoint Committee

London's City Council, whose proceedings were broadcast for three hours, apointed a special committee to receive a report from City Engineer W. M. Veitch. The Thames Valley Authority will be asked to call an immediate meeting of municipalities to press for implementation of the Ontario Conservation Authority Act of 1946 as far as it concerns the Thames Valley.

Thamesville, upstream from here, saw the river begin slowly receding after a culvert on the Canadian National Railways line survived the main impact of the flood waters. Sixty families there had been moved to emergency homes and drinking water was being brought in from farms miles distant. Milk was reaching Thamesville from as far away as London.

GOVERNMENT FORMS PUZZLE TO M. P.

London, April 9 — (CP) — T. J. Brown, Labor member for Inc., told a House of Commons committee that civil servants in the Board of Trade "should spend a month in industry and see what clerical staffs had to put up with in filling up forms."

"Some of the forms sent out by government departments are almost equal to a crossword puzzle." he said.

THE DRIP OF A LEAKING HEART

If one has what is called a leaking heart is it possible for him to feel the dripping? What are the symptoms? Can one hear or feel a murmur in the heart?" (R.P.O.)

The term "valvular leakage," is misleading. The valves are membranous folds around the orifice between the auricle and the ventricle (heart chambers); they permit the blood to pass through the orifice freely between beats or contractions of the heart, but then during contraction of the heart the valves close and prevent return of any of the blood from ventricle into auricle. That is the way the valves work in the normal or healthy heart.

But sometimes the heart lining becomes infected and inflamed, say in the course of or as a sequel of acute rheumatic fever (inflammatory rheumatism, acute infectious arthritis). Such inflammation of the heart lining is called endocarditis. The valves are covered with the same membrane that lines auricles and ventricles. If the inflammation affects the membrane covering the valves, exudate or irregular swellings from the inflammation, or gradual contraction of scar tissue long after the acute endocarditis, may distort the value flap enough to prevent perfect "seating" or closing, and through the aperture more or less blood will return from ventricle to auricle during the contraction of the heart.

That's all the leakage there is in valvular heart disease—just more or less backflow.

A small valvular defect of this sort is generally compensated without the patient realizing there is anything wrong —in most instances of valvular heart disease the condition is not discovered until months or years after the original endocarditis which left the valve damaged. However, a good doctor makes a point of listening carefully to the patient's heart every time he calls on a patient with rheumatic fever, scarlet fever, tonsillitis, septic sore throat, chorea (St. Vitus's dance) or other illness in which endocarditis may occur.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Hi, Skinny!

We hear and read a great deal about how to lose weight but very little about how to gain weight. I am 39, 61 inches tall and weigh slightly over 100 pounds. Have always had fairly good health, and would like to know how to put on a little flesh. Also what is the cause of sweats? I have a baby six months old. (Mrs. O. W. L.)

Answer—On written request accompanied with stamped self addressed envelope but no clippings, pins, sticker tape, staples, baling wire etc., I'll send a pamphlet "How to Gain Weight." I advise you, young lady, to quit fooling and consult your physician at once.

One in Every Family

My father read somewhere that it is beneficial to have the foot of the bed raised so he has eight-inch blocks under the footposts. Mother can't sleep and wants him to lower the bed to a level, but he insists it is good for health. He promised to remove the blocks if you say there is no benefit in sleeping like that. (Miss C. F.)

Answer—I say there is no benefit in sleeping like that. There's a nut in every family. If father wants to experiment let him fix his own bed and sleep in it, or sleep hanging by his tail, but let mother sleep as she likes, too.

Baby Teeth

Son, three years old, has a front tooth badly decayed and one back tooth too. (Mrs. L. A.)

Answer—Have the dentist put in fillings—it is not difficult and saves the baby teeth so that the permanent teeth will be better. The infant's and young child's nutrition is of importance. Send twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address, for booklet "Save Your Teeth."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Doesn't Want to Live Without A Man Who Doesn't Want Her

Why in the world any girl wants to run after a boy who is not interested in her is something I never can see. Yet my mail is constantly full of letters from girls who are doing this and who want to know how they can do it more successfully.

One of the most foolish letters of this kind I have ever received is the following from a 19-year-old girl who signs herself "Lovesick."

She writes:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I am in love with a fellow who is two years my senior. I have known him for quite some time and have grown to like him. And now we come to a point where I must have him or I want to die.

"In the period of time I have known him, he has never asked me out, yet when I see him, he says nice things to me that make me want him more. Sometimes he notices the funniest things, such as the part in my hair not being straight, or a little stain on my blouse, or a cut lip. This boils me up because I dress up just for him when I know I'll see him.

"About four months ago, I happened to find out that it was his birthday, so I sent him a card and at Christmas time I did the same and sent him a fool package. He took the joke, so he said, but I got nothing out of it but thanks. I also sent him a valentine and thought surely this would soften him up, but it didn't. I went as far as asking him to a dance and he refused. This went on until one night I told him how crazy I was about him, and all he said was, 'What do you want me to do about it?' I went home and cried until it made me sick for the rest of the week and I had to rest awhile.

"Please advise me on what I should do to put him in my power. Do you think he is playing 'hard to get' or is just plain dopey?"

If anybody is dopey here, it is this girl herself. Personally, I think this young man gave her exactly the correct answer, for, after pursuing him, in spite of everything he could do to discourage her, she went out of her way to make a fool of herself by telling him she had an adolescent crush on him, which he could hardly have helped being aware of already.

I don't think this boy is playing "hard to get." I think he is playing "hard to get away." And any girl in her senses would have recognized that a long time ago and let him strictly alone.

For heaven's sake, stop telling yourself that you can't live without this young man. And stop making yourself sick over your inability to interest him. It is just as silly as if you had set your heart on getting the Duke of Windsor and decided you were going to send yourself into a decline if you couldn't have him. The way you are behaving is equivalent to a baby throwing a tantrum because he can't get his hands on the pretty chain around his mother's neck. If you are going to go into an emotional tantrum whenever you can't get what you want, you're going to find yourself butting your head against the stone wall of life very, very often. And it is you, and not the stone wall, who is going to get hurt. You had better set about revising your ideas and attitudes before you get into serious trouble with yourself. And this goes for all the other girls who write me, telling me that they don't want to live if they can't get the attention of a particular boy.

CUT DOWN ON TAKING LAXATIVES THIS WAY

See How Regular You Can Be Every Morning

Try taking Carter's Pills this way: Start with 3 and set a definite time every morning. When you get regular every morning cut down to 2. After a few days, try 1.

Then try taking Carter's every other day. You may even find you can keep regular without any laxative.

You see, Carter's are so tiny you can cut down the dose—from 3 to 1—to fit the needs of your individual system. Without disappointment.

Carter's help clean out your intestinal tract not halfway, but thoroughly. They are doubly effective because made with two vegetable herbs compounded properly for thorough, easy action.

Thousands can cut down on laxative dosing this Carter way. Ask for Carter's Pills [illegible] to get the genuine at any drugstore—35¢, 70¢, $1.00. Start the Carter graduated dose method tonight, and jump out of bed tomorrow rarin' to go.

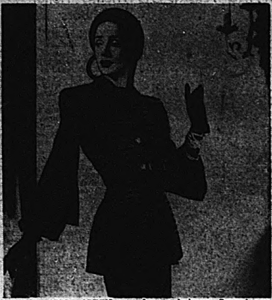
Spring Suit Attraction



By ALICE ALDEN

That Spring suit doesn't have to be a long fitted tunic, nor does the jacket have to be a cutaway or sport a peplum. It might well be a bolero, a very good idea, if it is this beautiful model from one of New York's most famous designers, Samuel Kass. The short jacket of this navy and white striped suit, has full sleeves and double rhinestone buttons. The straight skirt has an all-round peplum to stimulate the long jacket line. A navy crepe long-sleeved blouse that ties at the neck completes the costume.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Son Not "Jr." When His Middle Name Differs From Father's

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In our family we have two problems about names which we wish you would please settle.

Should "junior" be used after the name of a son who has his father's first name (last name too, of course), but whose middle name is different from his father's middle name? I maintain that in this circumstance, "junior" shouldn't be used after the son's name, but my in-laws say it should be.

Now there is a grandson who has been given the exact same name as his father's. I think he should have "junior" after his name. Am I right?

In other words:

(1) The father is: John Henry Smith.

(2) The son is: John Joseph Smith.

(3) The grandson is: John Joseph Smith.

B. C.

You are right on both scores. "Jr." (or "junior") is added to a man's name only when his name is exactly the same as his father's.

Therefore in the circumstances you set forth, (1) the father's name is John Henry Smith; (2) his son's name (middle name different from his father's middle name) is John Joseph Smith, with no suffix; and (3) John Joseph Smith's son, given exactly the same name as his father's, is John Joseph Smith, Jr.

When Ceremony is in Morning, Reception in Evening

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

(1) My plan is: to be married in the morning, with a Nuptial Mass; and the men in the wedding party are to wear cutaway coats, striped trousers, four-in-hand ties and the other formal accessories. Is this correct? (2) If so, may the men wear this same attire for the reception which will be held in the evening? I have been told that they must change to tuxedos or business suits for the evening reception.

M.S.

(1) Yes, if, as I judge, your morning wedding is to be either formal or semi-formal, it is correct for the men in the wedding party to wear formal daytime attire. (2) But, in the unusual circumstance when the reception is held so many hours after the ceremony, the men in the wedding party would, for this evening occasion, change either to formal evening attire ("tails", white tie) or, if you regard this evening reception as not strictly formal, to tuxedos. Business suits for the men in the wedding party would indicate a very informal reception.

Announcing That "Engagement is Terminated"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Three months ago my parents formally announced my engagement in the local newspapers. On last Sunday I definitely decided to break my engagement, and have informed my ex-fiance that the news is to be sent to the same newspapers in which our engagement was announced. Will you please tell us exactly the correct wording for this announcement? We all want to have it announced in the very best of taste, so that there can be no criticism of the wording.

Mary.

There is a very definite formula for this announcement, and, no matter what the circumstances of the breaking of the engagement, it is most important that the words "terminated by mutual consent" be used. This is the form:

"Mr. and Mrs. William York Allen, of 123 Park Street, announce that the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Allen, to Mr. James Pall Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Davis Prentice, of 95 Woodland Terrace, has been terminated by mutual consent."

When Pouring Tea

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When the hostess is serving afternoon tea, should she put the tea in the cup first, or first the cream and sugar and then the tea?

Sally J.

This is the usual procedure when pouring tea: pour the tea into the cup, adding the hot water according to the guest's liking: then add the cream or lemon and the sugar. (The coffee-pouring procedure is usually the reverse: first the cream and sugar are put into the cup, then the coffee is poured over the cream and sugar.)

Fashion Flashes

HOORAY FOR THE SAILOR so popular this Spring—hats we mean. A high-crowned sailor of burnt paillasse has a high crown band of fine black Chantilly-type lace which continues in a snood effect down the back, which is decorated with a cluster of black chiffon grapes.

NEW NOTIONS lend interest to new suits. Navy taffeta is used for a pretty suit that has a simple, buttoned, long jacket front, with an intricately-dipped and pleated fish-tail back.

AT LEAST one simple little go-everywhere silk dress has a place in a well-rounded wardrobe even if the wearer is a suit addict. Beige rayon crepe makes a charming little frock with a cowl-draped scarf-effect in back and front to break the slim bodice lines. A flare panel gives an easy look to the skirt. Waist has posy of self-flowers.

Look After Your House Lighting, Mrs. Housewife

Has it suddenly come to you that tiny lines are appearing around your eyes? That's bad. They are the forerunners of facial furrows, frowns between the eyes, little railroad track trekking across the forehead. What then? Youthful appearance has waned. You won't like that, not a little bit.

Make a survey of the lighting in your home. The fatigue and strain that comes from sewing or reading without proper lighting facilities not only will cause squinting and attendant crows-feet, but also will produce nervous tension. Nervous tension can ruin the sweetest disposition. If mama is fussy and cross, it may be for the reason that her eyes are playing out, and she is not on good terms with the lady in the looking glass.

Dim lights may be restful, and they are perfectly all right if one is not using one's eyes. With good light, the eyes do their work more easily. But there must be no glare. The light must be properly directed and diffused.

In a strong light, the eyelids serve as curtains and protect the delicate optical mechanisms. One squints. The tiny fibres draw together and the flesh draws up into folds.

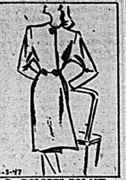
Give thought to the shades on your lighting units. The glare must be shaded, especially on wall brackets and lamps that are on a level with your eyes. The light should fall directly on your book or your work, never into your eyes. Shades should be made of materials that diffuse the glare; they must have a light lining, if made of fabric, so as not to absorb or waste the light. They should be open at the top, so that some of the light reaches the ceiling. All these matters are important to you and your family.

All the appointments of the home should be cheerful. Curtains and draperies of dull, toneless colors are depressing and keep out the daylight. The mistress of the home is entitled to a pleasing setting.

To return to the lighting question: if you observe little crinkles around your eyes; if you have difficulty in reading the telephone directory—that is a good test—hie yourself to an eye specialist. It is more than possible that you need glasses. Don't have any silly ideas about postponing the time for putting on specs because you fancy they will make you look old or austere. So many young people are wearing glasses that putting them on means nothing at all.

Eyestrain may have a deplorable effect upon the health; they can cause headache and extreme nervousness.

It's About Time . . .



By DOLORES BOLAND

IT'S ABOUT TIME to make a versatile woollen coatdress. Wear as a dress now. As a coat over a silk crepe dress later. Choose a pattern with wrap-around skirt, deep armholes and loose sleeves. Bind seams. Do not line. Note placement of buttons.

Vain About Your Shoe Size?

By HELEN FOLLETT

LET us suppose that Mrs. Shopper is out stalking shoes. She tells the clerk the size she wears. He looks a bit dubious, brings out the measuring device, tells her she needs a size larger. She is insulted. Doesn't she know her size? She should! She has been wearing that size for years!

Too true! And the little toe of either foot is folded under with deformed nails due to pressure. Because her feet are uncomfortable she looks as if she were walking on eggs. Her body assumes an ugly pose because it is thrown out of balance. The midsection has increased in size because poor posture brings sagging muscles. All this because of vanity and stubbornness. Can you beat it?

Ill-Fitting Shoes

Ill-fitting shoes not only interfere with locomotion, and cause awkward movements, but they can lead to permanent damage. The contour of the foot will change. Twinging corns and calloused spots will appear.

It often happens that the foot spreads, with the years. An entirely different last may be called for. So don't be arbitrary about the size. Size seven is the average worn by the American girl. Her mama used to pack her trotters into a 4-B when she was young. The young generation is wiser.

Substantial Soles

Select shoes with substantial soles. Leather soles mold themselves to the feet, are not likely to lose shape. They protect the feet from cold pavements. Cold feet make red noses, invite sniffles. Open shoes are not suitable for blustery weather. For street wear a shoe should be practical; it can be just that, still be decorative, have style.

The correct shoe provides support for the waist of the foot. It is wide enough to permit free movements of the toes. The heel should be of moderate height with fairly wide base, if one is to walk in comfort. Spikes are for parties.

The Experts Say . . .

By KAY REX

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa April 9 —(CP)— At this time of the year, a sparkling fruit or vegetable salad for luncheon or supper is as ideal a spring tonic as a new Easter bonnet.

Much of the attractiveness of a salad depends upon the garnish. Sliced pickles, olives, pimento, eggs and highly colored vegetables and fruits all fit the bill, but to garnish frozen or jellied salads it is necessary to line the mould with the garnish before the jelly mixture is poured in. First mix the jelly and, when slightly set dip pieces of garnish in it and arrange them around the inside of the mould. Pour in the jellied mixture and when firm turn out on a bed of lettuce leaves.

Lifting of rationing of canned fruits has tended to leave a quantity of unsweetened fruit on the shelves. Home economists of the consumer section, department of agriculture, have found that although solid pack peaches haven't sugar in them, a can of fruit packed in this way contains more fruit than that packed in syrup. Besides, as peaches are relatively sweet they require little sugar. In addition, this fruit in most cases now is selling below ceiling prices and hence is an excellent buy.

And here is a decorative Peach Salad, ideal for that club luncheon you're planning:

Ingredients: three whole canned peaches; lettuce leaves; one-half pound stoned dates; one-quarter pound chopped nut-meats; one small bottle maraschino cherries.

Cut a peach in half, remove the stone, and put on lettuce leaves with the cut side up. Mix the nutmeats, dates, and cherries, with the cherry juice to make a stiff paste. Form into balls the size and shape of a peach stone and fill the centres of the canned peaches. Top with mayonnaise. Serves six.

Now that tomatoes are becoming cheaper and more plentiful, why not try a tomato and cucumber salad?

Ingredients: one large head of lettuce, four medium-sized tomatoes, one cucumber, two tablespoons minced green pepper, French dressing.

Wash the lettuce and separate the leaves without tearing. Set in a cool place to drain and crisp, then arrange stem end down on a large plate. Slice tomatoes and cucumber and arrange inside the lettuce leaves. Scatter minced green pepper over all. Serve with mayonnaise. Serves eight.

Here and There—Modern living takes an unnecessarily heavy toll in dental ills, say health department officials. Man is no longer willing to eat foods requiring much mastication, and hence jaws and teeth do not get proper exercise. Children early acquire artificial tastes when development is taking place. They eat too much sugar with, and between meals.

Incidentally, nutritionists in the Canadian Red Cross Society (Ontario Division) warn that when children eat a lot of sugar—whether in candy or cakes—between meals, or in smaller amounts within an hour of the regular eating period, they will show little appetite for meals.

WEDDINGS

BARKER—CLARKE

On Saturday, April 5th., the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. "Cliff" Clarke, 288 Ann St., was made doubly attractive with Spring blossoms for the marriage of their daughter, Lillian Elizabeth, (Betty) to Kenneth Leroy Barker, son of Mrs. C. B. Barker, and the late Mr. Barker, of Paris, Ont., with Rev. D. C. Amos of Bridge Street United Church as the officiating clergyman.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride made a charming picture in a street-length dress of Riveria blue crepe, sequin trimmed, matching Juliet cap with a wide brim of stiffened net, and long gloves. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, and she carried a shower bouquet of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Douglas Redick was her sister's only attendant, wearing a street-length dress of Delmonte Rose crepe, sequin trimmed, with matching Juliet cap and gloves. Her shower bouquet was of pale pink roses.

Mr. C. B. Barker of Hamilton, ably assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for immediate relatives and close friends, the bride's mother receiving in a navy blue ensemble with a corsage of Talisman roses, assisted by Mrs. C. B. Barker Sr., in a navy dress with a similar corsage.

The bride's table covered with a lace trimmed linen cloth was centred with a large wedding cake, topped with a small vase filled with pale pink sweetpeas and crystal bowls of pink and mauve sweetpeas, flanked with ivory tapers in crystal holders.

Mr. and Mrs. Barker left by train for a honeymoon in Ottawa, and will later take up residence in Hamilton, Ont.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. C. B. Barker Sr., Mrs. J. B. Lilly, Miss M. C. Barker, all of Paris, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Barker, Jr., Hamilton; Mrs. "Ted" Wisner, Mrs. R. O. Chandler, Miss Shirley Chandler, all of Grand Rapids, Mich., Mrs. Ed. Morrow and Miss Joan Morrow, of Toronto.

Prior to her marriage Mrs. Barker was the guest of honor at several pre-nuptial parties, with Mrs. Douglas Redick as hostess for a personal shower; Mrs. J. Kropinak and Miss Helen Redick joint-hostesses for a cup and saucer shower, Misses Marian Robson and Dorothy Wonnacott, joint hostesses for a miscellaneous shower, also her business associates of the Accounting Department in the Income Tax Office tendered her a joint dinner party and cup and saucer shower at the Queen's Hotel.

SILLS—McCALL

At one o'clock on the afternoon of April 5th., the United Church parsonage at Wooler, Ont., was the scene for a quiet but very pretty wedding when Dorothy Margaret McCall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Elbert McCall, of Wooler, Ont., became the bride of Frederick Campbell Sills, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Sills, Halloway, Ont., with Rev. W. T. R. Delve as the officiating clergyman.

The bride was very attractive in a poudre blue crepe dress, with a corsage of pink roses and white sweetpeas. Her only attendant was Miss Jean Sills, niece of the groom, of Plainfield, Ont, who wore a dress of yellow crepe, with a corsage of Talisman roses and mauve sweetpeas.

Mr. Wilbur McCall, brother of the bride, ably performed the duties of the groomsman.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Sills left for a motor trip to Western Ontario. After returning they will take up residence at Halloway, Ont.

The Art of Applying Make-Up your skin and apply with care. Select a lipstick color suitable for

By HELEN FOLLETT

SOME girls have their own systems of applying synthetic colors to their complexions. They're clever with facial decorations, applying the paint and the calcimine without getting scenic. They choose the right shade of powder, rouge and lipstick. If they play with eye shadows they manage to attain the mysterious effect. It is a gift.

Other women have found help in beauty shops. Time was — in grannie's day—when a facial operator was hired because she had strong muscles in her arms. And what a terrible walloping she gave granne's map!

Skill and Delicacy

All is different now. The operator, schooled in facial anatomy, understanding the fabric of interlacing muscles, works with skill and delicacy. The old method broke down tissues; new methods build them up. And every employee who specializes in facial treatments is supposed to know something—if not even more than that—about laying on the gardenia surface and the high lights.

The first requirement in this occupation of improving upon nature, or putting on youth where it isn't, is to select colors that are not only suitable for the skin, but are flattering. If factory blushes and ruby lips don't make a girl look better, fresher and younger she might as well chuck the beauty kit out of the window, depend solely upon good old soap and water. One needs the right materials and good judgment with which to apply them.

Very Dry Skin

If the skin is excessively dry, one will have trouble with rouge and powder. A cream should be used freely after the face washing, most of it wiped away before playing with make-up. Lots and lots of cream should be frictioned into the skin at bedtime, allowed to stay on to seep into the flesh. Some women attain beauteous effects with liquid powders, but not if they use too much or do not remove the surplus with a camel's hair complexion brush.

Penny-Pinching Spouses Scored by Angry Wives

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, (CP)—The Women's Freedom League, founded in 1907 by ex-members of the Pankhurst suffragette organization, has a new axe to grind. It wants to improve the legal status of British wives.

At present, members say, a wife's legal position is too precarious. So long as her husband does not let her become a public charge, he is not legally bound to give her any money at all.

While it is agreed that most husbands give their wives enough to run a home, there are "the unprincipled few" who spend this money on personal pleasures—including drink and gambling.

"We believe the married woman is entitled to a fair share of the family income—by law if necessary," said Mrs. Corbett Ashby, the League's energetic president.

Outspoken league members raised the matter in public recently when tales were told of husbands who handed over all their money on pay night; husbands who gave their wives enough for the home but nothing for themselves; husbands who spent all and paid nothing.

Meanwhile, the battle to secure greater recognition of women in public life continues. As proof of gains in 1946 the League points to a woman governor at Holloway Women's Prison, a woman stipendiary magistrate in London, 24 women M.P.'s and a woman minister of education (Ellen Wilkinson, who died recently.)

On the debit side, the League lists 18 bodies from which women are excluded. Among these are the Central Electricity Board, Charity Commissioners, Coal Commissioners, London Passenger Transport Board, Medical Research Council and the Port of London Authority.

"We plan to do better this year," said Mrs. A. E. Bush, a league official. "It is ridiculous that women should have no voice in such important functions as are performed by these organizations."

Another League slogan for 1947 is: "Open the professions to women! Women have invaded most professions in the last century but there are still a few from which they are barred.

"We shall deal with those in due time," said Mrs. Bush grimly. "Women helped to win the war. Now the government and the trade unions should help them to enter any trade or profession they choose and with the same apprenticeship, training and pay as the men."

NUCLEUS OF FUND FOR U. K.

St. Catharines, April 9 — (CP) —This city has $800 in the treasury raised for the Lord Mayor's fund which will likely form the nucleus of a fund to be raised to assist Britain in her food and clothing shortage. More than $20,000 was raised for the Lord Mayor's fund during the war and the $800 remained when the fund was closed. Now it is proposed to organize a committee to raise funds for Britain. City council last night approved such an organization.

SAGA OF STITCHES

London — (CP) — All through the war, Janet Barrow, BBC actress, stitched her masterpiece, a saga of Britain's people in the Second World War. Working in air-raid shelters and blacked-out trains, Miss Barrow finally completed her 10-foot tapestry one year after VE-Day and hopes to give it to a restored London building.

Friends Honor Neighbors Before Leaving City

A number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Climo, Evans St., gathered at their home last evening for a surprise and farewell party with Mrs. G. Coulter and Mrs. Wood as joint hostesses.

Entertainment was in the form of bridge and euchre games after which Mrs. Coulter read an address and Mrs. Wood presented Mrs. Climo with a silk umbrella, and Mr. Climo with a "Seaforth" shaving set. Although this congenial couple were taken entirely by surprise, they graciously expressed their appreciation and gratitude for the kindness of their friends in tangibly expressing good wishes prior to their departure for Banff, Alta., where Mr. Climo has purchased an interest in a Tourist Resort. They expect to leave Belleville about the middle of April.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses and their assistants.

Spring Festival Program at St. Michael's Enjoyed

A large and enthusiastic audience crowded into St. Michael's Academy on Tuesday evening to enjoy a delicious dinner and entertainment provided by the affiliated Catholic societies it being the occasion of the annual Spring Festival that will continue for the next two nights. Supper was served early and then a social hour was enjoyed before the stage program was given. The Catholic Women's League had charge of the supper and as usual a most delightful dinner was served to a large number. The Knights of Columbus members are in charge of the games, the Holy Name Society under direction of Allan Meagher have charge of the stage show and the Children of Mary are conducting the fish pond. At the conclusion of the program a dance program was given and thoroughly enjoyed by the younger set of the Parish and city.

During the course of the dinner Ralph Beasley gave an organ recital on the electric organ so kindly loaned by Jack Bush. The chief item of the entertainment period was a quizz show conducted by Bill Arnold as Master of Ceremonies and Maureen Upper Violet Graham, Mary Jean Hudon, Dick Flynn, Pat Shiels and Dennis O'Connor took part. So accurate were these contestants in the answers given that only a $5 voucher remains in the Jack pot to start tonight's show. Marjorie and Edna McPherson of Corbyville, delighted with two numbers, "The Desert Song" and the "Anniversary Song." Three Bars and Clef Bill Doyle on the drums, Bill Navin at the piano and Arnold Carter on the bass fiddle played "Alice Blue Gown." The Quinte quartet from Trenton composed of Claude Huffman, Lloyd Mitts, Frank Wilson and Robert Ellis gave out with some close harmony and were given enthusiastic applause. Sharon Lucy, with a fine mezzo soprano sang "Villia." The Donovan dance team completed the show with a number of dance routines in their own intimitable style.

The program for tonight will be the Old Timers' Garden Party and on Thursday night—Hollywood Party.

CONFINED A LONG WHILE

Toronto, April 9 — (CP)—Mrs. John DeGruchy, widow of the former president of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, died Monday night in hospital after a lingering illness. She was 79. Stricken while watching a football game last September, she had been confined to bed since that time.

Trousseau Tea Given by Mother For Bride-Elect

A charmingly arranged Trousseau Tea was held Wednesday afternoon and evening, April 2nd., at her home on Ann St., when Mrs. R. "Cliff" Clarke entertained in honor of her eldest daughter, Lillian Elizabeth, (Betty) bride-elect, whose marriage was a recent interesting social event.

Spring flowers and sweet peas were used through all the rooms, with Mrs. Clarke and her daughter receiving the guests in the living room, while personal friends of the bride-to-be displayed the trousseau and gifts, and others assisted with the serving in the tea room.

A linen cloth, trimmed with Indian lace, covering the tea table was centred with a crystal bowl holding vari-colored Spring blossoms, flanked by ivory tapers in crystal candelabra. Mrs. M. J. Clarke and Mrs. H. J. Clarke presided over the silver service.

Barbara Ann Scott Refuses Movie Offers

Timmins, April 9 — (CP) — Mrs. Clyde Scott, mother of Barbara Ann, world figure - skating champion, said Tuesday in an interview that they had been "hounded from pillar to post by the movie people but we have no intention of taking their offers."

The champion's mother said she wanted Barbara Ann, here to perform at a Porcupine Skating Club Carnival, "to be a normal everyday girl and her objective now is the Olympic championship."

The 18-year-old Ottawa girl trained at the summer skating school of the Porcupine Skating Club last year in preparation for the world championships at Stockholm and will repeat the training grind again this year during July and August.

A crowd of 500 persons surged about the train bearing Barbara Ann as it pulled into Schumacher although her arrival was unheralded.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

If you are in pain over your bids in bridge, it is time you did something about it. Understand its cause and the remedy will be easy. Thereafter you can avoid what has been troubling you.

Realize that bids are simply common words for describing a hand. By common words I mean that each bid has a natural meaning; a pair of words the interpretation of which is quite obvious.

The numbers announce how many tricks are to be taken in excess of six (pair average). The suits tell you what you like for trump. No likee trump is no-trump. Pass says you have no more than expected.

Experts experiment with artificial meanings. Avoid these until you are confident of applying bids in their most literal sense. Even then, the most masterful players need no more than one or two.

Assume you are convinced that bids are naturals. Also that they are employed in the most natural order. Now what if the words are used in an unexpected position? They must be special signals.

Apply this to numbers. Suppose a higher-than-necessary number (a jump) is used. It must be intended as a special signal. It is. It is a signal that promises enough to help make a game.

This goes for an opening bid. The lowest number in an opening bid could be one. Therefore, an opening bid of two is a signal that the hand expects to make a game. This is its general signal meaning.

For all practical purposes, an opener should try for a game if he has at least nine tricks. Thus comes the rule that a forcing-to-game opener promises a hand with not less than nine tricks.

Count the tricks you have in this hand:

♠K Q 9 4 2
♥None
♦A 8 5
♣A Q 7 6 3

You have eight tricks; five high cards and three short hearts. Not enough for an opening of two The opening is one spade.

Signals abused keep partners confused.

CANUCKS STAY IN THE FIGHT FOR ABBOTT CUP

Wallop Brandon Elks 7-4 With Prystal Scoring Goals and Getting Five Assists

Regina, April 9 — (CP)—With Metro (Marvellous) Prystal uncorking a brilliant display, Moose Jaw Canucks stayed in the fight for the Abbott Cup and the Western Canada junior hockey championship by walloping the Brandon Elks 7-4 here last night. The Moose Jaw victory forced a seventh game in the best-of-seven series which Brandon leads 3-2 in games with one game tied.

The seventh contest is scheduled for here Thursday night, and the confident Canucks say they will "push Elks out of the rink."

A paid attendance of 5,132 sent gate receipts up to $7,000, largest of the series, and that figure is expected to be topped by Thursday's crowd, as fans and scribes described the game as the "best ever seen in the Queen City Gardens."

Prystal wound up with one goal and five assists while his linemates Vic Kreklewetz and Angus Juckes banged in two goals and assisted one apiece. George Hunchuk and Harvey Stein netted the others.

The Elks goals were spread evenly between the first and second lines with captain Walt Hergesheimer and Ray Manson counting for the first stringers and Bud Evans and Freddie Dunsmore tallying one apiece for the second.

The Movie Column

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Snapshots of Europe collected at random by Robert Taylor and his wife, Barbara Stanwyck, include the time on the Champs Elysees in Paris when an American sailer, seeing and recognizing them, shouted to a friend, "Hey, Stan, Americans!"

The couple returned to New York from their overseas jaunt rather the worse for wear after the unexpectedly tumultuous enthusiasm of crowds of their London fans at the opening of Miss Stanwyck's new picture, "The Other Love." After considerable uproar the bobbies and mounted policemen cleared a lane for them to the theatre, but not before Taylor got a black eye trying to protect his wife from the crush.

Their experience with that crowd and others during their London stay left Taylor suitless and first thing after landing in New York he had two suits sent airmail from their Hollywood home.

Their stay in Paris was quieter. "You should have heard me kick French around but Robert had his Pomona College French—the snob," Miss Stanwyck said.

Canada in Color.

The Canada Carries On series issued by the National Film Board during the war to show the many facets of Canadian war activity, will be coming along soon in peacetime form. At least two and possibly more of these documentaries will be in color.

One, "Red Runs the Fraser," will be a screen record of the annual salmon run in the Fraser River in British Columbia with millions of pink and red salmon jamming the blue-green waters of the river on their way to the spawning grounds. Another will be "Broncho Busters," the short colored masterpiece on the Calgary Stampede.

One Acre of Gophers.

This department was jolted out of its customary lethargy about publicity stunts the other day when it became a land-owner — one acre of sun-drenched prairie equipped with gophers, rattlesnakes and no water in Northern Mexico — by courtesy of the Sea of Grass Co., Inc., a subsidiary of Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer. The handsome deed to the parcel was signed, sealed and sworn by a notary — and was entirely legal. It was immediately recalled that M-G-M has just issued a frontier drama, "The Sea of Grass," laid in the territory and starring Katharine Hepburn and Spencer Tracy.

Legion Bowlers Enjoy Trip To Peterborough

On Saturday, in spite of the gloomy weather, four cars of Legion No. 99 Bowlers, two men's teams and one team of ladies, accepted the invitation of Comrade Geo. Gimblett, District F, Commander of Peterborough Branch No. 52 and bowled a three game series, in Peterborough. This was strictly a goodwill visit and contest, with no scores for mention. After the game they went to the home of Comrade Gimblett and were entertained to refreshments and a very enjoyable evening. The Ladies of Peterborough Auxiliary deserve a good bit of credit for the entertainment as well as the Comrades. Branch 99 of Belleville will return the favors when Peterborough comes to this city on Saturday, April 12. More of these visits will be featured during the coming season with the various branches.

PASSES "SPLIT" BILLS

Toronto, April 9 — (CP) — A 16-year-old East York boy surrendered and confessed to police yesterday that he had split $1 and $5 bills and passed them on downtown merchants. He said he felt "bad about it" and wanted to be arrested so he would not continue doing it. Police laid charges of defrauding and obtaining money by fraud. "Please don't tell mother" he pleaded.

Light of Freedom Shines In Darkening World Price Says

Hamilton, Ont., April 9.—In a world moving toward the darkness of collectivism, North America is a "pinpoint of light shining for the free individual, for government operated for the sake of individuals, and for freedom of opportunity and conscience," Gwilym A. Price, President of the Westinghouse Electric Corporation, declared here last night.

Even though the United States and Canada enjoy a standard of living unequalled by any collectivist state, there are many people in these countries who "do not appreciate our freedom and are ready to throw them overboard," Mr. Price told the annual meeting of the Hamilton Chamber of Commerce. He continued:

"It may alarm you to know that in the United States— the very citadel of private capitalism —a national survey by The Psychological Corporation showed that 24 per cent of our people believe that they would get more for their money if all businesses were owned and operated by the government. An additional 9 per cent feel that they would get just as much for their money under government ownership and control.

Have Swallowed Communist Line

"That means that about one-third of our population has swallowed the communist party line and don't know it. There is every reason to believe that most of these people have not thought the problem through for themselves. They must think that by putting all business under the state they will eliminate and remove all the evils which they attribute to the profit motive.

"But," Mr. Price added, "instead of blaming the profit motive, we should give it credit for most of the good things all of us enjoy today. Business should apologize only when it fails to earn profits—not when it succeeds.

"The profit motive drives private enterprise to make things better and cheaper in order to attract your dollars and mine. In combination with plain, old-fashioned competition, it sees to it that we as individual consumers get the most for our money."

For example, he said, with only about 7 per cent of the world population, the United States and Canada have more than half of the world's telephones, more than 85 per cent of the world's automobiles, nearly one-half of the world's radios, and almost all of the world's bathtubs.

"An even more convincing measure of the productivity of our system," he said, "is our increase in purchasing power that has followed in the wake of our steady rise in horsepower. The daily horsepower-hours of mechanical energy available per capita in 1939 was 11.9 in the United States, and only 1.9 in the Soviet Union. I have deliberately selected the one nation whose economic philosophy contrasts most sharply with ours.

Russians 60 Years Behind

"The Russians are now just about where we were 60 years ago, at the very dawn of the electrical age. The American workman can earn one day's food for his family by about an nour and a half's labor, while his Russian cousin must work 10 hours for the same result. In other words, the Russian workman has the use of one-sixth the mechanical power, and consequently takes six times as long to produce an equal product."

The Westinghouse President pointed out that the United States produced nearly 200 billion dollars worth of goods and services in 1946, with 58 million people at work. After paying wages, taxes, and all other costs, the nation's businesses made a profit of 12 billion dollars. Of that 12 billion, business paid dividends of 5 billion dollars. The remaining 7 billion dollars, plus some 6 1-2 billion dollars in new corporate securities, were plowed back into the nation's business to build reserves, working capital, and expanded facilities.

"It is this traditional free enterprise method of putting profits to work that is the secret of success in our two countries. It is this kind of planting of seed money that has increased the investment in the United States industry per worker from $500 in 1849 to the neighborhood of $6,000 per worker today," Mr. Price said, adding:

"Competition is an automatic regulator of prices. Whenever any company charges too much for its products, you can be sure that some enterpriser will make an equally good product for less and take the trade away.

"When our system ran into the shallows a few years back, the impulse was to turn over to a group of planners in our governments all the unsolved problems. Fortunately for us, our dip into collectivism served only to confirm our past and present thinking, that we can do better ourselves.

"What happened to us then, is now happening everywhere else in the world. Many nations across the oceans emerged from the war with economic chaos, insecurity, national weakness. They were sick and they turned to the medicine of collectivism in one form or another.

"Perhaps they do not realize it, but when they placed the responsibility for their welfare in the hands of a small group of planners, they sold their birthright for a mess of promises."

Have Shown That Marx Was Wrong

Recalling that just a century ago Karl Marx issued his manifesto announcing the approaching end of the capitalist system and the collapse of free society, the Westinghouse President pointed out that since that time Canada and the United States have realized most of their great development.

"Without issuing a manifesto of our own," he said, "we have shown by our works that Marx was wrong.

"In Marxian Russia, 30 years after the Communist revolution, low living standards are today's lot for all but the 3,000,000 or so members of the Communist party 'master class'.

"Even though they have imported our skills and tools and machines, they are still harassed by never-ending shortages and repeated failures of ambitious five-year plans to duplicate our standards. Why? Because they have failed to import the one vital ingredient—the very system that makes all of these things work.

"That is why today there is an iron curtain around Russia. It is there not so much to keep us from knowing Russia as it is to keep the Russian people from awakening to what people in free lands are enjoying. A nation that has confidence in its system needs no iron curtain."

Points To Job At Home

Calling attention to problems at home, Mr. Price declared that we must correct our faults and demonstrate within our borders the merits of the American way of doing business. As individuals, we can help educate those about us in the principles of freedom that have made our countries great, he said, adding that business executives must work out a more effective basis for co-operation between management and labor—one that will result in increased productivity for all.

"We must now, and in the critical days ahead, enlarge and deepen our understanding of our way of life," Mr. Price concluded. "It is bigger than a system; it is a precious structure resting on four bases: (1) democracy in government to make certain that no one class profits at the expense of others; (2) a democratic private enterprise that rewards individual effort; (3) freedom of speech; and (4) above all, our religious liberty.

"Remove any one of these and the structure will collapse."

That's Cass Daley breathing down Bracken's neck. Others in the film are Spike Jones and his City Slickers and dancer Johnny Coy.

Henry A. Wallace Arrives in Britain For Lecture Tour

London, April 9 — (Reuters)—Henry A. Wallace, former United States vice-president, arrived by air yesterday to begin his lecture tour of Britain sponsored by leftist British weekly the New Statesman.

Wallace said his visit was an effort to discover in England and Western Europe the forces that will play the most part in the uniting of the world on behalf of peace.

"I call them the progressive forces," he said. "They are the people who look ahead not behind, up not down."

In a written statement, Wallace said "In common cause we must pledge our faith and our resources to the success of the United Nations, for the future of every man depends upon peace, and in the preservation of the United Nations lies our best, perhaps our only hope for lasting peace."

Cude Predicts Bright Future For Hockey in Rouyn, Noranda

By JOHN PATERSON
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Noranda, Que., April 9 — (CP) — Wilf Cude, the slim Welshman who used to boot out pucks as goal tender for Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League, predicts a bright hockey future for the twin mining towns of Rouyn and Noranda.

Established for a year in this Northwest Quebec town as an oil company manager, Cude still gives many hours of his time to hockey and under his coaching the local junior team won the Northern Ontario Hockey Association junior "B" championship this season.

"I've seen more potentially good hockey players up here in Rouyn-Noranda than in any town of comparable size I have visited," Cude said.

Cude picked up in hockey here where he left off in Montreal. Last season he coached the junior Canadiens of Montreal into the eastern final of the Memorial Cup playoffs, losing to Toronto St. Mikes.

Associated with the professional Canadiens organization since 1932, Wilf is sending several local players to the Montreal club for trials next fall and has in young Gordie Oulmet a centre whom he describes as "a potential Buddy O'Connor."

Player Undecided

Oulmet, slight, but wiry, weighs 130 pounds and is undecided yet whether to make hockey or baseball his career. He left here this week to join the Amsterdam baseball team in the Canadian-American League but Cude says that if he returns to hockey he may develop into one of the game's great players.

Wilf's interest in youngsters extends beyond the hockey rink and he is a keen supporter of a proposed community centre project being planned for his district.

"I think the boys and girls of the north country need more attention than they do down south where they have no many more facilities for planned recreation," he said.

"We have to provide some interest in their own community if we are to keep them from drifting southward. When they go down to college they form attachments which tend to draw them away from their own home town."

Rouyn-Noranda athletic facilities at present consist of an athletic field, with most of the diamond built over the underground workings of the Noranda mine, Canada's biggest copper and gold producer. There also is a natural ice arena with accommodation for 1,200 persons.

Sports Shorts from Britain

London, April 9 (CP)—The Old Man, who tells how the wind is blowing at Lord's cricket ground, has been knocked off his perch and broken in three places.

The Old Man, also known as Father Time stood with sickle in hand, complete with cricketbat, stumps and balls, atop the famous grandstand.

He was found grounded at dawn and rushed to Lord's basement hospital but his injuries were too serious and a London smithy took over. His beard was bent and the off-stump—supporting spindle of the whole structure—suffered a compound fracture and was cause of his fall.

The Old Man was designed by Sir Herbert Baker and the die-hards say he is symbolic of the immortality of the game, which, though the match may end, goes on through the ages. But he's had his setbacks.

He was toppled over in 1939 — also by a gale—and again in 1940 when a vagabond barrage balloon bumped into him. He spent the war years with the other relics in Lord's committee rooms.

The Old Man will probably be ready to "oversee" the test match between England and South Africa starting at Lord's June 21.

There is much speculation over England's chances against the Springboks following the drubbing given the M.C.C. team that went to Australia during the winter.

Since the two countries first met, England has won 29 matches and South Africa 12. Twenty-three matches have been drawn. In the last series of tests, played in South Africa in 1939, England was victorious in one test, four others ending in stalemates.

The South Africans play their first game in England against Worcestershire on April 30.

JERSEY GIANTS MAY EVACUATE LEAGUE CELLAR

Team Cannot be Tabled Until All Help Arrives From New York Giants

By DICK DUFF
(Hudson Dispatch)

Jacksonville, Fla., April 9 — (AP) — Jersey City's chances of evacuating the International League's cellar can not be properly tabbed until more help from the parent New York Giants arrives.

Bruno Betzel, who slid all the way to eighth place as Jersey City pilot last season, will not venture any prediction until Mel Ott finishes his ax-swinging at the Polo Grounds.

At the moment his long suit seems to be his pitching staff. Beyond such seasoned hurlers as Jake Wade, Jack Kraus, Bill Emmerich and Mike Mellis, and Mike Kash, a reliable relief hurler, the Jersey pilot has Sheldon Jones and Mario Picone, nine and 14 game winners at Jacksonville respectively and Roy Bridges, who wrapped up 17 victories at Manchester.

Mickey Grasso, who hit .328 for Jersey City last year, is the top catcher.

Norman Jaeger, a solid slugger, looks like the regular first baseman. Russ Wein and Burgess Whitehead are locked in a battle for second base while Hal Quick, drafted from Nashville and Bill Lillard are fighting it out for the shortfield berth. Pending the expected arrival of Bobby Thomson, who hit 26 home runs last season, Billy Gardner must be rated as the regular third baseman.

Jack Graham, recently obtained from the Giants along with Grasso, Jones and pitcher Ralph Volpi, and Less Layton, a regular last season, and Garland Lawing, currently rate as the first string outfield.

BASKETBALL

New. York, April 9 —(AP)— With Chicago Stags taking Washington Capitols over the hurdles in their best three-of-seven series and New York and Cleveland winding up their best-of-three set tonight, the Basketball Association of America today laid plans for the second round of post-season playoffs.

The surprising Stags dumped the Caps 67-55 at Chicago last night for their third straight triumph and now need only one more victory to send them into the championship round. The series resumes at Washington tomorrow night.

Philadelphia downed St. Louis in the series between the runners-up in the two divisions and now meets the survivor of tonight's game between the third-place finishers to determine who will play in the finals against the winner of the Chicago-Washington duel.

HAMILTON TIGERS NOT HAPPY OVER PLAYOFF DATES

Management of Team Thinks Squad Should be Given More Games in Hamilton

Hamilton, April 9 — (CP) — Irked into starting the 'rassle over home dates' that comes regular as playoff time in hockey, Hamilton Tigers today found only scant consolation in their installation as slight favorites to shunt Moncton Hawks off the Allan Cup trail.

The Ontario champions start this best-of-five series at home against the Maritime titleholders, with the winner to meet the Quebec titlists, either Montreal Royals or Sherbrooke St. Francoise. But the Hawks and the Tigers then move to Toronto to finish the series.

The Bengals aren't so confident as their fans that they'll get by this series.

Moncton, fresh from polishing off Cornwall, Ottawa and district champions, appeared a little slower than the Tigers but showed a fine passing game. Their playing coach, Windy Steel, breezed confidence.

"The team is ready," he asserted. "The boys have been sailing along at a merry clip. They've won their last 12 starts and in some games, ran up a score of double figures."

McManus Ready to go

His enthusiasm was heightened when he learned the veteran Sammy McManus has recovered from an injury and will start tonight.

The Tigers also had good news. Dillon Brady, starry leftwinger who missed their playoff series with Hollinger Greenshirts thru a shoulder injury, was ready to go.

But that didn't make Hamilton feel any better over the announcement of Norman Dawe, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association vice-president, in Montreal yesterday that the series shifts to Toronto after tonight.

Team manager Percy Thompson said last night the Tigers will protest. He pointed out that Hamilton played three games against the Beavers at Saint John and two more at Toronto and Ottawa against Pembroke last season. Their only home game was staged in the series in which they eliminated Montreal Royals for the eastern title.

Then they went west for five games in which Calgary Stampeders eliminated them in the Allan Cup final.

Pauline Betz, Tennis Champ Is Suspended

New York, April 9 — (AP) — Suspension of tennis champion Pauline Betz by the United States Lawn Tennis Association means among other things there will be a feminine battle royal at Forest Hills late in August such as has not been seen there in some years.

Miss Betz, who with Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke was removed from amateur ranks yesterday because of a projected tour of the pair as professionals, had come to dominate the women's division, but there has been a terrific scrap for second place.

Four girls, three of them from the United States west coast and one from Florida, must be figured in the running for the crown.

Any one of the quartet—Louise Brough, Margaret Osborne and Mrs. Dorothy Canning Todd, all Californians, and Doris Hart of Miami — could take the title.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor.

The stage is all set for the fine boxing card being presented at Trenton Air Station tonight when the cream of the district's leather-pushers will sling mitts in what should be one of the best beak-busting melanges seen in these parts in many a moon. Four thrill-packed five round bouts are slated which features Billy Goulding, Oshawa sensation and Johnny Page, Ottawa, in the main billing. Then there is Belleville's own George Polmanter, who meets Johnny Keeler of Oshawa, Nicky O'Neill, Brockville, versus Joey Cardinal, Oshawa and Eddie Senes, RCAF, Trenton bucko, who lives on fighting clashing with Glen Dafoe, Trenton.

* * *

Four other action-packed tilts round out the card and these ousts will see such fighters as Joey Wilson, Belleville; Cooney Goodman; Girt Jones, Brockville; Billy Northcote, Oshawa, Pal Gisham, Brockville, Don Blair, Brockville and Billy Smart, Oshawa, in action.

The curtain goes up in the drill hall at 8.15 and the fans should get there early if they want choice ringside seats. The show promises to be fast, and thrilling, and one that will send the fans home talking.

* * *

It was the small hours of the morning. In the YMCA building all was quiet with the exception of an occasional cough, or the quiet swish of a "man" as it was moved on a checker board. Outside the city was hushed. Traffic was stilled with the exception of an occasional car taking benighted travellers home. Inside, men were hunched over checker boards for the Eastearn Ontario title was at stake.

* * *

No one paid much attention to the tall, fair stranger who entered the building while the semi-finals were in progress. He evinced marked interest in the game, watching plays closely. Then as if tiring of this kind of sport he turned away. Being of a curious turn of mind, for that was his business, he opened a conversation with one of those present, apparently idle at the moment.

* * *

The conversation, naturally turned to the indoor sport — and the first thing both knew, they were bent over a checker board. The tall stranger, apparently knew plenty of moves, for when the fifth game was over he had won four of them. Then he disappeared. But today he learned that the chance acquaintance he met and defeated four times, was the ultimate Eastern Ontario champion.

Kingston Ponies in the Border League, will start training on April 28, and according to Kingston reports will be well fortified in all positions. Manager Ben Lady is slated to once again take over the helm and he has ordered thirteen of last year's Ponies to report for the Spring training grind.

Lady, who is a catcher, pitcher, and general utility man will again be for the odd chore besides his managerial duties, and another back stop is "Chuck" Alltop. Last years pitchers who will be seen in Spring action include Arnie Jarrell Stanley Stenoff; Art Cook, Ken Terry and Ben Wysocki. Infielders are Don Cook, the London sensation; Walter Gubernat and Chuck Pollard, while the outer gardeners are the venerable Vinny McQuade, Kingston's own; Buddy Heximer and Joe Lay.

New additions to the pitching staff are Pat Boehmer former netminder of the St. Michael's Majors, and the junior who stopped the redoubtable Ottawa Wrightsides, Belleville conquerors, when the Kitchener juniors won the Ontario title last year; Joe Lease and John Mattola.

* * *

The annual meeting of the Belleville and District Baseball Association will be held in the Memorial Arena on Tuesday next, April 15.. that is, President Don Thomas announced today. The meeting will be an open one and all players, officials and supporters of the various teams of the loop are requested to put in an appearance. There are several matters on the agenda, particularly those pertaining to this year's activities, not to mention the election of officers. With the highly successful season of 1946 behind it, the executive feels that the meeting should be one of utmost importance to not only teams and officials but to the baseball public as well. Remember, Tuesday next at the Arena, and the proceedings will start at sharp 7:30. Be there, eh?

Orchids to the Kiwanis Club and especially its Sports Committee under new chairman Kiwanian Fred Symons for a highly enjoyable party in Kiwanis Centre last night. There was a large turnout of players, wives, sweethearts, officials, sportsmen and others to honor the Kiwanis Junior Baseball squad that went through to the provincial semi-finals last year.

• • •

The kids had a grand time. They were presented with pictures of the team, handsome wallets, and plenty of good wishes and congrats. They heard an outstanding address on sport by Bob Goldham, injured defenceman of the Toronto Maple Leafs, danced to their hearts' content, played cards, euchre and bridge that is, and topped off a grand evening by gorging themselves with sandwiches, cake, cookies, biscuits, coffee and ice cream. It was a grand party and a fine gesture on the part of Kiwanis President Jack White and his associates.

Regina, April 9 — (CP) — The possibility of an unprecedented blackballing of a hockey club by league-masters looms for next season with junior ice moguls receiving frowns for alleged waving of large, tempting banknotes before young pucksters.

The scramble for junior stars is assuming proportions of professional bids and in it Dave (Regina Leader-Post) Dryburgh sees what might be "the beginning of the end."

The Brandon Elks, who admittedly shelled out $36,000 for their current squad, appear to be the focal point of the displeasure.

Dryburgh quotes Pat Lyon, Winnipeg Monarchs president, as saying that Manitoba teams are "more than slightly annoyed over Brandon's player raids and they might refuse to play with the Elks next season.

"Why they're offering up to $100 a week for players now," protested Lyon.

Krug (Brandon Sun) Crawford explained Brandon's ability to pay the $36,000 by the fact that the club leases the local rink, precluding the slice taken off other team's home game receipts. The gate took care of all the expenses.

Moose Jaw Canucks and Regina Patricias have the right idea, Dryburgh says. The Saskatchewan clubs pay only players' tuition and all profits are tossed into a pot for the players.

"But it's difficult to sell a young athlete on that setup when other teams are touring the country dangling century notes before their eyes," he said.

This, however, all started on a hopeful note. The Regina sports editor saw a healthy sign for junior hockey with Medicine Hat, Alta., announcing its plan to enter a club in the western circuit.

Allan Cup Survivors

Kiwanis Junior Baseball Squad Given Billfolds and Picture At Party Held at Kiwanis Centre

Bob Goldham of Toronto Maple Leafs Special Speaker; Moose Matthews and Huck Reeves Presented With Cup and Lighter for Batting Prowess

It was "junior" night at Kiwanis Centre last night, and the service club earned another feather of achievement for its figurative cap in the role of hosts at a highly-enjoyable party at which it paid tangible tribute to the Kiwanis Junior Baseball squad which went to the Ontario Baseball Association semi-finals in 1946 only to be eliminated by the starry Ottawa Wrightvilles team.

The club, through the medium of its sports committee under Chairman Fred Symons, presented the players and officials with team photographs, attractively mounted, and handsome leather wallets.

Other presentations included that of the National Billiards Silver Trophy, emblematic of the batting championship of the Belleville Baseball Association League, to "Moose" Matthews, well-known player-coach of the Trenton Flyers team, and a handsome Ronson lighter to George (Huck) Reeves, who won the batting title of the junior team. The "Moose" batted an even .487 during the season while "Huck" was second in the loop slugging with the fine average of .460.

Excellent Address

Then there was an excellent address by Bob Goldham, injured defence player of the Toronto Maple Leafs who spoke to the boys on different phases of sport, and what young players should do, if they wish to make the professional type, a career.

And there was plenty of entertainment. Magician Len Fozard, a member of Kiwanis, delighted the large crowd with his sleight-of-hand tricks, or "confusions" as he terms them; dancing to Mrs. Wm. Wareham's delightful piano rhythms for the younger crowd, and upstairs, bridge and euchre. The evening was "topped off" with sandwiches, cake, coffee and ice cream, served by club members.

Many Special Guests

Among the special guests at the party were representatives of the league teams, relatives and friends of players and officials of the junior squad, and well-known sportsmen of the city. Members of the Kiwanis Club catered to the well-being of their guests.

Club President Jack White formally welcomed the assemblage and stated that the club was happy to have sponsored the the junior team. Kiwanis was proud of their achievements last year and hoped they would do as well if not better in 1947. He announced that with the aid of other city service clubs a juvenile league would be formed in the city this year.

Sports Chairman Symons, who acted as chairman for the evening added his welcome. President Don Thomas of Belleville Baseball Association formally presented the aforementioned trophy to "Moose" Matthews and stressed the fact that the presence of veterans in baseball teams of the present day was a valuable asset to any league. He paid tribute to the steadying influence in the local league of such players as Matthews and "Smoky" Smith of Batawa.

Lighter Given Reeves

Mr. Arthur Young, of Stewart Warner Alemite, then presented the Ronson lighter to catcher "Huck" Reeves with the admonition that "if you use it sparingly, you will hit more home runs."

Team photographs and wallets were presented to the members of the junior team by Bob Goldham who personally shook hands with and congratulated each player as they came to the head table. Receiving the gifts were players Bunton, Kelleher, Reeves, Lockyer, V. Green, Bush, Semark, Strachan, Wright, B. Green, Yorke, Soules and the team mascot Gordon St. Louis, D. Dolan and Coach Speedy St. Louis. Dick Fitzpatrick, who is at school in the U.S.A. was presented with his gifts through the medium of his mother.

Introduced by Kiwanian Aubry Coe, Goldham spoke on the four essentials necessary if a youth is to make professional sport a career. The first, he said, was lots of desire and the will to win. Sport is the same as business, the fellow with lots of drive is bound to win. He quoted the instance of Lester Patrick of the New York Rangers, who went into the nets in a Stanley Cup playoff against the mighty Montreal Maroons, and by his energy sparked his team to victory. He also told the story of Glen Cunningham world famous mile runner who, seriously burned in a school fire, came through to be a world champion.

Practice, Goldham went on, was another important essential in sport. Some fellows are natural athletes while others have to work. He cited the case of Bob Feller, famous Cleveland hurler, who practised with his father on the family farm, hours at a time to perfect his arm. Now he gets $80,000 a year. Lorne Carr, former Maple Leaf was another instance of what practice would do, Carr, he said, practised in the family cellar in the summer time in an effort to perfect his shots. Later he became one of the best goal-getters in the N.H.L.

"Team spirit was another vital essential" the speaker said, quoting the Maple Leaf squad in 1942 when they were down three games to the Detroit Red Wings. Billy Taylor, then a Leaf star, sparked the team with his spirit and the Leafs went on to [illegible] s and the Stanley Cup. "Team spirit did it," he said. "If every one on the team caries his share of the load, then you can't help but win."

Sportsmanship Important

Sportsmanship, Goldham concluded was one of the main things in the make-up of an athlete. He illustrated this point with the story of the famous Indian athlete Jim Thorpe, who cleaned up all track events in the 1912 Olympics only to be informed by the U.S. Athletic Union that he was not eligible for the trophies because he had played some semi-pro baseball. Thorpe was ordered to return the trophies to Johnny Nyslander, Swedish athlete who finished second to the Indian.

Thorpe did so, but later Nyslander sent the trophies back with a letter stating he could not accept them because he was beaten by a better man. "That is the finest sportsmanship I ever heard of," Goldham said. He urged the boys present to heed well the four essentials mentioned. "If you abide by these you need have no fear that you won't succeed in athletics."

The speaker was thanked by Kiwanian Claude Tice.

Coached Thanked Club

Coach St. Louis in a few words thanked the club for the handsome gifts. "The team last year was good, but I think this year we will have the champions," he said.

Bridge, euchre and dancing took up the remainder of the evening, with refreshments served at the close. Prize-winners in cards were; Bridge, Ladies, Mrs. Pearl White; gentlemen Jack Carson; low score, Vic White; euchre, ladies, Mrs. Kate Cook; gentlemen C. W. Fitzpatrick; low score Mrs. Semark. Special prize Bill Cook. Dancing prize, Vern Green and Miss Doreen Cunningham.

Kansas City Pla-Mors Have One Game Start

(By The Associated Press)

Kansas City Pla-mors had a one-game start today toward repeating as United States Hockey League playoff champions.

Kansas City, league and playoff champion last year, beat Omaha, 5-2 last night on Ohama ice in the initial game of the best-of- seven series.

Dick Butler, who tallied twice for Kansas City, broke a 2-2 deadlock with 35 seconds remaining in the second period. He tosed in his second goal midway through the final.

The clubs resume competition here tomorrow night.

IRISH DISCUSS DETAILS OF TRIP TO WEST CANADA

Joe Primeau Convinced St. Mikes Will Take Montreal in Three Straight

Toronto, April 9. (CP)—Gossip all along the corridors of St. Michael's College today centred upon details of a western invasion to recapture the Memorial Cup, so confident were supporters of the Majors that they would eliminate Montreal Canadiens in three straight games when the teams clash here tonight.

The Irish who bowed to Winnipeg Monarchs for the Dominion Junior Hockey Crown last winter, experienced little difficulty in downing the injury-riddled Canadiens in the first two games of the best-of-five series, winning 11-3 and 5-1. Prospects of the Habitants icing a stronger club tonight were not bright.

All Canadiens Coach Frank Currie would say was "I'm hoping for the best" while Joe Primeau, who master-minds the eastern champions predicted: "We should beat them if we play up to form."

St. Michael's will probably use the same lineup as in Montreal Monday night and it is doubtful if Red Kelly, hard-hitting defenceman, will see action. He injured his knee in practice and saw only a few minutes action in the opener here Saturday afternoon.

If the Saints move to the finals, Currie thought "it will take a really strong team to beat them—they have lots of power and a good goaltender in Howie Harvey."

Added attraction will be presentation of the Red Tilson Memorial trophy for the most outstanding player in the O.H.A. Junior "A" series to Captain Ed Sandford of the Irish.

HORNETS BEAT HERSHEY BEARS BY 4-3 COUNT

Toronto Leafs' Farm Team Well on Way to Hockey Title

Perhaps a little envious that he isn't around to share in the fortune of his former Montreal Canadien teammates as they lead the Stanley Cup finals, Wilbert (Dutch) Hiller, veteran Pittsburgh Hornets star, is making certain of the next best bet—a lion's split of the $85,400 American Hockey League playoff pool.

Hillier, who at one time or another has played with every N.H.L. club with the exception of Chicago and Toronto, last night came through with a pair of timely goals to give the Hornets a hard-earned 4-3 victory over Hershey Bears in the fourth game of the best-of-seven playoff finals for the Calder Cup.

The victory put the hungry Pittsburgh club in the enviable position of leading the series three games to one and they can clinch the championship against the Bears in Hershey, Pa., Thursday night. If Pittsburgh wins the A.H.L.—which will be their first—each of the 18 eligible players will receive approximately $1,422.

The Hornets, in whipping New Haven and Buffalo to advance to the finals, collected $11,600 playoff money.

Last night's victory was their 16th straight on home ice and they displayed the same brand of hockey which during the regular season enabled them to break the A.H.L. record for most consecutive games with a loss when they went 19 straight without defeat.

Hymie Buller, Johnny Pierson and Frank Mario scored for Hershey while other Hornet goals went to big Ernie Dickens and Gus Bodnar, former Toronto Maple Leaf who set an N.H.L. scoring record for rookies with 62 points in 1944-45.

Toronto Leafs Shellacked By Montreal Canadiens 6 to 0 In First Game for Stanley Cup

Billy Reay Led Scorers With Pair and Team Clicked Like Well-Oiled Machine

By SYD THOMAS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, April 9 —(CP)— It was one up and three to go today for Montreal Canadiens in their defence of the Stanley Cup they have won two out of the last three years.

Dick Irvin's men humbled the youthful Toronto Maple Leafs 6-0 here last night before 12,320 customers. Bill Durnan turned in a stonewall performance and the entire Habitant corps clicked for well-spaced points as they waltzed to victory in the opener of the best-of-seven cup final.

Billy Reay snakewhipped through for a pair, Murph Chamberlain, Buddy O'Connor, Maurice Richard and George Allen collected goals to get all three forward lines into the picture. And rearguard Butch Bouchard, back in form again after a bout of stomach flu that kept him below par in the series with Boston Bruins, tossed Leafs around like straws and found time to assist on a pair of goals besides.

Defencemen Roger Leger and Glen Harmon, centre Johnny Quilty and Jimmy Peters also collected assists as Canadiens had a field day against a disorganized band of Leafs who played what coach Hap Day admitted was their worst game of the season against their inter-city rivals.
Durnan Too Much.

Durnan Too Much

Durnan was too much for them. He showed the stuff that won him the Vezina Trophy four years in a row and chalked up the first shutout of this spring's playoffs.

Durnan had only 20 chances to handle, against 33 shots Turk Broda saved at the other end, but some of them were sparklers. Broda was no slouch either, but loose play in front of him gave the Turk little chance on the shots that zipped by him.

Only casualty of the game was Leafs veteran pivotman, Nick Metz, who suffered a rib separation that may keep him out of the rest of the series.

Though Leafs were downhearted over the result, they weren't too pessimistic. They preferred to look on it as a bad game out of their systems.

The lineups:

Toronto—Goal, Broda; defence, Mortson, Thomson; centre, Apps; wings, Ezinicki, Watson; subs, Stanowski, N. Metz, D. Metz, Kennedy, Lynn, Meeker, Stewart, Klukay, Boesch, Barilko, Bell (sub goalie).

Montreal — Goal, Durnan; defence, Lamoureux, Bouchard; centre, O'Connor; wings, Richard, Blake; subs, Leger, Harmon, Reay, Allen, MacKay, Quilty, Peters, Chamberlain, Macey, Eddolls, Perras (sub goalie).

Referee — King Clancy; linesmen — S. Babcock (New York, B. March (Chicago.)

First Period

1. Montreal, O'Connor (Leger) 2.20

Penalties — Thomson, Lamoureux (2), Bouchard, Ezinicki.

Second Period

2. Montreal, Reay (Harmon) 8.17
3. Montreal, Richard (O'Connor) 9.46

Penalties — Quilty, Ezinicki, Eddolls.

Third Period

4. Montreal, Allen (Bouchard) 5.40
5. Montreal, Reay (Allen, Bouchard) 11.04
6. Montreal, Chamberlain (Quilty, Peters) 18.23

Penalties — None.

BRUCE WOODCOCK BEING SOUGHT TO FIGHT LOUIS

Matchmaker Nat Rogers Leaves for England to Stalk a Challenger

New York, April 9. (AP)—The quest for a challenger for Joe Louis' heavyweight title assumed an international aspect today. Matchmaker Nat Rogers has gone to England to stalk the only foe the champion is interested in meeting for his scheduled June bout in Yankee Stadium.

Objective of Mike Jacobs' emissary is, of course, to sign empire title-holder Bruce Woodcock who at the moment is playing hard to get. And although the Briton is far from ready, the word has gone out that Woodcock is the man most likely to be on hand when Joe comes out for the 24th defence of his title.

Meanwhile, the line of would-be challengers is growing almost daily. To the latest offer —a $200,000 guarantee for a 10-round bout in Salt Lake City with Mello Bettina—Joe replied with words that appear destined to become almost routine in the next few months: "Personally I don't think I'd go for such a proposition."

Louis is going to fight in New York in June. Offers for any appearance anywhere else this year are just wasting telegraph tolls.

The Twentieth Century Sporting Club, which holds Louis' contract, certainly wouldn't go for it, and Matchmaker Rogers' trip to England is the best evidence of that. Rogers said as he left here yesterday he hoped to sign Woodcock after his April 15 bout with Joe Baksi of Kulpmont, Pa.

JACKIE ROBINSON TO GET CHANCE

By JOE REICHLER

Brooklyn, April 9 —(AP)— Brooklyn fans may get their first glimpse of Jackie Robinson, the Negro sensation, in action today as the Dodgers begin a two-game series with their Montreal farmhands at Ebbets Field.

It is believed that this two-game set, more than anything else, will determine whether he will open the National League campaign wearing a Dodger uniform or remain with the Royals.

Rickey's winter statement to the effect that a decision on Robinson would be reached "on or before the opening day of the 1947 season" is still fresh in the minds of the fans.

Thus far the play of the California flash who led the International League in batting last year has been brilliant. Called upon to play a strange position at first base in addition to his regular berth at second, Robby has exceeded the best wishes of his admirers. Against Dodger pitching he batted close to .400, In the field he handled himself expertly, causing more than one expert to remark that he was the best first basemen in either the Dodger or Royals camp.

WOMEN SCORNED

In early times female children were considered a weakness and danger to a tribe because they could not contribute to its defence.

Bob Goldham Tells Kiwanis Club of Leafs

Bob Goldham, injured Maple Leaf defenceman and goodwill ambassador for his club was the guest speaker at the Kiwanis Club at the regular weekly luncheon at the Hotel Quinte on Tuesday. Since his injury in December when he sustained a broken left arm, he has toured the Province speaking to service clubs and youth organizations extolling the merits of his beloved team. Bob is not flowery in his speech but he did give the members an insight into the makeup of the players that thousands follow during the hockey season. He was introduced by William Lockyer and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Aubrey Coe.

President Jack White presided at the luncheon with Rae Roblin collecting the fines and Vic White leading the community singing. Phil Huddleston kindly contributed his talents at the piano in the absence of Bill Navin. The president announced that $310 was collected by the Kiwanis Auxiliary on their Tag Day on Saturday and he thanked the Kiwanis Queens for their interest on behalf of the club. It was also announced that Lindsay Club are holding the 25th anniversary of their founding on April 17th and a large delegation from Belleville will be in attendance. The International President will be the guest speaker on that occasion. An invitation was extended to all members to attend the St. Michael's Spring Festival and also the Men's Club of Bridge St. United Church when Dr. Struthers of Toronto will speak on "Public Health."

Born in Georgetown

In introducing Mr. Goldham, Bill Lockyer stated the player was born in Georgetown and played with the Leafs in 1941-42 enlisting in the navy in that year and serving three-and-one-half years, returning to the fold in 1946. The player stated that the Leafs were in for a tough series with Montreal Canadiens and hoped that the Leafs would win. "Just after I was injured," said Mr. Goldham "I predicted the Leafs would win the Stanley Cup and right away they went into a slump and lost the lead in the race so I will not attempt to call the present series for the old mug."

"When we entered training camp at St. Catharines early in the fall" continued the speaker, "the team was studded with rookies and Connie Smythe stated at that time the team was in the rebuilding stage and it would be at least three years before a championship team could be developed. He did not reckon with boys like Mortson, Thompson, Boesch, Barilko, Meeker and others on the lineups because they were young and trying hard with the result the team went out in front and established a long lead. Naturally they tailed off because they were young and had a lot to learn but they have bounded back and right now are 'plenty hot.'"

Defence Most Persecuted

He claimed the defence was the most persecuted part of the team because the forwards blamed the defencemen if the passes did not come up and the goalie blamed the defence if a goal was scored. The forwards and goalie always get their names in the paper if the team wins but the defencemen get theirs in only when the team loses. He gave "Turk" Broda the credit for keeping the team in front for so long and claimed that Garth Boesch was the steadiest defenceman in the National Hockey loop. He claimed that Teeder Kennedy should make the all-star team because as Goldham put it "He has a heart of iron." Meeker was praised for his quick thinking and taking advantage of the opportunities offered. "He should win the "rookie award" easily," said the speaker.

A Fine Record

"I think Mortson and Thompson have a record to be proud of," said Mr. Goldham. "They played the entire series against Detroit and while they were on the ice not a goal was scored against them. He praised Wally Stanowski for his brilliant puck-carrying ability claiming he was the best defenceman in the league in lugging the puck out of the danger zone. Coming to the forwards he claimed Apps to be smart and cagey and one who plays his best hockey when the "chips" are down. Speaking of the deal that brought Harry Watson to the Leafs in place of Billy Taylor, he claimed that Toronto got the best of the deal because Watson is a two-way player and Taylor was never in that category. Ezinicki he claimed has started to come and with Apps and Watson will bear careful watching at all times. Lynn, Stewart, Klukay and Don Metz were all praised but the chief praise was given for Nick Metz, whom Goldham claimed was playing the best hockey of his career. Many incidents were recalled of his service with the Leafs and he hoped that he would be able to play many years with his favorite team.

Breach of Contract Suit Against Louis Settled

(By The Canadian Press)

A $10,000 breach of contract suit brought by a Mexican Sports promotor against heavyweight Champion Joe Louis has been settled out of court. Terms of settlement were not disclosed. The suit, brought against Louis by Ramon Reachi, alleged that on Jan. 7, 1946, Louis and Mike Jacobs, New York boxing promoter, made an agreement for Louis to appear in an exhibition match in Mexico City. Reachi asked $10,000 for Louis' failure to appear.

Los Angeles Monarchs, Western titlists, and Boston Olympics, Eastern champions, will open their playoffs for the United States American Hockey Association championship next Saturday at the Boston Garden. The second, third and fourth games also will be played at the Gardens, April 13, 15 and 17.

A busy week is ahead for the 75 or more players competing in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior B and C all-star jamboree at the Gardens, April 11. On their arrival at Toronto tomorrow they will be fitted with specially prepared uniforms, at night they see the third game of the Eastern Canada Memorial Cup final between Toronto St. Michael's Majors and Montreal Canadiens, on Thursday a luncheon, a trip to the circus and a peek at the wrestling bouts. Proceeds for the All-Star game will be divided between the Ontario Society for Crippled Children's Fund and the Canadian Paraplegic Association.

Change now to NEW SHELL X-100 MOTOR OIL

Now's the time to change the oil in your car to one that will give you extra protection.

Oil failure—the actual breakdown of its protective power under the beating of sustained speed—is a comparatively new disease. To overcome it, Shell scientists—aided by war research—have produced a new kind of motor oil . . . an oil fortified by "X" Safety Factors. These: (1) Resist chemical change. (2) Clean the engine. (3) Guard against rust. (4) Reduce wear and oil consumption.

See your Shell dealer this week. Get him to give your car this extra protection (you may not need it for ordinary neighborhood driving, but for long trips it's safety insurance). May as well get a complete Summer lubrication at the same time!

To Live With Love

By Margaret Gorman Nichols

CHAPTER 11

Out of a lonely childhood he had evolved a plan for his life. Reticent but observing, it had never occurred to him it was selfish but rather practical to cultivate the friendship of people who would do him the most good. As a consequence, people with whom he had grown up and of whom he had been fond were discarded as his insurance business progressed..progressed but quite slowly. And as he had learned to deny himself of his old friends, so he had also learned to deny himself of certain comforts and small luxuries within his income, eating Spartan meals which the gentle Hilda managed out of the small allowance he gave her, buying cheap clothes, sleeping on sheets that had been patched, and eating from china that had been chipped.

Those things were not important, but it was immensely important to mingle with people like Freda and Ian and Carol and Bill even though frequently he let others pay the check thinking that they had more money than he and really shouldn't mind.

Though his business had not progressed as he had hoped, he was pleased with his social success. "I've been darned lucky; I'm sitting pretty," he often said to himself. He had many friends and he was constantly in demand. People liked him not because he ever did anything in particular but rather because he never did anything in particular and could be counted on to be unattached, young, good-looking, college-bred and an excellent dancer.

But Scott's plan was not complete since, after the Suzanne incident, it included a wife who would do him credit and help him. Carol and Bill he had admired profoundly. He had also envied them and their material possessions. And though there was scarcely a girl from the better families he had not "dated," he had not found one he particularly wanted to marry either because he couldn't make himself care enough or because he was afraid, if he married a helpless rich girl, her father would do nothing for them and the girl would be a hindrance to him. He wanted to be sure. Then, too, there had been one or two girls who had not responded to his overtures, and Scott, sensitive and cautious, had immediately checked them off his list.

The Sturtevant divorce had shocked and hurt him to a degree he had not felt since Suzanne had married someone else. But when the smoke began to disappear, he had seen the plan of his life broadening, and new and exciting words being written into his future. If he'd marry Carol... It was a wonderful idea! She was lovely and popular and he had frequently been excitingly aware her, when he found himself alone of her—when he had danced with with her, when she was sitting beside him in a car.

He hadn't let himself fall in love with her because she was Bill's wife. But now she wasn't anybody's wife. She was free. Hilda was crazy about her. Hilda didn't feel inferior to Carol because Carol's beginning had been humble, too. Scott's other friends were only names to his sister. But Hilda often said, "I saw Carol today down town. We stopped and talked. My, she looked lovely."

There was, however, a slight shadow in the perfect plan. It was not Carol's love for Bill. It did not occur to Scott that Carol's love for Bill was anything which he, Scott, could not overcome with minimum difficulty. No, the shadow was money—Carol's money. How much had she? Had Bill made a cash settlement? How much? Could Carol do with it as she pleased? Or was the alimony her only income, any income which would cease if she married again? If only he knew that! He had to know that! But how? He couldn't ask her or Bill or their attorney, and Carol rarely spoke of money.

Still there would have to be a way. He had to find out whether she had any money of her own. Without it, marriage was out of the question. He had Hilda to support for the rest of her life; and his own small income would by no means support Carol in the manner in which she had been accustomed and the manner in which he, Scott, ardently wished to be accustomed.

Now he thought of Bill and Evelyn and the night he had had dinner with them. Evelyn was lovely. Though his conservatism had been outraged by the divorce, he could scarcely blame Bill. Bill had always had the best breaks. A lucky guy...and now a wife like Evelyn! But Scott, weighing his friendship with Bill and the possibility of marrying Carol and the substantial cash settlement (he hoped), had had no difficulty in making a choice between them. When Bill, obviously glad to see him, said "Come out again, Scott," Scott had said, "Oh, sure, thanks," knowing that he would not go again.

Hilda, Scott's sister nad gone to the movies, her only source of entertainment. As Scott left the apartment, he began to wonder when he should cease being merely a loyal friend to Carol and begin to be a probable second husband. Should he wait until he knew about the money situation for certain or should he begin at once to show affection so that when the money situation was settled, it would be a simple matter to propose, the ground work already having been laid? It wouldn't be smart to rush her.

In his car he turned on the radio and whistled a popular song. He felt swell. Carol, the party tonight, good food, good drinks, good music...He was lucky in having Hilda as a dependent so that he wouldn't be drafted into the army. This was before the United States entered the war. The poor guys who didn't have any dependents were going to get twenty-one bucks a month and tramping miles and miles...horrible!

His heart was beating excitedly when he pressed his finger against the bell outside Carol's apartment.

In a moment she stood there, lovely in a white dress.

"Hi!" he said, smiling broadly. "You look...good enough to eat she said, "I hope you're not that hungry."

Stepping into Carol's living-room was like stepping into another world. It heightened his spirits to leave the drab, shabby life with the drab, shabby Hilda and to enter the bright one of Carol's good taste and beauty. This is where he belonged. This was how he should live. This was how he was going to live if.

When she was with Scott, Carol was always expecting Bill to come out of the next room, smile warmly at his old friend and say, "Hi, boy. Glad to see you. How's everything."

"We're only half an hour late," Scott said, helping her with her soft, light blue coat. "Do you like to make a late entrance? That's a knockout dress you're wearing. What is it made off?"

"Silk jersey."

"Not Ersatz? Hilda said the other day that you didn't know what some of the stuff was."

"How is Hilda?" Poor Hilda, she always thought, remembering the pinched little face that lighted up only when her brother's name was mentioned, and the plain, cheap clothes she wore.

"Oh, she's okay," Scott said.

Stepping into the late summer twilight Carol thought, "This is the first big party I've been to since the divorce. Probably everyone I know will be there tonight except Evelyn and Bill. Lillian couldn't invite the three of us. This time she chose me." And as the car left the city for the country, she thought, I feel safe with Scott. There is no challenge. I don't have to make any effort or fight some feelings and encourage others. He hasn't Clive's suave curiosity that makes you feel that you are glass and he can see straight through you. Scott doesn't put you on the defensive."

He asked, "Have you made any plans for the Summer, Carol."

"I don't know yet." She and Bill had always planned their vacations months ahead. In the beginning they had been too poor to leave town. In later years they had gone to the seashore or had motored north. Driving with Scott she recalled a series of pleasant, attractive hotel rooms and particularly the large, luxurious one they had had in Quebec.

She said, "Freda is taking little Ian north to camp. On the way back she's going to stop in New York for a few days. She asked me to meet her there. She and Ian will take their vacation on their boat and they've asked me to come along."

"Swell. You're going to take them up on that offer, aren't you?"

"I don't know, Scott."

"I haven't made any plans either," he said. If Ian would invite him on his boat for two weeks, he could be with Carol constantly and it wouldn't cost anything.

It was quite dark when they reached the Williams' country house where cocktails were being served on the terrace and where there was slight sprinkilg of unfamiliar faces among many familiar ones. Carol and Scott moved among the guests, speaking at length with Freda and Ian and then finding themselves later beside Dee and Johnny Downs. Dee, a demure-looking brunette in a print dinner frock, seemed always to have a secret pain in her eyes, and it had been said that unhappy look was the result of jealousy of the handsome, affable Johnny.

Talking with Dee about Dee's two major interests, her child and her house, Carol sensed her coolness. But it was a few minutes before she remembered that Johnny worked under Bill. No doubt Dee and Johnny had been seeing Evelyn and Bill often. And though Johnny was his friendly self, Dee seemed most uneasy, and her pained, dark eyes seemd to be looking, hoping for escape.

Johnny grinned. "Have you noticed? When the people get together they don't talk about the stock market any more. They talk about the horrors of the income tax, the strength of the army and navy and cutting down."

Carol nodded. "Yes, but women are still talking about babies and houses."

"Because women are complacent," Scott said. "They don't know."

Carol said, "Perhaps. But women also know that they must go on being normal."

When the colored boy passed the cocktails again and Johnny eagerly took another, Dee said, "Johnny, you didn't have any lunch, darling."

"Don't worry. I can handle my drinks."

"All right. I'll take another, too."

He laughed. "But you can't! You skipped lunch, too."

HOCKEY #46 . . CRISS-CROSS PLAY

Formerly a star athlete, now Canada's top coaching expert, "Ace" says: "Part of every athlete's success is due to right training, part to right eating, part to knowing "inside" tricks. Here's a play it will pay your team to learn. Study diagram—practise."

WINGS INSIDE!
Use this play when 3 men are rushing the defence, wings covered or free. Your centre player carries puck. The wings get inside their checks as shown.

CUT OVER!
Puck-carrier heads toward one particular defenceman. Wing on that side cuts across in front of puck-carrier and takes puck after short, slow forward pass.

PASS BACK!
Wing, after getting puck, heads for other side of defence. Then, as defence comes over, he passes laterally to original puck-carrier who is now free.

DENIAL GIVEN STATEMENTS

Manila, April 8 — (AP)—President Roxas' secretary today denied statements charging graft, corruption and wholesale theft in disposal of surplus American military goods being turned over to the Philippine government.

Greek Forces Evacuate Towns

Athens, April 9 — (AP)—The Liberal newspaper Vima reported today that Greek government forces, for "strategic reasons," had evacuated the towns of Avgherinos and Pentalofos, situated southwest of Kastoria near the Albanian frontier.

The paper did not further explain the withdrawal, but declared that terrified residents of the two villages had fled to the nearest towns to seek refuge from guerrilla bands.

At the same time other Athens papers reported that government troops, carrying out mopping up operations in the Mount Paikon region northwest of Salonika had slain 100 guerrillas and captured 50.

To Paint Equipment With Gloss Enamel

Ottawa (CP)—Army headquarters has announced that gloss enamel in future will replace the expensive wartime "matte" finish on all army vehicles and artillery and engineering equipment.

The reasons for the switch are two-fold; enamel is cheaper, will last longer and affords greater protection against weather.

Another step in the return to peacetime routine, officials added, will be the repainting of army vehicles according to classification: staff cars, black engineering equipment, orange, trucks, trailers, guns, gun carriages, etc., olive brown.

Accuse Lewis Of Engineering New Strike

BY HAL COOPER

Washington, April 9. (AP)—Owners of the seized American soft coal mines accused John L. Lewis today of engineering a "deliberate and premeditated" new strike by his United Mine Workers (A.F.L.) in defiance of federal courts.

The Justice Department kept secret its own view pending another appearance by Lewis tomorrow before the judge who plastered him and the U.M.W. with fines totalling $3,510,000 for violating a no-strike order last December.

The order holds good until the government returns the pits to private ownership.

The National Coal Association declared the latest move by Lewis is a "deceitful dodge" intended to break up a back to work movement which brought bituminous production up to 40 per cent of normal yesterday.

Lewis advised his Union Locals by telegram during the day that he approves "resumption of production at each mine as fast as it is certified by Federal mine inspectors as being in conformity with the Federal Mine Safety code".

John D. Battle, executive secretary of the Coal Association, asserted in a statement:

"He is in reality telling his miners not to return to work until the Federal inspectors have had time to revisit all the mines and recertify them—a matter of weeks or months."

Lewis goes back before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough tomorrow to ask for the return of all but $710,000 of the fines assessed in connection with the 17-day walkout which began last November.

Severe Censure Of Police Force

Port Colborne, April 9—(CP)—Severe censure of the policing of Humberstone village was voiced in a letter from C. R. Magone, senior solicitor of the Ontario Attorney - General's Department, read to Humberstone village council Monday night.

In the letter Mr. Magone charged that from reports reaching the department it would appear the village is inadequately policed and that provisions of the Liquor Licence Act and the Liquor Control Act are not being properly enforced, but on the contrary that liquor is being sold openly by bootleggers at all hours.

The letter also pointed out that the village was under-policed with only one officer employed.

New Evidence Introduced At Third Trial

Pembroke, Ont., April 9—(CP)—The Crown expected to complete its case today in the third murder trial of Thomas Gibbons, 49-year-old self-confessed slayer of his cousins, Joseph and John Fitzmaurice, near his Adamston township farm Feb. 1, 1946.

New evidence was introduced after a jury had been selected and the trial began in county court before Mr. Justice J. K. Mackay of the man who was sentenced at the last Spring Assizes to hang.

He won an appeal but his retrial last fall was finally called off because of the illness of one of the main defence witnesses.

Throughout yesterday's hearing Gibbons, thinner and obviously under strain for more than 14 months confinement, appeared nervous. At one point he buried his face in his hands when enlarged photographs of the bodies of the murdered men were produced as exhibits and shown to the jury.

Though he has confessed to the slaying of both men in a voluntary statement which defence counsel G. A. Martin said he would not contest, he is being tried at this time only for the murder of Joseph Fitzmaurice.

Spring Though Late in Arriving Cheers Winter-Weary Londoners

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London April 9 (CP)—Spring cannot be permitted to come to London without a welcome.

She arrived late and moistly, but Londoners strode cheerfully through the showers, snuffing the balmy air. Inured by experience, they accepted her favors with cautions. "Tomorrow the Thames will probably be frozen as far as London Bridge" was a not uncommon sentiment from those who are accustomed to the vagaries of English weather.

Needless to say, such remarks are for the benefits of the gods, lest they find mankind too cheerful and inflict more meteorological hardships on the people. The dauntless optimism of London survives the wet streets; the grimy buildings still unrepaired and unpainted after two years of peace.

Sunny Streets Crowded

Office workers who like to round off their lunch hours with a stroll are out in force for the first time in months, buffeted by pedestrians who have more urgent business. Their sauntering reveals to them such springlike activities as office boys conducted jumping contests in deserted courtyards, and office girls exchanging shrill bandinage with thin young clerks.

Between showers—and then during them—the tennis courts have their earnest patrons, and the street corner orators, shedding their winter laryngitis, are attracting little clusters of tolerant listeners.

Windows of travel agencies attract wistful groups by their bright posters and there are customers aplenty in the seed stores. Men walk the streets with rapt expressions, obviously concerned with plans for weekend hikes in the country, or what they will plant when time permits them to dig up the backyard.

The trees have been late in putting on their greenery but in the parks snowdrops and crocuses are thrusting up in profusion. Stenographers, putting off their wool stockings and other paraphernalia with which they withstood the winter cold, amiably share the crumbs of their lunches with cheeky sparrows, stupid pigeons and sedate but hungry waterfowl.

Strollers Walk Dogs

Of course the children are out in force with their mothers and nannies. Civil servants, out for a breath of air between the affairs of state, dodge the juggernaut procession of perambulators, erratic toddlers and scampering dogs.

The latter revelling in mud and human company, reveal the influence of royalty. More and more stubby corgis—the type fancied by Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret — are seen Dachshunds are still popular, though, and so are Pekinese.

Even queuers are less acrimonious than usual, and strangers affably exchange reminiscences of the cold spell, hardly less horrifying than those of the blitz.

The newspapers still sing their dirge of hard times—floods, shortages, international crisis and murder and sudden death. But there is profusion in that sort of news; let it wait a little while we savor the promise of a mild spring day.

W. J. Berry who has been appointed public relations officer for the Canadian Pacific Railway with headquarters at Toronto.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED IN PISTOL EXHIBITION

Minneapolis, April 9 — (AP) — A musician in the orchestra at the Northwest Sportsmen's Show at the Minneapolis Auditorium was accidentally shot and killed last night during a pistol exhibition by a man and wife team. The victim was Curtis Erickson, 27, Minneapolis, accidentally shot during a target shooting act by William and Frances Johnson, Dr. Heim said.

Frank Sinatra Takes Poke At Movie Columnist

Hollywood, April 9 — (AP) — Crooner Frank Sinatra, took an assortment of pokes at Lee Mortimer, 42, movie columnist for the New York Daily Mirror, at Ciro's night club late last night, Mortimer told sheriff's deputies today.

Mortimer appeared at the West Hollywood Sheriff's station, his head bruised and, sheriff's deputy R. I. Wright said, claimed Sinatra "and three heavies" set upon him without warning, knocking him down and pumelling him.

Subsequently a representative of Sinatra said the fracas was set off when Sinatra overhead Mortimer call him an unprintable name, climaxing the crooner's 2-year irritation over articles Mortimer had written about him.

Mortimer told reporters and the deputies:

"I was leaving Ciro's with Miss Kay King, a band singer, when Sinatra and three men jumped me. The first thing I knew, I was on the floor and the next thing I knew was when I saw a face that looked like Sinatra's above me."

The columnist conceded that in various columns he had been less than complimentary to Sinatra.

Deputy Wright said Mortimer announced he would return today to obtain an assault and battery warrant against Sinatra.

Sinatra, who apparently was unscathed, could not be reached but his publicist, Jack Keller, gave this account of the affair:

"Mortimer was leaving Ciro's with a girl. Frank was in the foyer and heard Mortimer say to the girl 'There's that - - - - - now.' It was an epithet no man could take so Frank let him have it. Nobody held Mortimer down and there were no 'heavies' with Frank."

Keller said Sinatra told him later: "When a man calls me the names he did, that's too much for anyone."

EARTHQUAKE ROCKS SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Survey Indicates No Severe Loss In Main Centres

Seismologists Say 'Quake Severe in Some Locality

Los Angeles, April 10 —(AP)— A sharp earthquake, subsiding into a rolling tremor lasting almost a minute, rocked most of Southern California at 7:59 a.m. PST today, but there were no immediate reports of loss of life or serious damage.

Seismologists at California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, said the quake's length indicated that it was deep-seated and probably severe in some locality.

But a quick check of key points from Santa Barbara to the Imperial Valley city of El Centro disclosed no severe loss.

It was felt only lightly in Santa Barbara, to the north, and San Bernardino, to the east. El Centro said it was not recorded there.

The shock also went unnoticed in the Owens Valley, where Los Angeles' water supply was disrupted by the last severe California quake, March 15, 1946.

Occupants of Phoenix, Ariz., office buildings and hotels reported they felt a slight swaying.

Convict Said Strapped, Put In 'Hole' for Brutal Assault

Kingston, April 10 —(CP)— Allan N. Baldwin, convicted Windsor bank robber and murderer, serving 39 years in penitentiary, is under second field punishment in the "hole," including strapping, for an attack on another prisoner, it was reported today.

Baldwin was sentenced to 20 years imprisonment for killing Robert Canning, Toronto jail guard, when escaping from a third floor hospital corridor in 1944. At that time he was already under 19 years sentence for bank robbery.

Using a metal bar smuggled from the penitentiary machine shop, Baldwin is reported to have attacked the prisoner while he was carrying a tray of food in the corridor. He allegedly struck the prisoner a number of blows across the face with the bar and split his head open across the eyes.

Guards are reported to have rescued the injured prisoner and subdued Baldwin who was brought before the warden and tried. Second field punishment is severe, it was stated. Baldwin was ordered strapped and then taken to the "hole," an underground cell, whcih has no contact with cells of other prisoners.

Europeans Being Brought to Canada For Farm Work

London, Ont., April 10—(CP)—Several hundred Europeans, including Belgians, Dutch and Czechs, will be brought to Canada in the next month to work in sugar beet fields of Western Ontario, it was reported in district labor circles today.

Three hundred or more relatives of Europeans working in the Chatham and Wallaceburg areas are expected to be included, it was said.

Applications for imported help are reportedly being handled by the Ontario Sugar Beet Growers' Association, with the Dutch government requisitioning two ships to send its quota to Canada.

Weather Synopsis

Toronto, April 10 (CP) — Synopsis: Warm humid air streaming northward from the Gulf of Mexico is bringing heavy rainfall to the Mid-Western States. This morning the rain area has extended eastward as far as Indiana. With the storm centre commencing to move northeastward it appears likely that the heaviest rainfall in Ontario will occur in the White River region. However considerable rainfall is expected tonight in all sections of the province.

NO ROMANCE SAYS PEGGY

Hollywood, April 10 (AP) — Peggy Ann Garner says her recent Trans-Atlantic telephone conversation with Viscount Furness, 18, heir to a £2,500,000 ($10,000,000) British shipping fortune, don't signify romance, just a nice friendship. The 15-year-old pigtailed movie actress, who met the Viscount two years ago at a party here, received cabled Easter flowers from him.

Machinist Held For Brutal Attack On Woman

St. Catharines, April 10—(CP)—Alexander McDonald, 32-year-old unmarried St. Catharines machinist, was arrested late yesterday and charged with last Friday night's brutal attack on Mrs. Hamilton K. Woodruff of St. Catharines.

Mrs. Woodruff suffered extensive face, chest and other bruises and lacerations when she was attacked in her home by a man who robbed her of $8. She has been in hospital ever since, and is reported recovering. She was alone in the 28-room house when her assailant knocked at the back door at 9 p.m. The attack ensued immediately.

Police said their five-days' intensive investigation is continuing and indicated more serious charges might be preferred against McDonald. At the request of Crown Attorney E. H. Lancaster, McDonald was remanded in custody until next Thursday without being asked to plead.

RUSSIANS AIMING FOR WORLD POWER SAYS CONNALLY

Claims Red Expansion Must be Stopped Short of Greece And Turkey Immediately

Washington, April 10 (AP)—Senator Tom Connally (Dem. Tex.) told the United States Senate today that Russian expansion must be stopped short of Greece and Turkey because the Soviets are aiming for "world dominion."

The Texas Senator, top Democratic member of the Foreign Relations Committee, opened the Senate's third day of debate on President Truman's proposal to extend $400,000,000 in financial and limited military aid to the two countries with a blunt declaration that Russia wants to "control the destiny of Europe."

"Soviet Russia, by her system of spreading creeping paralysis among smaller and weaker nations, hopes to bring about world dominion and to control the destiny of Europe," Connally said.

"There is no denial that one of the cardinal purposes of this bill is to enable Greece and Turkey to resist the encroachments of Soviet Russia and her satellite states."

"Russia is not unaware of that purpose. We should make that purpose clear. We should demand of Russia that she abandon the methods by which she subjugated the satellite states. We should make it plain that as a nation and a people, we shall resist this effort to destroy the independence of integrity of free peoples."

Connally's statements contrasted with the way most administration officials avoided any direct reference to Russia's aims.

Two Children Lose Lives When Fire Destroys Home

Kirkland Lake April 10 (CP)—Tragedy struck early today in the shadow of Mount Cheminis when two children lost their lives in a gasoline fed fire which sent their mother to hospital suffering from severe burns.

Dead are two year old Gerard St. Onge and his three-year-old sister, Mary Rose. Their 25-year-old mother, Mrs Nernande St. Onge, was burned about the face and hands when she saved the life of her eight-month-old daughter Nicole.

The fire was believed to have broken out shortly after seven a.m. when Mrs. St. Onge started the fire with gasoline. The gasoline flashed up into flames which immediately consumed the two the two oldest children in their beds.

Mrs. St. Onge snatched the baby from its crib and rushed outside, her hair blazing.

The child was taken to the home of neighbors while an ambulance rushed the mother to hospital. At her side was Father A. Morin of Larder Lake, the parish priest.

She is expected to recover.

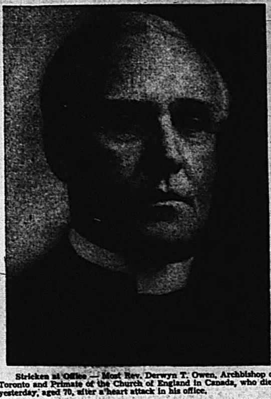
The father, 69-year-old Eugene St. Onge, was at work when fire started.

Britain, U.S. Agree to French Demands For Detachment of Saar From Germany

Moscow, April 10 (AP)—The United States and Britain agreed tonight to French demands for detachments of the Saar from Germany and economic integration of the Saar area with France.

State Secretary Marshall proposed that initial steps to that end be taken by the Council of Foreign Ministers immediately.

Both Marshall and foreign secretary Bevin opposed, however, a French proposal that the industrial Ruhr be detached from Germany. They also rejected the idea of creating special regimes international ownership or international management of basic German resources in the area.



Stricken at Office — Most Rev. Derwyn T. Owen, Archbishop of Toronto and Primate of the Church of England in Canada, who died yesterday, aged 70, after a heart attack in his office.

Nine Men Killed, Nine Injured In Pa. Mine Explosion

Exeter, Pa., April 10. (AP) — Nine men were killed and nine others injured today in anthracite mine explosion 350 feet underground.

Two victims were found soon after the early-morning blast ripped through the Knox Coal Company operation. Rescue workers digging through the debris several hours later found additional bodies.

Assistant police chief Ed Petrillo said the explosion, which rocked the workings soon after the men went on the job, was caused by gas.

The Eastern Pennsylvania mine located near Wilkes-Barre employs 175 men but only 17 were reported in the shaft where the blast took place.

TWO MEN BURNED IN FLAMING WRECK OF CAR TRANSPORT

Cornwall, April 10 —(CP)— Two men died in the flaming wreckage of a car transport near Lancaster, early today, when the vehicle ran off the highway and crashed into a tree.

Driver of the vehicle was Cameron Leslie, Oshawa, and his companion was an unidentified hitchhiker. The bodies of the two men were burned beyond recognition.

The accident happened about three a.m. as the transport was returning after leaving a load of cars in Quebec. Police believed that the driver dozed at the wheel. The vehicle swerved into the south ditch, ran along it for 145 feet, and then crashed into a large tree. The transport burst into flames.

Gordon McKnight, driver of another transport, told police that he saw the flames shooting up into the sky from a mile away. As he came on the scene, he said he saw the hitch hiker partially out of the vehicle, but with his leg trapped.

He was screaming horribly, McKnight said. He tried to free the trapped man but was unable to get close to the vehicle because of the flames, which by then were shooting 300 feet into the air.

It was three hours before police and their helpers could remove the charred bodies from the still blazing transport.

It is believed the unidentified passenger may have been a Montreal sailor on his way to Kingston to join his ship.

Cameron Leslie, the dead transport driver, was 35 and lived at 312 French Street, Oshawa. He is survived by his father, Allan C. Leslie of Montreal, and by two brothers, Gordon of Oshawa and Colin in Montreal. Burial will be in Oshawa.

LAYER OF SILT LEFT ON STREETS, WALLS BY FLOOD

Chatham, April 10. (CP)—The tension that had this city of 18,000 persons holding its breath was off today as flood waters that topped all previous records subsided and left a layer of silt on walls, streets and houses.

It had been a tense few days since the Thames river that winds from northeast of London, through the rich southwestern Ontario farmlands to Lake St. Clair, had gone berserk, egged on by a thaw that melted the greatest snowfall in many years.

All along the banks of the Thames, a line of devastation was marked as the river slowly spread itself across thousands of acres of farm lands. It was to the farms that the most damage occurred. Rich top-soil that would have given root to millions of dollars worth of crops was washed away and planting would be delayed for at least two weeks.

The damage here and in other riverside cities and towns such as London, Thamesville and Jeannettes Creek were described by City Manager T. M. S. Kingston as a "nuisance variety".

It would require many weeks to remove all traces of the flood from basements and ground floor walls.

At Jeannettes Creek, a few miles west of here, residents were doing their shopping at the general store from boats. Two feet of water remained at the village crossroads.

Throughout Western Ontario, evacuated residents were returning to their sodden homes, the river was dropping much faster than it arose and the threat of unknown disaster had passed for another year.

ARCHBISHOP OWEN DIES SUDDENLY OF HEART ATTACK

Anglican Primate of All Canada Stricken While Working at His Desk At Synod House

Toronto, April 10 — (CP) — The sudden death of Archbishop Derwyn Trevor Owen, Anglican Primate of all Canada, today was mourned by heads of church and state, leaders in business and the professions — a host of prominent persons who saw in his passing the loss of a great Canadian.

Archbishop Owen, a tall handsome figure at 70 years of age, died in hospital yesterday a few hours after suffering a heart attack while working at his desk in the downtown Synod offices.

At the bedside when he died at 3 p.m. was Mrs. Owen, the former Nora Grier Jellett of Picton, Ont. He is also survived by two sons, Robert D. Owen of the Kingston Whig-Standard and Rev. Derwyn Owen of Toronto, and a daughter, Gwynnid, of New York. Another son, Captain David Owen, was killed in the Normandy invasion in 1944.

The body will lie in state at St. James Cathedral from noon Friday and service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Archbishop Owen had been the spiritual head of Canada's 1,800,000 Anglicans since 1934. He submitted his resignation to the General Synod of the Church of England in Canada when it met at Winnipeg last September, but was prevailed upon to remain as Primate. He withdrew his resignation — but said he would certainly resign after the Lambeth Conference in London, Eng., in June, 1948.

Altogether Dr. Owen served his church for 47 years as curate, assistant rector, dean, bishop and archbishop. Born in Wickenham, Eng., in 1876, son of a retired cavalry officer, he was brought by his parents to Canada as a boy, the family settling on a farm near Brandon, Man., a few years later the Owens moved to Gore's Landing near Peterborough, and Dr. Owen attended public school there and later went to Cobourg Collegiate.

He graduated from Trinity College here in 1900, was curate at St. John's Church in Toronto and curate at All Hallow's Church in Barking, near London, Eng., before returning to Toronto in 1902 to start six years as an assistant at St. James' Cathedral.

From 1908 to 1914 he was at Holy Trinity Church, the oldest church in Toronto, shadowed by factory buildings on the fringe of the downtown district. Then in 1914 he became rector of Christ's Church Cathedral, Hamilton; in 1925 became Dean of Niagara, later Bishop of Niagara, Archbishop of Toronto and Primate.

The then Bishop Owen was 53 when elected to the primacy at Montreal in 1934. His success in church administration was largely due to his skill in handling men. To an unrivalled knowledge of churchmen and church affairs he added charm and diplomacy. When the occasion required it he was firm, patient and resourceful.

As an ecclesiast he was described as a "broad" churchman, whose beliefs lay somewhere between the high church and the low church.

1,000 Reported Injured, Damage Runs into Millions

100-Mile Path Swept Clean, Heavy Rains Help Firemen

Woodward, Okla., April 10 —(AP)— A devastating tornado last night swept across a 100-mile path of the United States' richest wheat and cattle country, killing an estimated 152 persons, injuring more than 1,000 and inflicting property damage running into the millions

The Texas State Highway Patrol, quoting a Red Cross estimate, reported that at least 152 were believed dead with the probability more bodies were buried in the rubble.

Hardest hit was Woodward, Okla., where 100 were estimated to be dead, with between 800 and 1,000 injured. Approximately 100 blocks of buildings were destroyed in this city of 5,500 population.

Other estimates included Shattuck, Okla., 20 dead; Higgins, Tex., 24, and Glazier, Tex., 8. Earlier, two were reported dead at Gage, Okla., which would bring the total to 154.

The general course of the storm was northwestward from White Deer, Tex., 50 miles from Amarillo, then through Grazier, population 200, Higgins, population 750, Woodward, and Gage, a community of 800 persons.

Crews Rushed to Areas

Disaster crews were rushed to the stricken areas. Peace officers and hastily formed vigilante crews guarded against looting after early reports of looting.

Fires which followed the tornado were brought under control early today. Firemen were aided by torrential rains accompanying the southwest's most disastrous storm of the year.

Rescue workers today probed debris for bodies.

The Southwestern Bell Telephone Company today rejected a union offer to send striking operators and repair crews back to their jobs in the stricken area because it said the union inserted conditions it could not accept.

Woodward mortuaries were lighted by candles.

Woodward is in the heart of the Oklahoma cattle country.

Lights Fail

Power and lights failed and emergency generators were used at hospital and dressing stations. The Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company plant was levelled and Irwin Walker, 67, veteran night engineer at the plant, was killed as he started to work.

Only one telephone line remained in operation but by daybreak another circuit was established. Striking telephone workers volunteered to return to their switchboards during the emergency.

Streets were blocked by debris and automobiles were rolled into knots as if they were pieces of tinfoil, twisted between huge fingers.

Survivors wandered the streets in a daze, still unable to realize what had happened.

Higgins, Tex., was levelled except for the telephone exchange, the bank and school building, all of brick. The business district was destroyed by fire, brought under control early today.

All Traffic Blocked

All traffic was blocked by rubble in the streets, and only ambulances were permitted into the area.

A five-room house was blown into the middle of the highway leading to Shattuck, Okla., and traffic detoured through a wheat field.

Royal Family Given Ovation In S. Rhodesia

Salisbury, South Africa, April 10 — (Reuters) — Crowds gave the Royal Family an ovation today when they left this capital of Southern Rhodesia aboard the Royal Train, bound for Victoria Falls.

Before boarding the train the King inspected a guard of honor of the Royal Rhodesia Regiment on parade for the first time since he bestowed on them the new title of Royal.

Sir Godfrey Huggins, Prime Minister of Southern Rhodesia, and members of his cabinet were on the platform to bid farewell to the Royal party.

On the early stages of its journey the Royal Train sped through the mining, farming and ranching districts of Rhodesia.

Tobacco planters with their families and native boys drove scores of miles from remote homesteads to line the railway and cheer the train on its way.

Chambers Given Leave to Appeal Death Sentence

Toronto, April 10 —(CP)— Sidney George Chambers, 34-year-old canning plant stationary engineer, has been granted leave to appeal against his conviction on a charge of murder in the death of nine-year-old Marian Rusnak of St. Catharines, it was learned today. No date has been set for hearing of the appeal.

Upon his conviction in St. Catharines last March 6, Chambers was sentenced to be hanged June 6. It was alleged he enticed the little girl to his living quarters in the canning plant at St. Catharines Dec. 23, smothered her and then threw her body into the canning plant furnace Christmas Eve.

Canada to Establish Weather Stations Within 600 Miles of North Pole

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 10 — (CP) —The silent north will soon be not so silent as supplies start moving this month to Ellesmere and Melville Islands far up in the Arctic Circle for the Canadian weather stations being established there as a joint American-Canadian undertaking.

Prefabricated structures, thoroughly insulated, are due to start moving into the north shortly it was learned here. And the stillness of the vast, snowy wilderness will soon be shattered by the noise of their erection and by the

SAP SEASON NEARS END IN P. E. COUNTY

The current sap season is just about concluded in Prince Edward county, according to one vendor from that district attending the local produce market today. Snow has practically all disappeared in the woods and nights have not been cold enough for good sap weather. However, in the district to the north of Belleville sap is reported to have run fairly good this week.

Three or four vendors offered syrup on the market this morning with price ranging from $4.50 to $5 the gallon.

HUNTING LICENCES FOR SHOOTING PESTS

Hunting licences for groundhogs, crows, starlings and other bird pests are now on sale at the various Department of Lands and Forests offices. In this district they may be secured from Game Warden Fred McDonald.

Issued with the licences is an appeal to the hunter to adhere strictly to bag limits and conservation laws.

Inspector Stanley Hudson, of Lands and Forests, in the city recently stated that wild life in Ontario has been on the decrease for several years, and disregard of bag limits and conservation has been one of the main reasons.

Partridge will be scarce until 1950, he predicted, while ducks, geese and other bird situations are being viewed with some alarm.

"This season," the inspector said, "the bag per day will be cut down, contributing at least a little to the bird life. Animals are in the same predicament, and the only animal doing well at present is the muskrat."

Variety Program Well Performed At Rotary Show

The cream of district instrumental artistry and vocal talent merged their efforts in the Collegiate Institute Auditorium on Wednesday night, where the Rotary Sunday Night Show All-Stars staged a sparkling performance that delighted the large crowd present.

From Brighton and Wooler to Corbyville and intermediate points, as well as the city, came these talented boys, girls, men and women to offer a variety program that pleased the most critical concert observer.

A feature of the show was the Lion's Club Band of Trenton, under the direction of Mr. Laidlaw Addison, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Band and an ex-member of the famous Belleville Kilties Band. Mr. Laidlaw is well-known in musical circles in this city.

The fine voices of boys and girls in solo, duet, trio and ensemble followed in a fine musical sequence interspersed with the fine artistry of clever young instrumentalists. The show lasted for approximately two hours and was broadcast over the local radio station from 8.30 to 9.30.

Climaxes Winter Effort

The show was carried along in admirable sequence by master of ceremonies, Clayton Maxwell, of the Trenton Rotary Club, who was mainly responsible for the gathering of the best talent the district can produce. In fact, the show was a grand climax to an all-winter effort on the part of Rotarian Maxwell and his able pianist, Lenna Alexander. Weekly Sunday night shows by various artists were held in Trenton during the winter season, and those performing last night were the pick of the winter's performers.

Those present were formally welcomed by President Bert Howard of the Rotary Club of Belleville, who paid tribute to the efforts of Trenton Rotary in producing such an array of talent.

Some of the outstanding features of the show were the Brighton Triple Trio, consisting of nine lovely young lady vocalists; the Quinte Quartet, a harmonious ensemble that offered the "barber shop" and other melodies, and Frank Hockaday, ventriloquist, who with his partner William McGuire had the audience in paroxysms of mirth.

Other Artists

Other artists who took part in the program were—Ronald Elmy, Eddie Fraser, Bruce Ireland, Mary Teresa Long, Brennan Maxwell, all vocalists; Lenna Alexander, pianist; Barbara and Carol Forhan, pianist and vocalist, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Forhan; Ken Ryan, vocalist; the Snider Sisters, a piano duo; Bruce Gould, clarinetist; Joe Fleming, pianist; Phyllis Huffman, vocalist; the McPherson Sisters, vocalists; Elizabeth Ann Oliver, pianist; and Sharon and Bob Lucy, vocalists.

"Vimy Night" Commemorated By A. & N. Veterans

Veterans of World Wars No. One and Two commemorated Vimy Night at the Army and Navy Veterans' Memorial Hall on Wednesday night, when they marched to the Cenotaph to place a wreath on behalf of their fallen Comrades and returned to the hall to enjoy a delightful dinner prepared by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Association and listened to a well-prepared program.

Major Earl of the Salvation Army conducted the short service at the Cenotaph after the arrival of the veterans, who were led by the Pipe Band under the direction of Pipe Major Jamie Clarke. President William McKenna placed a wreath on the monument and two minutes of silence was observed. Again forming the parade the veterans marched through the main street of the city to the stirring music of the pipes.

After enjoyment of the dinner provided, the president called for the toast to the King and this was followed by silence for the fallen comrades. The toast to the City of Belleville was drunk and Ald. Lazenby introduced Mayor Frank Follwell, who gave an address to the comrades of World War No. One. A vote of thanks was passed for the loan of tables by the Knights of Columbus and the Martin Funeral Home for the loan of chairs, also the artists for their kindness in presenting the program.

The program consisted of a song by Miss Tracey and a specialty dance by Miss Rosemary Galbraith and a piano solo by Miss Winters. Miss Greta and Kay Galbraith gave a song and dance number while Miss Post delighted with solos. All of the artists were heartily encored. Frank High gave several humorous readings and dialogues with Miss Vern Mitchell as accompanist on the piano. It was a most pleasant function and the boys stayed long after the program had been completed to enjoy a social hour and talk over the old times.

Large Audience Enjoys Program At Spring Festival

The second night's performance of the Spring Festival at St. Michael's Academy drew another large crowd and the program that was presented was of a high calibre and ably directed by Allan Meagher. The ladies of the Catholic Women's League again served a delicious dinner before the opening of the program and after the acts were presented the games and dancing flourished until the midnight hour. The closing program for the festival will be "Hollywood Night" and a number of feature acts have been provided. The drawing of the door prize, a set of dishes donated by the Walker Hardware store, will be given to some lucky ticket holder.

An Old Tyme Garden Party was given as the feature of the program and it was led by Jack McCann and his Trent Valley Ramblers including Floyd and Merritt Woodcock, Jack Delong Marian Fudella, Harold Francis, Millie Burley, Jimmie Mitts and Mr. McCann. Two numbers were given by the Ramblers "Johnny Wagner's Breakdown" and "I Love You For Sentimental Reasons." Art Juby sang a solo "April Showers" and petite Aileen Gill gave a tap dance accompanied by Barbara Diment on the piano. Frank Hockaday and Willie McGuire gave a ventriloquist act that brought down the house and many encores were demanded.

Boys' Choir Enjoyed

Little Deanna Mansfield gave a tap dance and the Y.M.C.A. boys' choir under the direction of Eddie Shortt brought forth unstinted applause. This was followed by a solo by the director and Marian Fudella, who served in the Polish Army delighted with several accordion numbers. A square dance number with Jimmie Mitts calling the set had the feet of the audience tapping in unison and Percy Markles in black face gave two numbers that were much appreciated. A magician act by Squadron Leader Oscar Alty of Trenton Air Station had the audience guessing as to what was coming next. Mrs. William Grant acted as accompanist for many of the artists while the stage arrangements were in charge of George Mathews. Mrs. Juby was the winner of the door prize.

INCREASE JUSTIFIED

Washington, April 10 — (AP)— President Truman said today that unless prices come down wage increases will be justified.

The president told a press conference that the Justice Department is studying the question of whether manufacturing concerns can combine to lower prices without running afoul of the anti-trust laws.

Under one Supreme Court decision, Truman said, it would be unlawful to combine to cut prices just as it would be to group together to raise them.

Importance of Preventive Medicine Discussed at Bridge St. Men's Club

The vital importance of preventive medicine as a measure to prevent disease developing and the rapid advancement in the establishment of county health units throughout the province were outlined to members of Bridge Street United Church Men's Club, Wednesday evening.

Speaking before the Men's Club, Dr. R. G. Struthers, acting director of public health administration for the Ontario Department of Health, stated that the value of measures to prevent the development of disease was now recognized by the health department and had the full support of the medical profession.

Within the past thirty years the death rate had been greatly reduced in Canada as result of preventive medicine, this being a tribute to the various health boards, the work of public health nurses and the medical profession. Doctors have done much for the advancement of preventive medical measures, according to the speaker.

Stresses Prevention

As a preventive measure, the value of inoculation and immunization was stressed by Dr. Struthers.

With many years experience as doctor at a medical mission in China, Dr. Struthers stated he had become thoroughly convinced of the value of preventive medicine when in Chinese medical clinics he had seen literally thousands of persons suffering from smallpox, diphtheria and other contagious diseases with the clinic having neither the drugs nor personnel to treat them. "We just had to send them back home, there to infect others."

Today, however, thousands of public health units are being set up in China with the country aiming at training 200,000 doctors.

"The modern trend of medicine is to link even closer the curative and preventive measures."

Public Health Important

That public health was extremely important was demonstrated during the war years when thousands of young men being examined for military service were found to be physically unfit.

To remedy this situation the logical thing to do—and that which the government is seeking to do as fast as possible—is to establish public health units. This system was first started 15 years ago in Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry counties in Eastern Ontario and during the war the government decided to expand this system.

For convenience of financing, counties, groups of counties, or municipalities are chosen as the areas in which health units operate. From 20,000 to 70,000 is the ideal size of community for convenience. In operation the county health unit simply meant the extension of city public health services to include the total area. Control of the health unit is left entirely with the people.

Staff Requirements

Staff requirements for a public health unit in Hastings county with a population of approximately 60,000 would be two full time medical health officers; a supervisor of nurses; 14 public health nurses; four sanitary inspectors and three or four clerk stenographers. There would be a central office in Belleville with other offices throughout the area. Nurses would be decentralized so that the area may be covered with a minimum of travel.

Although a public health unit is a family, not a school program, all schools would have a periodic visit, the speaker stressing the importance of every child in the area being immunized, preferably at the age of six months.

With increasing numbers of adults requiring care in the home demonstration nursing, or showing family members the correct way to take care of a patient, would form an important part of the program.

"The aim of all this is not to displace the family physician, but rather to assist the family doctor," it was pointed out.

Proper Sanitation Needed

The necessity of proper sanitation measures in the prevention of disease was emphasized, these measures to include food, water and milk supplies. For efficient control independent sanitary inspectors, responsible only to the Board, were needed. Proper education in matters of sanitation would correct much of the present trouble.

Cost of a public health unit in Hastings county was estimated by the speaker at approximately 10 cents per person per month, half of which is paid by the government. This would work out at approximately three-quarters of a mill on the tax rate.

Fifteen medical health units have been established in the province during the past two and one-half years and five others would be started in July of this year. Lack of sufficient nurses would prevent the establishment of others ready to be set up.

In a question and answer period following the address Dr. Struthers was asked by Howard Clarke if public health units were not smacking of state medicine. Mr. Clarke was wondering if with baby bonuses, pensions, unemployment insurance, and other measures too much was not being done for the people.

Not State Medicine

In reply the speaker stated the health units were definitely not state medicine and have, in fact the full support of the medical profession, in that it assists the doctors in their work. In fact the system could not be successful without the assistance of doctors. Dr. Struthers agreed that there was danger of going too far in provision of services for the public and stated that all responsibility should not be taken away from the individual.

Alderman Chas. Hyde pointed out there were two problems in Belleville closely associated with sanitation—that of live sewage, and persons living in houses condemned by the health board. He wanted to know what action a health unit would take in this respect. In reply the speaker stated that a health unit must use common sense as to how fast regulations were put into effect and admitted it would be difficult to close houses when they are needed so badly.

Rev. J. W. Flatt asked why heart disease was more prevalent in Canada than in China and was told that the average life expectancy in Canada was greater than in China and that this undoubtedly was a contributing factor. Also Canadians over 50 years of age in many instances did not live sensibly with regard to taking exercise properly. To still another question as to whether health units provided dental and psychiatric services, it was stated that program of oral hygiene was given.

The guest speaker was introduced by Ken Reid with appreciation being expressed by Dr. Austin Walters, chairman of the local medical association. Ray Grant, president of the Men's Club, presided over the meeting which was attended by the nursing staff of the local Victorian Order of Nurses.

Complaints Made Rubbish, Garbage Dumped on Ice

Complaints that rubbish and garbage had been dumped on the ice in the Bay of Quinte off Rossmore, sent Prince Edward County Sanitary Inspector Jack Kearns to the spot to investigate the matter.

It was stated that discarded mattresses, tin cans, and general garbage were found littering the ice.

Commenting on the matter Dr. P. A. Scott, county medical health officer stated he was preparing to crusade this year in an effort to establish centralization of garbage disposal in all county townships.

"The present custom of dumping garbage, trash and rubbish along the roadside and other public places must be discontinued in the interests of public health he said.

He maintained that each township should have a central depot for the full and proper disposal of garbage. Picton and Wellington are the only two communities in the county which properly take care of their rubbish.

Boy Bites Dog

Cambridge, Mass., April 10—(AP)—Duke, a black puppy, today was sporting a bandage on his off hind leg and his young master, seven, was thinking over a lecture about being kind to animals and not biting dogs.

Harold Whelan's defence, according to his mother, was that Duke had been nipping him with needle-teeth and, in order to get even, he got down on all four and clamped his upper and lower milk teeth on Duke's hind leg.

'Pete' the Educated Robin is a Real Home Bird

Dorchester, April 10 (CP) — "Pete", the educated robin, hopped nimbly from the edge of the cream pitcher to Fred Hill's shoulder, and peered curiously into the glass, reflecting the lathered face of the owner.

"Shaving seems to have a fascination for him," said tall, angular Fred. "The shaving cream appears to be one of his favorite dishes."

In confirmation, "Pete" reached out with a long beak, and nibbled enthusiastically at a stray wisp of lather which circled the lobe of Hill's ear.

Pete is a character — a robin among robins. So far, he has shown more inclination to lead a solidly domestic life in the Hill's home than flit from tree to tree in the wide open spaces. In his meanderings through the house as the household pet, Pete cuts quite a swath. His favorite tricks are to mangle cigarets with his sharp beak, and reduce the family newspaper to a thousand-piece jigsaw puzzle.

Pete is an orphan. Eight months ago, Mr. Hill found him lying beneath an apple tree, which had been shaken the previous night by a wind storm. Carefully, he laid the baby robin out in the sun. An hour or two later, Pete flipped his tiny legs experimentally. He was alive. For days the Hills worked over him, nursing him back to robust health on a diet of warm milk and bread crumbs.

The fall came, and the robin showed no inclination to leave. Instead, he chose the Hill's kitchen as his home, and became installed a full-fledged member of the household.

Ford's Estate May Amount To 500 Millions

Detroit, April 10 — (AP) — Speculation continued today concerning the extent of the vast wealth of Henry Ford and what Federal and state taxes might do to it. Some inkling may be had when the will is filed for probate, probably within a week or two.

Estimates, wholly unofficial, placed Ford's fortune at anywhere from $200,000,000 up to $500,000,000.

That with Mrs. Ford he had retained control of the big industrial enterprise was generally agreed. It was said in some quarters, however, that fully 95 per cent of the Ford Motor Co. stock had been transferred, in the form of non-voting shares, to the Ford Foundation.

The foundation was organized 11 years ago as an educational and scientific project. As such it would be exempt from taxation.

The remaining five per cent of stockholders is understood to have been divided 58 and 42 per cent between Ford and his wife on the one hand and the heirs of the late Edsel B. Ford, their son, on the other.

Figures compiled by some tax authorities showed that if the elder Ford's estate amounted to as much as $500,000,000 and all were subject to taxation, the Federal and various state governments would take $383,388,200.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, April 10 (CP)—Noon trading weakened prices mildly to send all groups down narrowly on Toronto exchange today. Action generally was featureless but buyers were scarce for the little offered and although gains were slightly more numerous than losses key issues were down to bring the general index to a fractionally lower level.

Volume for the first three hours was 504,000 shares.

Papers improved fractionally for the Abitibis and International Bell Telephone advanced $1 at $184.

Mining issue continued to move selectively with the overall trend slightly off but within narrow range although a handful showed losses of more than five cents.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, April 10 — (CP)—Cattle supply cleared at firm prices on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Veal calves were firm, hogs and lambs steady. No sheep were offered. Unsold from yesterday were 150 head of cattle. Receipts: cattle 60, calves 60, hogs 230, lambs 320.

Weighty steers were $14.50-$15, butcher steers $13-$15, heifers $13-$14.75, butcher cows $9.50 - $11.75, bulls $11-$12.25, fed yearlings $13.50-$15.

Veal calves were $16-$17 for choice with plains downward to $12.

HOGS

Toronto, April 10 —(CP)—Grade A dressed bacon hogs were unchanged at Hull $22 delivered, unchanged at Strattruckers $22 delivered in markets reporting early today.

Three Youths Given Jail Terms

Convicted on a charge of breaking and entering the residence of Roy Bryant, R. R. 3, Belleville, near Riley's Pavilion on the Trent Road, three youths, two from Hamilton and one from Montreal, were given jail terms by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in county police court Thursday morning.

Glenn E. Thompson, 17, and Paul Crawford, 19, both of Hamilton, were sentenced to three weeks in the county jail, while Douglas Clause, 16, Montreal, was given six weeks. All sentences will date from the time of their arrest on April 5th.

Police stated the three youths had entered Mr. Bryant's home on Saturday night and stole shoes and other wearing apparel, also mining stocks. The youths were arrested later the same night by Provincial Police Chas. Siple while they were walking on the highway. All the stolen articles were recovered.

and is a somewhat more hospitable place where there are evidences of both oil and coal. It is about 900 nautical miles from the pole.

While the first supplies for Winter Harbor will also be flown in, it is expected an ice breaker, possibly the Canadian ship N. B. MacLean, will transport the heavy materials during the summer.

Winter Harbor will be designed as a key station and will be much larger than the one on Ellesmere. The most northerly station will have six or seven technical men but at Winter Harbor there will be at least 16.

Officials here said there is no defence significance in the establishment of either the two weather stations to be erected this year or the seven others to be located later on at other sites to be selected in the Arctic. They ridiculed the suggestion that one of the jobs of these stations would be to watch the enemy bombers coming over the top of the world.

Canada already has three weather stations above the Arctic Circle — at Arctic Bay near the top of Baffin Island, Coppermine on the north shore of the mainland on Coronation Gulf and at Aklavik at the mouth of the Mackenzie River.

The new stations will exchange weather information with similar stations maintained by Russia in the Arctic and the entire top of the earth will be covered when the remaining seven stations are in operation.

Barbed wire fences clogged highways, further impeding travel.

Eyewitness accounts today said the tornado first hit White Deer, Tex., about 5:45 p.m. yesterday, lifted a house from its foundations, wrecked a garage and derailed 21 cars of a moving Santa Fe freight train.

Coburn, a railroad switching station, was reported razed. The tornado struck Higgins, moved into Oklahoma, and smashed into Woodward and Gage.

John Bittle, 40, of Mounds, Okla., visiting White Deer, said the house in which he was staying began to "quake and crawl."

Floor Moved Up

"Everything started to fall on us and the floor moved up. My wife fell across me and I fell to the floor. The buffet had her pinned over me."

A large circular mirror in a dresser was unbroken. The remainder of the house was a mass of rubble, with debris and broken furniture in every room. Damage was estimated by the home's owner at $20,000.

Woodward's mortuaries were packed with the bodies of the tornado's victims.

Great Industrial Leader

Henry Ford the farm boy from Michigan who lived to become one of the most famous men of the earth, one of the greatest industrial builders mankind has ever known, is dead after a life of intense activity. Through his ideas, inventions, and industry there grew up one of the greatest industrial empires in history in which he made a vast contribution to the lives of the American people and of the peoples of other countries, molding their way of living to a degree that only those who knew the more leisurely age of a generation or more ago can fully appreciate. To the last he was tireless and energetic in action and in outlook, possessing all the qualities and interests which made his life so successful.

He was the last of a great triumvirate of inventors and builders of industrial empires, the others being Thomas Alva Edison, the centenary of whose birth was observed a few weeks ago, and Harvey Firestone. He did more in industry possibly than any other man to place the United States in its present position as the greatest of the industrial nations in the world. As a boy he knew the less rapid world but he was never idle in mind or body and he came to see the tempo of life stepped up with the progress of American industrial development to which he contributed so much by his own great achievements. Through his inventive genius, his rare gifts for business and his confidence of his success he was able by the impetus and inspiration he gave to the United States to help his own country and the rest of the world to advance by swift strides in transportation, swifter than ever were achieved in previous history. In this he made a contribution to the comfort, advancement and betterment of the people of not only his own country but others which felt the impact of American industrial progress. What the world would have been without this genius in the mercantile and manufacturing world can only be imagined.

He came upon the scene at the destined time in history. He knew opportunity and opened up an age of wider opportunity. He was the man to build up at home a mighty industry and his leadership was caught by others to bring about the present great age of industrial progress and manifold inventions for man's comfort. He has influenced the lives of countless numbers of people. He was the founder of mass production, which has given work to great numbers and means of leisure and enjoyment to millions.

Henry Ford was a proof of the fact that in life there is a way of success for those who have the will to succeed, who have energy, imagination, vision and faith in themselves and others to lead them to the ideal for which they strive. He had these assets and he used them well. In a little shop he began the development of that life which has been so successful. Others might have thought that he was wasting time, but he had inspiration and there he was building his life which was to leave a marked effect upon the world. Knowing the value of talents and the supreme importance of their use he was able to help others give their best in their labors and to their success.

One of the striking points in his life is shown in his love for the soil, on which he had his start in life. His foundation of Greenwich Village in which he gathered with great care and enthusiasm relics of the earlier days he had known and of even the earliest settlements in the United States proves the business man, the inventor loved the simple things on which life is built, the things that mean so much in the early life of a people. Here he was the idealist, the lover of his country, her people, their faith and the deeply laid foundations of liberty and its development.

He was particularly interested in the progress of the sciences from the standpoint of the betterment of the conditions of the people.

By his preeminence and his success he was able to become the benefactor of many. Like all men who have stature by their merits and achievements he was able to improve the conditions of the people in a very real way. In his success he was able to benefit large numbers of people in his employ as well as the industrial life of his country, his career being reflected in the lives of many with whom he worked and in the United States which has advanced so rapidly in the present age.

Palestine Mandate

Britain has formally requested that the Palestine problem be placed on the agenda of the General Assembly of the United Nations for its regular meeting in September and suggested that a special session be called at the earliest possible date to set up a special commission to study and report on the problem in September.

The argument is that if the problem is not preliminarily studied before September meeting, a decision could hardly be reached during the autumn session, and it is expected that several months' time could be saved by the preliminary study and report.

Before lodging its request to have the question placed on the agenda, the United Kingdom Government had approached the governments of the United States, Russia, France and China to ascertain their views on the proposal to form a special session. All four Great Powers have replied affirmatively. The next step has been taken, for notification of all the fifty-five members of the United Nations asking whether they concur. If concurrence of 28 members is expressed ,as is expected, then a special Assembly will be called to meet within fifteen days of the receipt of the favorable replies. It is possible such a meeting will take place towards the end of April.

Britain will give an historical account of the British discharge of the mandate and indicate the series of attempts made to find a settlement agreeable to the Arabs and Jews alike.

The dilemma with which the mandatory is faced in Palestine and which is posed by the irreconcilable claims of Arabs and Jews was not forseen when the mandate was instituted 25 years ago and the mandate made no provision for solving it.

The United Kingdom could only cut the gordian knot unilaterally by use of force, but the Government is resolved not to impose a solution by force. Reference to the United Nations has seemed the obvious and proper course. It is a function of the United Nations to replace forceful solutions by agreements negotiated within its framework. The United Kingdom Government is confident that in submitting the problem to the United Nations Assembly it is not only adopting the method most appropriate to the present case, but is helping to build up a tradition of referring difficult international problems to the United Nations.

Taken From the Dead

When British agents explored the home of Frau Rudolf Hoess in Hamburg, Germany, they found the house filled with fine clothes and rich jewels that had been taken from Jewish men and women, who had been executed at the command of her husband. The husband has been sentenced to death by a court in Warsaw.

That discovery of the clothes and jewels in the Hoess home is further proof of what everyone knew about the Nazi racket. Whenever the Nazis wanted anything, they would find someone who had it, condemn him or her to death and after the execution the Nazis would make off with the clothing, jewelry and whatever else was valuable.

Sheer robbery and murder were part and parcel of the Nazi racket. The victims had no protection whatever against Hitler's thugs. Although those put to death were not always Jewish, the Jews were frequently selected, because they had always been the whipping boys of the Nazi regime.

Worst of all is the knowledge that there are still Nazis in Germany, still a bunch of racketeers who are in hiding, but just waiting to pounce forth and start all over again.

HOME ENDURING

When the architect is done,
Says: "The dwelling is completed.
Walls can brave the summer sun
And the winter undefeated,"
Does he mean that wall and roof
Have been fashioned anger proof?

Can they shelter love and pride
'Gainst the inner storms that sweep them?
When the walls are trouble-tried,
Safe will those within it keep them?
There, will everything seem right
When the doors are shut at night?

"Weather-proof!" the builders say,
Selfish-proof will make it stronger.
Love of home, let come what may,
Will insure the dwelling longer.
Houses sell at prices quoted.
Homes are kept by hearts devoted.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

April 10th., 1927.

The Loblaw Groceteria will open for business here in the near future.

The Rev. Rural Dean J. H. H. Coleman, Vicar of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Napanee, has been appointed rector of St. Paul's Church, Kingston, to succeed the late Rev. Canon Fitzgerald. St. Paul's Church was built by the Rev. R. D. Cartwright, father of Sir Richard Cartwright.

Mr. Thomas Naylor of Deseronto was in town today.

Inspector F. J. Naphan of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. James Booty has left for his home at Parkland, Alberta, after visiting his sister, Mrs. Robert Goudy, Foster Avenue.

30 YEARS AGO

April 10th., 1917.

At the annual meeting of the vestry of Christ Church the financial report showed an income during the year of $5,000 with all current liabilities paid and a balance in the bank. The rector, the Rev. Dr. Blagrave, appointed O. H. Scott as his warden and the vestry elected the following officers: People's Warden, F. O. Diamond; Sidesmen, George Turner, George Thompson, William Chrysler, Ritchie Thompson, J. L. Simpson, Bruce Bottum, William Harden and Bert Boyce. Select Vestry, Walter Alford, John Newton, J. L. Tickel, H. Mouck, J. H. Reid, Charles McMullen, Thomas Marshall, F. W. Millard, F. Palos, A. Symons, Geo. Kerr, H. Sneyd, John Downey, A. Elliott, E. T. Cherry, G. B. Smith, R. A. Backus, F. S. Kent, J. B. Ives, J. C. Waddell, F. G. Mills and John Christie; Vestry Clerk, Frank Thompson; Delegates to the Synod, Walter Alford, John Newton and G. B. Smith.

40 YEARS AGO

April 10th., 1907.

Mr. Thomas Haslip went to Toronto today.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Miller of Montreal are the guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Woodley, Murney Street.

A large number of new books will be placed upon the shelves at the public library tomorrow. A treat is in store for readers.

The lack of small houses is beginning to be severely felt in this city. Citizens with money might find worse investment for their funds than in building a class of houses that would rent at $5 to $7 per month. Such dwellings are greatly needed now and will be needed more so in the future.

On Tuesday last in the Ontario Legislature the sum of $400 was ordered to be paid to the Misses Elizabeth and Mary Ann O'Carroll of this city and thereby hangs an interesting tale. Their father, who was a store keeper in Belleville, supplied the Imperial troops in the Rebellion of 1837, thereby incurring the enmity of "rebel" sympathizers. He suffered loss to his stock in a riot and the grant is to make compensation to his daughters after a lapse of seventy years.

50 YEARS AGO

April 10th., 1897.

The market this morning was largely attended and well supplied with produce. Butter sold at 15 cents to 18 cents per pound; eggs 7 cents to 9 cents per dozen; chickens 40 cents to 65 cents per pair; potatoes 45 cents to 50 cents per bag.

Mr. James H. Mills went to Madoc today.

Mr. and Mrs. John Williams, Charles Street, spent the last weekend with friends in Stirling.

Captain R. Lambton Sewell has returned home from Quebec City.

Mr. Hugh Walker of this city has received the degree of M.D.C.M. from Queen's University, Kingston. We extend our congratulations.

Mr. J. Earl Halliwell, barrister, of Stirling, was in town today.

Mr. Jacob Rathbun, mate on the Steamer Varuna, was in town today. He says that the Varuna will make her first trip of the season next Thursday.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Did the United States conquer or buy the Phillipines?

Whether the United States purchased the Philippines from Spain or conquered them is still a disputed question.

On May 1, 1898, Admiral George Dewey's Asiatic squadron entered Manila Bay and destroyed eight Spanish warships, without the loss of one of his own men, and on August 12 of the same year General Wesley Merritt with his joint American and Philippine forces captured Manila. The three-year Philippine insurrection headed by Aquinaldo cost the United States more men and money than did the Spanish-American War itself.

At the close of that war Spain signed a treaty at Paris in which she ceded the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Guam to the United States outright.

In the same treaty the United States agreed to give Spain $20,000,000.

This sum was in the nature of reimbursement to Spain for certain public improvements and obligations incurred rather than the purchase price. Later the United States gave Spain $100,000 to clear up the title to the islands of Cagayan and Sibutu, which lay outside the Philippines as defined in the treaty and which the United States had occupied.

In effect the United States took possession of the Philippines, Guam and Puerto Rico by military and naval force and then gave Spain a gratuity of $100,000.

Between 1898 and 1946, when the independent Republic of the Philippines was established, natives of the Philippines were regarded as "nationals" but not citizens of the United States. They were ineligible to naturalization in the United States unless they had served in the United States armed forces, and natives of the Philippines living in the United States were exempted from military conscription.

Business Leaders More Optimistic Than Economists

New York, April 10 (AP) — Most economists who talk on the subject expect that the current business boom in the United States will have a set-back by mid-year.

The period to follow can be a healthful readjustment, a recession or a depression. A recession could be mild or severe, brief or prolonged.

With prospects good for at least three more months of the present boom, few economists are discussing a depression as such.

Some say no recession is necessary if a direct attack on high prices is made now. The present high price level is one of the chief concerns of all economists.

President Truman has called on industry to co-operate in reducing prices, saying he hoped it would not go "whole hog for profits."

Business Optimistic

Business leaders in general are more optimistic than the economists. F. D. Newbury, Vice President of Westinghouse Electric, says 1947 will continue to be a big year in business and that we may expect only "a mild recession in 1948 extending possibly into 1949, but no serious or prolonged depression before the late 1950's."

Following is a summary of the views of some of the economists who have been studying the problem, as expressed to The Associated Press:

Lewis Schellbach, chief economist of Standard and Poor's Corporation, a leading statistical, research and advisory firm—the secondary quarter of 1947 is likely to be remembered "as the beginning of the most widely-advertised recession on record."

Leo Cherne, executive secretary of the Research Institute of America, serving business, government and educational institutions—"There will be few apparent changes in the business picture during this second quarter. But the portents of the coming difficulties will come into full and public view."

Labor Sees Prices Break

Boris Shishkin, chief economist for the American Federation of Labor—in a few major lines there will be a reversal of price trends. A break is imminent in a matter of weeks, perhaps even less. "I think that slump will be short and sharp. There are many counter-movements, and the situation will be self-correcting."

Stanley Ruttenberg, chief economist for the C.I.O.—"....wages will go up and prices will come down. In other words, there will be another round of wage increases but there will not be another round of price increases. We foresee nothing happening this year to change the level of employment greatly."

(A spot survey highlighting business conditions across the United States will be presented in the third and last article of this series tomorrow.)

Eric Strangroom, 42, Of Labor Department Acted in Many Plays

Ottawa, April 10 (CP)—Eric Strangroom, 42-year-old special assistant to the Deputy Minister of Labor and a well-known figure in Ontario drama circles, died suddenly in his apartment home last night. He had been in ill-health for some time but had been active until yesterday.

He was one of the principal contributors to the writing of Canada's Unemployment Insurance Act and formerly was chief inspector of insurance with the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

A native of Durham, England, he came to Canada in the early 1920's and resided in Toronto and later in Hamilton, where he was instrumental in formation of the attic theatre group while in the service of the Dominion Bank. He came to Ottawa in 1933 and became a director of the Ottawa Drama League, acting in many plays as well as producing, directing nd adjudicating.

THE DRIP OF A LEAKING HEART (2).

Such valvular insufficiency is compensated by enlargement of the heart—the ventricle increases in capacity and the heart muscle increases in size and strength, so that a larger volume of blood is pumped at each contraction of the heart and it is pumped with greater force. Pumping a larger volume of blood at a beat the amount pumped out into the circulation remains equal to what it was before the valve became insufficient — despite the amount of blood that flows back into the auricle at each beat.

Murmur is the medical term for the low blowing or humming sound heard when such backflow of blood occurs thru a damaged valve. But valvular trouble is by no means the only condition that may produce such a sound. In fact a murmur is as likely to be due to anemia or other functional or minor cause as it is to be due to valvular trouble—the more so the louder or more striking the murmur.

The symptoms? No, son, I'm the doctor, remember? Or at any rate I represent the doctor here. You tell your doctor the symptoms. That's the best plan, I assure you. How do you know what to tell the doctor? Well, you surely know how you feel and what you want to complain about. If you feel o.k. and have nothing to complain about, then it is still easier—just tell the doctor you want a complete physical examination, such as every one should have periodically.

Treatment of valvular insufficiency embraces not just rest or walking on eggs or avoiding effort or strain. It consists of physiological rest while or until fair compensation is acquired—usually several weeks after the acute endocarditis is over. Then a period of some months of graduated exercise—and only the physician who knows the condition of the patient's heart can prescribe the right amount of exercise; perhaps, at least in the practice of most good doctors, medication with digitalis (I, Brady, have a peculiar notion that digitalis is of no value in the treatment of heart failure or decompensation of any kind — but as I say, the great majority of real doctors believe digitalis is of indispensable use in such cases; and fourth, from the very first and every day the year around, whether the patient receives digitalis or other medication or hot, an optimal ration of vitamin B complex to supplement the ordinary vitamin-poor American diet. Optimal means, say, three or four times as much B complex as the nutrition authorities consider essential to maintain good nutrition.

It is impossible to describe valvular insufficiency in greater detail in the space available—You may find the description in the booklet CVD more comprehensible — for copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Dry Eyes

My eyes seem to be drying out. They burn so much I'm in constant discomfort. Have Ben Told Iodine causes it — I take your Iodin Ration, which I think has given me wonderful pep.

(Mrs. F. W.)

Answer — That's as likely as most of Ben's notions. Vitamin A deficiency frequently causes such trouble. Other manifestations of A deficiency are night-blindness (difficulty in seeing your way about in a darkened place) and perhaps impairment of sight; dryness of skin and nutmeg grater roughness of skin or "fish-skin" or "alligator hide."

One-Horse Sense

My baby's doctor says you have a lot of horse sense. He thoroughly agrees with you on the subject of CRI.

(Mrs. G. S.)

Answer — Yabut I bet a complete set of the works of Ol' Doc Brady against a pipeful of good tobacco or a stick of candy that your baby doctor does not agree with my teaching that exposure to cold or wet never causes any illness. Freezing, frostbite, chilblains, chapping, yes. But never anw illness, immediately or "some day."

The Wheat Market

Special Delivery: Dear Doc: you recommend raw wheat as a vitamin source. If the market goes much higher, can we afford it?

(Signed) Dad Dearborn.

No, Dad, not if you insist on having it delivered in pretty packages. I advise buying wheat by the peck — or if the farmer, feedstore clerk or market stall tender doesn't know what that means, by the bushel or pound. Wash it in running water, and it is ready to chew. If your teeth tre so far gone you can't chew plain wheat, then crack or grird it in the coffee grinder and cook it a little if you must. Send a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for pamphlet Wheat To Eat — it tells many ways to use wheat in the everyday dietary.

Favor 'Good Old Party System'

Seaforth, April 10 (CP) — Finance Minister Douglass Abbott said here last night he favored "the good old two-party system" and would like to see it again in force.

The Liberal party did not have an overwhelming majority in the House, he said, but the opposition was divided among various parties.

Mr. Abbott, who was speaking before the Huron-Perth Liberal Association urged that young people take an interest in the party. "People who work hard at the polls are just as important as the member of parliament," he said.

LONG LINEUP FOR RENTAL FORMS

Toronto, April 10 —(CP)— Landlords seeking the special forms they have to fill out if they want to raise the rent have been standing in a line-up at local offices of the Prices Board for the past two days. At the close of business yesterday officials estimated 33,000 forms had been distributed.

MUSKRAT FAVORITE ON BANQUET MENU

Leamington, April 10 —(CP)— The most popular item on spring banquet menus in Leamington is muskrat — that's right — muskrat. For 30 days each spring mu[illegible] citizens trap muskrats, but this year it's not only the skins which are in demand.

HATS THAT LED IN THE EASTER PARADE

The weather man was not too kind to paraders on Easter Sunday, but way up in front were the hats that came from Woodley's. And no wonder, as where else could be seen such a grand assortment of hats in every style and price. Woodley's invites those who have not yet chosen their new hat to visit the Millinery Department while the choice is large.

WEDDINGS

LIGHTFOOT—DAWE

Picton, (Special.)—A wedding of considerable interest took place Sunday afternoon, April 6, at the United Church parsonage, when Rev. A. E. McCutcheon united in marriage, Lillian Dawe, Reg.N., younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Dawe, Queen Street, and Robert Lightfoot, of Picton.

The attendants were Miss Dorothy Thurston and Mr. Norman Lightfoot.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Lightfoot left for a trip to Toronto and other Western cities.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Lightfoot will reside in Picton.

BROAD—CHAMBERLAIN

Melville. (Special.)—The parsonage of Holloway Street United Church, Belleville, was the scene at noon hour, April 5th., of a quiet, but very pretty wedding, when Ethel Geraldine Chamberlain, youngest daughter of Mr. Frank Benway and the late Mrs. Benway ,of Hillier, became the bride of Harper Ranson Broad, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Broad, of Madoc, with Rev. C. A. Perkins officiating.

The bride was very attractive in a street length dress of heavenly blue crepe, sequin trimmed, matching hat and accessories, and wearing a corsage of red Sunset roses.

Following the ceremony luncheon was enjoyed.

For a train trip to Toronto, the bride chose a dress of flowered silk jersey, with a blue top coat and matching accessories. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Board will take up residence at Pleasant Bay.

Guests present included Mr. and Mrs. J. Root, Melville, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. George Benway and Ronald, of Doxsee's; Mr. and Mrs. B. Broad and Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Beer, of Belleville.

Rebekah Lodge Instituted With 23 Members

Mrs. J. F. Charlton, P.N.G., Quintena Rebekah Lodge, Belleville, attended the institution of Ivy Leaf Rebekah Lodge No. 335, Parham, Ont., and assisted in the institution on April 4th.

A banquet was served at eight o'clock, p.m., and Louise Lodge No. 10, of Kingston, conferred the degree on twenty-three members which was beautifully exemplified.

Addresses were given by Sister Fletcher, president of the Assembly, Sister Edith Hall, Kingston P.P., of Assembly, Sister Violet Pearce, Secretary of the Assembly, Sister Timms, D.D.P. of Kingston District, who in turn gave interesting messages and wished the new lodge every success.

Visiting sisters and brothers were present from Toronto, Guelph, Hamilton, Belleville, Napanee, Odessa, Yarker and Kingston, Ont.

WOMEN PAY BIG PRICE FOR POOR "BLOOD MAKE UP"

You women who feel and look "washed out"—limp and droopy—may be paying the price of hemoglobin shortage in the blood.

Nature's regular monthly demands on a woman's system often tend to bring about this shortage of the vital red coloring matter in the red blood cells. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

They help increase hemoglobin where there is a shortage of it due to iron deficiency and help chase away that "leaden" feeling of tiredness so often due to this condition. Start your course of Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. Ask your druggist.
